HOUSE PASSES ROOSEVELT BILL FOR ECONOMIES

Vote 266-138; G.O.P. Saves Measure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—The decision as to whether President Roosevelt is to be accorded dictatorial powers to balance the budget through slashing veterans' costs and federal pay rolls was squarely up to the senate tonight.

Brushing aside the powerful veterans' lobby, a combined Democratic-Republican leadership swept the Roosevelt half billion dollar economy bill through the house today and shot it to the senate, where debate begins Monday. The vote on the measure was 266 to 138. It authorizes a 400 million cut in veterans' funds and increased federal pay cuts which may net a hundred million dollars more. The maximum pay cuts would be 15 per cent.

Shiny Machine Almost Wrecked.

The smashing victory won by the Democratic administration in the fight to broaden the powers of the Roosevelt fiscal dictatorship all but wrecked the shiny new machine assembled yesterday by Speaker Henry T. Rainey and Majority Leader Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee.

Angered by the steamroller methods employed by the Democratic leadership and the attacks on the veterans' fund, ninety-two Democrats, many of them members of the original house bonus bloc, revolted from the Roosevelt leadership, kicked over the Rainey machine at a party caucus, and rejected White House pleas for united support back of the bill.

With their machine out of gear, at least temporarily, the Rainey-Byrns combination turned to the Republicans for support and got it in votes and oratory. The final ballot showed 197 Democrats and sixty-nine Republicans supporting the Roosevelt program. Those voting against the measure included ninety-two Democrats, 41 Republicans and 5 Farmer-Laborites.

Threats of Catastrophe.

It was the threats of national catastrophe and the pleas of Democratic and Republican leaders for united support of the President in the current financial crisis that turned the tide of battle finally in favor of the economy bill. Sponsors of the measure asserted its passage was mandatory if the United States was to balance the budget, save its national credit, fund its billions of obligations soon callable, and avert financial ruin.

A dislike on the part of many veterans' advocates of having their names broadcast as among those refusing to support the President in time of national emergency also played a major part in the outcome of the battle.

Today's tumultuous battle saw the Roosevelt forces emerge victorious from their first tussle with the ultrapowerful lobby maintained by the American Legion and other veterans' organizations. It also climaxed a day during which tempers were frayed at both ends of the capital as veterans' organizations carried the battle by telegram and by person to the very doors of congressional chambers.

Center Attack on Senate.

Tonight the American Legion lobby and groups representing federal employés and other veterans organizations had centered their attack on the senate in an attempt to block passage of the measure there when it comes up Monday. Commencement of the debate upon the measure is expected to mark another legislative fight such as heretofore resulted in the defeat of virtually every effort to curtail veterans' benefits and to increase cuts in federal pay.

Senate Republican leaders announced tonight that on Monday they will meet in conference in an effort to drum up as much support as possible back of a Democratic majority already shot through with dissension on the issue of allowing Mr. Roosevelt carte blanche powers to slash the billion dollar veterans' fund. Democratic leaders also will confer, but it seemed unlikely any attempt would be made to bind the membership to vote en bloc.

Immediately after the Robinson bill embracing the Roosevelt economy recommendations was reported to the senate, Chairman Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.] predicted that the senate will duplicate house action and give the President the powers he asks. The veterans of the senate, led by Senator Arthur Robinson [Rep., Ind.] and probably aided by Senator Huey Long,

ROBBED IN LOBBY OF HOSPITAL AS HIS BROTHER DIES

While awaiting momentarily the death of his brother—a victim of bandit bullets—Robert Garnitz of South Bend was held up by other robbers yesterday in the foyer of the Evangelical hospital, 5421 South Morgan street.

The wounded brother, Dr. Bernard F. Garnitz, 39 years old, of 5159 South Damen avenue, died a few minutes later. He was shot on the night of Feb. 24 by one of two bandits who had lured him by a fake emergency call to in front of 4344 South Artesian avenue. He was then taken to the Evangelical hospital, of which he was a staff member.

Yesterday when Dr. Garnitz's condition became critical his brother was summoned from South Bend. As he waited in the hospital lobby, three masked bandits entered. They menaced the office staff, getting $300, and then robbed Garnitz of $25 and a watch. This experience with bandits was followed shortly afterward by the death of his doctor brother.

Dr. Garnitz is survived by his widow, May, and two children, Howard and Lucille. He will be buried in Jewish Waldheim cemetery tomorrow, following services at 1 p. m. at 3125 Roosevelt road.

FOUND TIED AND BEATEN TO DEATH IN AUTOMOBILE

An unidentified man, evidently strangled and beaten to death, was found tied in the rumble seat of an automobile in the alley in the rear of 5916 North Western avenue early this morning. Lieut. John L. Sullivan of the Summerdale station said the murder was probably a gang affair.

The discovery of the body was made by two young men, Howard Veretto, 3849 Ferdinand street, and Chester Clark, 2500 North Artesian avenue, cousins, and employés of the Northwestern Boiler Repair company, 5910 North Western avenue. About to drive their car in the garage at 5916 Western avenue, they found their way blocked by a licenseless coupe. Examining the machine more closely, they saw the murder victim.

The man, between 25 and 30 years old, was tied almost in a knot. The thongs cut into his ankles, knees, and wrists and around his neck. One side of his head was crushed.

Chicago Building Crashes, but It's No Earthquake

A vacant three story brick building at 854 Gilpin place collapsed last night. The crash aroused the entire neighborhood and jarred many residents in nearby Hill house. Although bricks were scattered in the crash, no one was injured. The building was erected fifty-one years ago.

Hoarders Give Up 23 Million in Gold Here

Nine million dollars in gold and United States gold certificates poured into the coffers of the Chicago Federal Reserve bank yesterday. In the six days since the secretary of the treasury issued his order against hoarding $23,000,000 in gold has been turned in to the Chicago reserve bank, officials announced.

Dispatches from New York said that approximately $100,000,000, almost equal to the entire amount withdrawn from the federal reserve system in the two days before the banking holiday began, had been returned during the week.

Deadline Is Tomorrow.

Tomorrow is the deadline for bringing in all gold withdrawn before the holiday, after which the names of persons still hoarding the metal will be turned over to the secretary of the treasury. This fact was believed responsible for yesterday's rush. Extra tellers had to be employed at the federal reserve bank, 230 South La Salle street, and at the bank's currency exchange, 126 South La Salle street. Extra police were required to maintain order, and for the first time since the holiday the reserve bank opened the La Salle street gates when the crush became too much for the Jackson boulevard entrance.

The hoarders came in limousines with chauffeurs and on street cars. There were aged women in shawls, clutching single $5 gold pieces, and there was one individual, whose identity was not disclosed, with $200,000 in gold. The fear of being caught hoarding reached such proportions that many persons brought in jewelry and one woman offered the Continental Illinois National bank her gold bridge work. These persons were told to keep the precious metal, but a man with a large quantity of English sovereigns was told to bring them in, to be accepted on a weight basis.

Gives Up Wedding Gold.

Tellers at reserve banks expressed compassion for a young gypsy who wanted some pieces of gold, but they could not help him. He was to be married last night and Romany ritual required that he give his bride the gold pieces.

The hoarders, according to tellers and bank guards, were in the main cheerful, declaring that they were glad to bring in the gold as a patriotic duty. Many of them remarked that President Roosevelt is "doing a great job" of handling the financial crisis.

Twenty-three million dollars in gold weighs approximately 23 tons, and if all the 23 millions were in gold coin it would make a stack 12 inches high and wide and 38 feet long. It would make a solid cube 40½ inches to a side.

The $9,000,000 received by the reserve bank yesterday represented exchanges made by 6,800 individuals, firms and member banks. The $23,000,000 represented exchanges by 28,000 firms, banks, and individuals. The total did not include gold exchanged at the big loop banks yesterday, which was estimated at more than $1,000,000. The Continental received $175,000, the Northern Trust more than $200,000, and the Harris Trust and Savings bank more than $130,000.

SIX HARD WORKING OFFICIALS DISCOVER THAT ECONOMY PAYS

As an economy measure the officers of the Ridgemoor Building and Loan association, 5774 Lawrence avenue, decided recently that the work of redecorating the offices should be done by themselves. Yesterday the six officials, all dressed in overalls, were hard at work when four robbers entered. They ordered the "workmen" to open the office safe.

"We only work here," replied Joseph Kowaczek, 5776 Lawrence avenue, treasurer of the organization. "We don't know anything about the safe."

"It must have been a bum steer we got," said one of the robbers as the four left the office.

PRESIDENT SETS THREE DAYS FOR OPENING DOORS

Talks to People by Radio Tonight.

President Talks Tonight

President Roosevelt, who said he was "glad to be able to announce" a solution of the technical difficulties in the way of reopening the banks, will broadcast a statement of what has been done to meet the financial crisis at 9 o'clock, Chicago time, tonight.

The President's talk will be broadcast over W-G-N and other Chicago stations.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt announced tonight that the banks of the country will be reopened progressively on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Only those national and state banks in the federal reserve system which receive licenses from the secretary of the treasury will be permitted to reopen. State banking authorities will determine which state banks outside of the federal reserve system shall be permitted to reopen.

Process of Reopening.

MONDAY.

National and state banks of the federal reserve system which are situated in the 12 federal reserve bank cities—Chicago, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Dallas, Cleveland, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, San Francisco, Richmond.

State banks outside of federal reserve systems situated in these cities in the discretion of state banking authorities.

TUESDAY.

Other reserve system banks and nonmember state banks situated in 250 other cities that have recognized clearing house associations.

WEDNESDAY.

Remaining reserve system banks and nonmember state banks in other communities.

The President also announced that he would explain the bank reopening program and all that has led up to it in a radio address to the people tomorrow night at 10 o'clock eastern standard time. His utterances will be broadcast over all national radio networks.

Reassures the Public.

In concluding his announcement of the revised program, Mr. Roosevelt cautioned against any inference that the banks reopening on Tuesday and Wednesday are any less sound than those permitted to resume on Monday. It was found physically impossible, he explained, to reopen all banks on Monday, because of the inability to distribute to all communities the new asset currency authorized by the emergency banking act.

Nearly all the reserve system banks that desire to reopen on Monday have filed their applications with the reserve banks in the 12 regional cities and the reserve banks have reported to the treasury those that are sound and fit to reopen. The treasury is approving the issuance of licenses to the approved banks as fast as they are received. The treasury declined to make public the list of banks licensed to open on Monday, stating that it will not be complete until the hour of opening.

To Bear Treasury O. K.

Member banks of the reserve system that reopen, whether on Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday, will do so with the imprimatur of the treasury that they are sound banks and capable of meeting all demands upon their resources. Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin said no banks would be licensed to reopen unless the treasury was convinced that they could remain open for unrestricted transaction of business.

The inference was being widely drawn today from the secretary's announcement that the government is in effect guaranteeing the soundness of the banks it licenses to reopen, giving what is tantamount to a guarantee of deposits.

State banking superintendents were

Larger Banks to Open Here Tomorrow

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Chicago banks that have satisfied the requirements of the secretary of the treasury will terminate an eight day holiday at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning and reopen for normal business transactions. All regular banking and trust company functions will be resumed.

The group that will reopen includes all the big loop banks and also a number of smaller institutions which may get authorization.

Orders received at the federal reserve bank here last night from the treasury in Washington included all Chicago national banks and state banks belonging to the federal reserve system in the list of banks that may reopen tomorrow. No institution is to reopen, however, unless its application has been favorably acted upon by the treasury.

Action by State Today.

State banks not affiliated with the reserve system also may open, provided they receive the permission of State Auditor Edward J. Barrett. The auditor announced that he would issue a set of instructions for state banks this afternoon. He conferred for several hours here yesterday with Gov. Horner and Attorney General Otto Kerner. At the end of the conference Gov. Horner departed for Springfield.

Under the terms of the governor's state holiday proclamation state banks may restrict withdrawals for Monday and Tuesday to five per cent of deposits.

Last night's order from the treasury means that Chicago, after having got along almost entirely without banking facilities for eight days, will again have open banks and will be able to cash checks and make deposits.

The complete list of Chicago banks to be permitted to reopen tomorrow will not be published until tomorrow morning. In this way, it is stated, the treasury seeks to avoid doing injustice to banks whose names are not yet on the approved list because their applications have not yet been fully considered.

Throughout the night and until an early hour this morning officials of the clearing house and federal reserve bank executives were working out detailed preparations for lifting at least a part of the holiday restrictions on the financial institutions of the middle west.

Consider Reserve Memberships.

The sessions were held in the offices of the federal reserve bank at Jackson and La Salle streets. A large part of the labor consisted of examining the detailed condition reports of seventeen state banks which have applied during the last two days for membership in the federal reserve system.

Recommendations on these new reserve memberships are being sent to Washington where they may be acted upon formally by the federal reserve board before tomorrow morning. Present at the midnight session were Eugene M. Stevens, chairman; James Simpson, director, and Charles R. McKay, deputy governor of the Federal

5,000 INJURED IN CALIFORNIA TEMBLOR ZONE

Aid Marshaled for Stricken Area.

BULLETIN.

Long Beach, Cal., March 12.—(AP)—(Sunday.)—Starting off the third day of earth tremblings another sharp shock was felt here at 1 a. m. today (3 a. m. Chicago time). It was the fifth of the night.

BULLETIN.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—The thirty-first big shock of the earthquake series, a severe north and south movement, struck Los Angeles at 10:18 p. m. (12:18 a. m. Chicago time, Sunday).

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—Southern California, still rocked at intervals by recurring earthquake shocks, tonight was counting the damage done from the terrific temblors of Friday, rendering aid to the stricken and planning for the future.

Of 152 southern California cities and towns in the quake zone 29 suffered severe damage and 23 lesser damage, a survey revealed.

The list of dead stands at 133. That many bodies have been recovered. Property damage from the earthquake was conservatively placed at more than $50,000,000. The total of injured exceeds 5,000, of whom 1,000 were so seriously hurt that they still are under treatment.

City Lies in Ruins.

Long Beach, a prosperous city of 140,000 on Friday, lies in ruins. Seventy-five per cent of its buildings were wrecked by the earth tremors. At least 25 per cent, it is believed, are a total loss. Not less than $25,000,000, it is estimated, will be needed to restore the city. There are 64 known dead.

In ruins, too, are the smaller towns of Compton and Huntington Park, which together accounted for 30 deaths and property damage of perhaps $17,500,000.

Deaths by Communities.

The death list, as revised, is:

Long Beach	64	Garden Grove	1
Compton	16	Artesia	1
Huntington Park	14	Wilmington	1
Los Angeles	11	Hermosa Beach	1
Watts	5	Walnut Park	1
Bellflower	3	South Gate	1
Santa Ana	3	Downey	1
Santa Monica	3	Los Alamitos	1
Norwalk	2	Pacoima	1
Montebello	2	San Pedro	1

Although the quake area covered 6,000 square miles, from Santa Barbara—scene of a destructive earthquake in 1925—to San Diego and extending thirty miles inland, all but a small amount of the damage was suffered in Los Angeles and the suburban towns to the south and southeast.

Center Near Long Beach.

The epicenter of the quake undoubtedly was in the Santa Catalina channel near Long Beach and San Pedro, and the section that was severely racked by the temblors lies within twenty-five miles of the coast. So far there have been a total of twenty-three major temblors and scores of lesser force. Those coming today were of diminished force.

They have, however, proved a disturbing element in the relief work. Their recurrence has rendered the populace nervous and fearful. Many still refuse to go indoors, preferring to take their chances in the open. Others are sleeping tonight in one story buildings, which have come through better than taller structures, and keeping the doors ajar so they can flee on a moment's notice. Deaths from heart disease are reported frequently.

Fleet Aids in Relief.

Nevertheless heroic efforts have been made and are still being made toward relief by the authorities, aided by National Guardsmen, soldiers of the regular army, and several thousand sailors and marines from the United States fleet that was stationed in San Pedro bay when the first and most violent shock started at 5:53 p. m. yesterday.

More than 300 physicians whose services could be spared by Los Angeles, where the damage was much less severe than in the suburbs, were sent to the towns nearer the coast. Of these 200 hastened to Long Beach, carrying with them 1,000 cots and 1,500 blankets.

Trucks hauled food enough to furnish 90,000 meals to the same city. Supply stations were opened in the Oceanside Bixby park and in vacant lots nourishment and medical aid were given all who applied for them.

Physicians went also to Huntington Park, South Gate, Compton and Watts, taking with them supplies of milk and bakery goods. From both Los Angeles and San Francisco medical supplies were sent by plane to the most affected areas. Where necessary, tank trucks transported water to those towns whose mains were destroyed by the earthquake.

While the doctors gave help to the living the soldiers, sailors and marines, aided by American Legionnaires, patrolled the ruined cities, dug through the débris of twisted buildings and carried out the bodies of the dead. They maintained order, too, so efficiently that there have been no complaints of looting or thievery, although many residents of Long Beach and Compton have their personal belongings piled in the streets.

More Cornices Loosened.

The guards have, it is said, prevented many further injuries by forcing passersby to avoid the immediate vicinity of buildings and to keep to the center of streets. The quakes of today, light as compared with those of yesterday, still are occasionally shaking down bricks and stone cornices.

A centralized control of all emergency measures was decreed by Gov. James Rolph Jr., who came here by plane today. He appointed Col. O. C. Wyman of the California National Guard to take over the direction of relief work and it is believed a comprehensive program would be decided on tonight. The Red Cross is already sending aid.

The state relief body will not be without funds, as the authorities have decided that a part of the $4,000,000 allotted the state by the Reconstruction Finance corporation recently will be available for use in behalf of the earthquake sufferers.

Plan to Seek Loans.

It was indicated that, as soon as the quakes cease and the immediate relief work has been disposed of, the authorities will apply to the federal government for reconstruction loans, that they may rebuild the torn cities.

Scenes that grip the heart with pity still prevailed today in Long Beach. Crowds, still dazed by their experiences of the night before, wandered through the streets, obeying without complaint the orders of the guards. Some wept as they gazed on the ruins of their homes and places of business. Others took their troubles stoically.

The armory, converted into a morgue, held the bodies of the victims. It was besieged by relatives of persons reported missing. Although strict orders have been enforced, keeping all but actual workers and residents out of Long Beach, a number of men and women evaded the commands by flying to the seaside city.

There were groups tonight in the parks, warming themselves by bonfires and accepting apathetically the food offered by the relief workers.

Buildings Are Surveyed.

A survey of the conditions of churches, public buildings, skyline seaside hotels, beach clubs, the taller apartment and business buildings was conducted in Long Beach by engineers and resulted in a report at midday that virtually every tall building was affected in some degree. The Pacific Coast club, erected on Ocean avenue at a cost of $1,300,000, was totally destroyed. The number of dead here was not exactly known. The pretentious First Christian church at Fifth and Locust streets was one of dozens of buildings condemned.

The famous Breakers hotel on Ocean boulevard was badly cracked. The four story home of the Long Beach Daily Press-Telegram was badly damaged, but possibly can be reconstructed, it was reported. The new Masonic headquarters in Long Beach, a tall structure; the Blackstone and Grand Pacific hotels all were badly rocked on their foundations and suffered from falling masonry. The Publib Library showed cracks and lost cornices. George Washington High school and the Board of Education building were both hard hit.

Speed Rebuilding Plans.

In contrast to the unhopeful attitude of the crowds in the parks was that of the Long Beach city council and the chamber of commerce. The council gave E. S. Dobbin, city manager, full power to do whatever he deemed necessary to better conditions. The chamber formed a rehabilitation committee to plan for the coöperative removal of débris.

"We hope to make this disaster a stepping stone to a more beautiful city," said Bruce Mason, president of the chamber. "We have already asked an architect to draw a comprehensive plan of reconstruction."

All authorities were warm in their praise for the conduct of the sailors from the fleet and the soldiers from Fort MacArthur. Naval electricians did particularly valuable work in hooking up broken power lines.

Compton Heavy Sufferer.

Next to Long Beach's disaster that of Compton was most severe. Nearly every building in its business district was hurled down. Most of the 17 killed were caught in the collapse of the Stockwell building, a two story structure housing a market on the first floor and dentists' and physicians' offices on the second.

Although 85,000 gallons of gasoline poured out of an overturned tank during the first temblor, it ran harmlessly into the gutters and there was no fire.

At Huntington Park, where eight lives were lost, it was said the city hall and the new Christian church were so severely damaged they would have to be entirely rebuilt. No suffering was reported among the residents. The deaths were due to falling bricks and stone in the business section.

Thousands Get Relief.

Of South Gate's 20,000 residents, 8,000 tonight were being cared for by relief organizations. At Lynwood, where the property damage was $1,000,000, the five largest buildings in town were destroyed.

In Los Angeles proper there was no further damage today, but the police as a precaution roped off several sections in the downtown section to prevent residents getting close enough to sustain injury if the later quakes should shake off cornices and roofs.

One restricted area was around the old county jail, and another around the old central police station. The Board of Trade building, the Cotton Exchange and the Central High school were all isolated as dangerous.

City Hall Is Closed.

The skyscraper city hall, although it stood firm during the shocks, suffered cracks in the walls and an order was issued to keep all municipal employes out of it until engineers could determine that it is safe beyond question.

Los Angeles was more fortunate than its stricken sister cities in that there was no interference with the city water supply other than the collapse of one emergency tank in the southwest section of the city and little or no damage to lighting and gas systems. The telephone utilities suffered most heavily, thousands of phones going out and service being conducted only under restrictions in the city limits with little or no general phone communications to the harbor communities.

A temporary school holiday for tens of thousands of pupils in portions of the earthquake zone was necessitated by the destruction of school edifices. The first survey covered high schools only, and this afternoon resulted in the following report by several boards of education in the area:

Huntington Park High school, totally destroyed by fire. George Washington High, 10860 Denker street, Los Angeles, badly damaged; extent undetermined. David Starr Jordan High school, 2265 East 103d street, damaged; extent undetermined.

Banning High school, 1500 Avalon boulevard, Wilmington, preliminary survey indicated damage as yet undetermined.

San Pedro High school, 1221 South Gaffey street, San Pedro, badly damaged. Bell High school, 4328 East Bell avenue, damaged.

Manual Arts High, 4131 South Vermont avenue, Los Angeles, English hall, senior hall, and boys and girls' gymnasium badly damaged. Thomas Edison Jr. High school, 6500 Hooper avenue, seriously damaged.

Canoga Park High school, 6580 Ponaga avenue, Canoga Park, main administration building destroyed by fire. Fremont High school, 7676 South San Pedro street, partial damage to walls. Long Beach Polytechnic High school, demolished.

Preliminary reports on grade and junior high schools indicated further extensive damage. A full survey will be made by board of education as a safety measure for the children.

DRY AGENTS SEIZE STILL.

Dry agents yesterday raided a house at 6417 South Kostner avenue, seized a still and arrested Bernard Gino, the owner.

Widow of Bandits' Victim Is Robbed Again; Faints

Mrs. Margaret Frankenhauser, whose husband, Paul, was shot and killed by bandits during a robbery in their bakery at 3438 Southport avenue on Jan. 12, was confronted by a gunman again last night. She surrendered $15, then fainted. Whether the robber was one of the two men who killed her husband could not be determined from the meager description she was able to give.

BUILDINGS FOLDED UP, SAYS QUAKE WITNESS, WHO FLEW TO CHICAGO

The first eyewitness of the California earthquake to reach Chicago landed at the Chicago airport last night via a United Air Lines plane, less than 24 hours after the catastrophe. He is Sol Casper, a Los Angeles city health inspector.

"We were about to have dinner at the time of the first temblors," he said. "I heard what appeared to be an explosion. Then our house shook. Plates slid off the table and fell from wall racks and china closets. The walls cracked.

"We all ran outside. Fire engines were rushing down the street. We could see big buildings tremble. Some smaller ones just folded up. Chimneys toppled down and bricks fell everywhere. A drug store two blocks away was shunted into the street. People ran for shelter, screaming."

Casper left the Alhambra airport at 9 p. m., with the earth still rumbling. He flew to Chicago to attend the funeral of his brother, Jack, 4845 Gladys avenue, a Surface lines adjuster.

QUAKE DAMAGES OLD IRONSIDES; BOAT HITS PIER

Long Beach, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—Conqueror in all her battles against visible foes, the historic frigate, Constitution, became one of the victims of unseen disaster from the depths, when she was damaged during the earthquake here. "Old Ironsides" had just been towed from San Pedro to her berth at the local docks, late yesterday afternoon, when the first acute tremor rocked the Long Beach docks, and caused her land crew to lose control.

The frigate crashed into the pier. Her railing on one side was stove in, several of the big 24-pounder cannon were displaced, and battered, but no seaman were hurt. The damage can be replaced without material trouble or expense, it is said.

CHEVALIER ACTS TO SAVE SWANS IN EARTHQUAKE

Hollywood, Cal., March. 11.—(AP)—Maurice Chevalier raced off a movie studio stage set with several swans last night when the first big earth shock struck.

The French actor had been recording a song beside a shallow garden pool in which there were several swans.

Marlene Dietrich was autographing a picture for a friend and her pen made an abrupt line off the picture when the quake started. She finished her signature and dated the picture as a souvenir.

Jack Oakie was in a studio legal department debating whether to sign a 50 per cent salary cut agreement. The building began to shake and the startled Oakie seized a pen and signed the agreement.

Carole Lombard was toppled off a fitting stand while trying on an unusually tight gown in a wardrobe department.

Stuart Erwin almost had a traffic argument because of the quake. He had been stopped at a corner by a traffic signal and the driver of a car directly ahead thought Erwin had hit his machine. He left his car and started toward Erwin but both suddenly realized what was happening.

Long Beach Police Chief Denies Reports of Looting

Long Beach, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—Reports arrests had been made for looting in the Long Beach area were denied today by Police Chief J. S. Yancey, who branded the reports as ridiculous. "Not one arrest for looting has been made," he said. "The city to date has been absolutely free of looters."

HEARS THE RADIO ANNOUNCE DEATH OF SON IN QUAKE

Mrs. Gertrude Firkins, 71 years old, sat before the radio yesterday in her home at Earlville, just south of Aurora, listening to news bulletins from the earthquake zone.

"Among the dead," she heard a voice announce, "is Dr. A. M. Firkins of Compton."

Mrs. Firkins fainted. Dr. Firkins was her son, Ashley M. Firkins, 47 years old, a dentist. He was graduated from a dental school in Chicago eighteen years ago. After practicing here for several years he moved to the west coast, where he had been since. Telgraphic communication with his widow revealed that Dr. Firkins was killed in the first quake, being trapped in his office in the Stockwell building in Compton.

Film Studios Loan Kleig Lights to Hunt Dead

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—The motion picture industry came to the aid of the terror stricken and darkened communities south of Los Angeles during the night by donating the use of their portable lighting plants. Bodies of many of the victims were found in the débris with the aid of the kleig lights. Early today 10 trucks of food and medical supplies were sent to Long Beach from Los Angeles to relieve suffering.

CHICAGO'S CALLS FOR QUAKE NEWS SWAMP WIRES

Special Tribune Staff Aids Relatives.

The anxiety of Chicago and the middle west for relatives and friends in the earthquake zone in California was evidenced yesterday in an overwhelming volume of inquiries which flooded telegraph and telephone wires.

THE TRIBUNE switchboard handled 15,000 queries for information from the time the news was first flashed over W-G-N Friday night up until last evening. Miss Anna Garrow, chief operator, estimated that more than 25,000 calls would be made by Sunday morning at the rate the calls were pouring in.

Heavy Load of Messages.

Western Union reported that 200 extra employés had been put to work to handle the heavy load of messages. Fifteen wires were receiving and sending 1,875 messages an hour. Sixty-four telephone operators were handling 800 to 900 messages received over the telephone each hour from Chicago, Oak Park, and Evanston alone.

Postal Telegraph announced that service to Long Beach had been resumed at 7 o'clock yesterday morning and that in the interim, while the wire lines were being repaired, 1,500 messages had been flown by airplane to Los Angeles. Motorcycle relays were also employed to carry messages.

Both wire services reported that they were meeting demands for money in the quake area, accepting orders not in excess of $100 each. They were replenishing their funds on the coast by shipping money there in airplanes.

Plane Traffic Heavy.

The Chicago air lines maintaining passenger service to California reported a number of reservations made by persons desirous of speeding to the scene of the disaster.

The Illinois Bell Telephone company announced that lines has been opened to all points in the area except Long Beach and that long distance operators were almost caught up with the avalanche of calls that caused a four hour delay Friday night and Saturday morning.

The United Air Lines plane leaving Chicago for Los Angeles at 4:30 p. m. carried a full booking of passengers. Among them were C. A. Meehan, district manager of the Sears-Roebuck store in Los Angeles, and his assistant, John Roberts. Reports were that the store had been partially wrecked.

Special Staff Handles Calls.

A staff of twelve persons was hastily organized by THE TRIBUNE to handle the inquiries about relatives which came over the telephone in addition to the regular force of telephone operators who answered questions about the latest general news on the earthquake.

The special staff took the name and telephone number of each inquirer and the name and California address of the person about whom he sought information. A card index system was installed and as the names of dead and injured began trickling over the wires the card index was consulted. As soon as information was received about a person whose name was in the card index a telephone call transmitting that information was made to the person who had called THE TRIBUNE.

A query about Mrs. Mary M. Roosevelt of Los Angeles, a cousin of President Roosevelt, was received from T. M. Gardner, 9351 South Laflin street. Mrs. Dorothy White of Oak Park asked about her sister, Mrs. T. V. Arnold of Long Beach.

List 1,500 Names.

Lewis Press, 5233 North Clark street, sought information about his father, Samuel Press, now in Los Angeles. Morton Kantoss, 6250 North Western avenue, asked about his grandfather, Jack Bolton, and his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Delson, all of Long Beach. Mrs. Ruth Irving, 2239 Warren avenue, inquired about her brother, Riddler Story, of Long Beach.

All the queries went into the card index which had 1,500 names listed by nightfall.

Officials of Swift & Co. announced that they had received a message stating that Clayton V. Steeves, cashier in their Long Beach branch office, had been killed and that C. M. Buck, manager of the branch, had been injured. The building in which the branch office was located was wrecked, the message said.

The Red Cross here in all probability will not be called upon to send relief to the quake area, James T. Nicholson, manager of the Chicago branch, said.

FINANCIER TELLS HIS ADVENTURES IN EARTHQUAKE

Just Put McCutcheons on Arizona Train.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—Edward W. Harden, New York financier and former financial editor and war correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, today told of his experiences in the earthquake.

"I had gone from my ranch in the Palos Verde section to accompany our guests, Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon of Chicago, to catch their train for Tucson, Ariz.," he said. "Mr. McCutcheon had gone through the gate leading to the trains. I had left him and walked out in front of the station, and as I stepped out I saw people running.

Sidewalk Begins to Move.

"I looked on in a disinterested way as they ran into the middle of the street, thinking that it probably was to watch two boys fighting, and then turned and walked in the direction of my car. Suddenly the sidewalk in front of me began to move. It moved back and forth as if the concrete walk were a sheet, and two persons had hold of the two edges of it and were waving the sheet up and down, back and forth. It seemed to me that the sidewalk moved perhaps two feet in one direction and then in the other. When I saw that I knew what it was.

"I looked across Central avenue from the station and saw the top of a building fall off. My chauffeur ran to me and told me we had better get into the car and drive into an open space, but I started back into the station to see Mr. McCutcheon again and see if he was all right.

Station Closed to Public.

"I found the station doors locked, and they were telling everybody to keep out of the station building for fear the station might fall in.

"Until then I had thought it a somewhat mild earthquake; it had seemed to me that little damage was being done. All was quiet and that helped give the impression it was a slight shock.

"But after that, when we started to drive home to the ranch [this ranch is located south of Redondo Beach, overlooking the ocean from a high cliff, and is 25 miles from the railroad station], we began to go past crushed automobiles, streets showered with débris and broken glass, buildings with their tops off. Every person seen was running. Trolley cars were stopped. Electric lighting flickered, but the illumination stayed on.

Finds Ranch Undamaged.

"We got to the ranch and found there had been no trouble there. Not a bit of damage was done. Of course, we felt the continued shocks there during the rest of the night. Every one I knew on the Palos Verde estates seems to have suffered no damage at all."

Mr. Harden said he communicated with relatives and friends from Chicago and New York who lived in the area about him and learned that his sisters, Misses Anna and Frances Harden, had suffered no injuries or damage at their place on the Palos Verde peninsula. He received similar information from the home of F. Charles Schwedtman, former vice president of the New York National City bank; and from Mr. and Mrs. Julian Street and their daughter, Rosemary. Harden's daughter, Mrs. Albert Parker, formerly of Chicago and now wife of a Los Angeles attorney, likewise was fortunate enough to experience no ill effects.

Commenting on this good fortune, which he declared was at least in part due to the adequate and thorough construction of the estate buildings on the farther side of the San Pedro peninsula [where Palos Verde tract is located], Mr. Harden said he was awed to note the devastation in Long Beach during a trip of observation this afternoon.

"As we rode along," he said, "there were hundreds of buildings with porticos down, fronts off, fallen chimneys, walls with huge cracks. We noticed that the fronts seemed to fall from the buildings rather than the rear.

Clearing Away Damage.

"I have never seen such orderly work of reparation. Everything was in order under the attentive policing of marines, sailors, ex-service men and policemen. Policemen had been rushed in from everywhere. Thousands of men were at work, and hundreds of trucks were busy in cleaning it up. Tonight the streets of Long Beach are almost clear.

"I was impressed that the loss of life seemed comparatively light. It is my guess that by Monday morning all Long Beach will be clear and open to traffic, and within one month the scars will be gone.

"Many newer buildings of brick and stone construction remained up, with nothing, at least from the outside, to indicate that well constructed buildings of this modern sort had suffered a great deal. Most of those that collapsed were of less sturdy type."

Mr. Harden related that he and McCutcheon were in an earthquake in Manila in August, 1898. Then both were war correspondents. "But that shake in Manila was nothing like this one in Los Angeles," Mr. Harden said.

In 1898 Harden was with THE TRIBUNE and McCutcheon was working for the Chicago Daily News.

ROOSEVELT CALLS IN HIS NEW BOOK ON ECONOMICS

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.] — Advisers of President Roosevelt have caused the withdrawal of advance copies of his new book "Looking Forward," it was learned today. The John Day company, publishers of the volume, in which the President discussed economic issues, notified all book reviewers to whom the book had been sent to return their copies without opening.

The action was taken, it was explained by the publisher, "due to discovery of errors which must be corrected," and at the request of the President.

At the White House it was explained that because of the changing economic picture, it had been thought advisable to revise the book in the light of the new conditions.

2,500,000 KILLED BY 4,000 QUAKES IN CHRISTIAN ERA

Rocks Slipping Deep in Earth Cause.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

There have been 4,000 destructive earthquakes since the beginning of the Christian era, in which more than 2,500,000 human beings have been killed.

PROF. CHAMBERLIN.

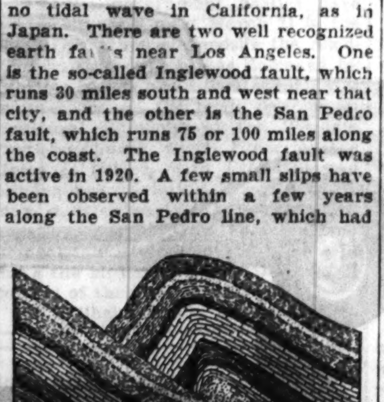
Causes of these world shaking forces, the question of their periodicity, and what mankin can do about it, were discussed yesterday by Prof. Rollin T. Chamberlin of the geology department of the University of Chicago.

The seismograph here recorded the quake in Los Angeles Friday evening, showing that it was 1,830 miles away, the displacement of the needle being about one inch, with a number of less severe shocks.

Tidal Wave's Absence Mystery.

"This shows that the quake was not so severe as the one in 1906 in San Francisco," he said, "and much less strong than the one ten days ago in Japan, where the needle moved from four to five inches under a shake located as 5,900 miles away.

"It seems strange that there was no tidal wave in California, as in Japan. There are two well recognized earth faults near Los Angeles. One is the so-called Inglewood fault, which runs 30 miles south and west near that city, and the other is the San Pedro fault, which runs 75 or 100 miles along the coast. The Inglewood fault was active in 1920. A few small slips have been observed within a few years along the San Pedro line, which had been marked as dead, but which, like Vesuvius, may have come to life again.



A diagram of a reversed or thrust fault, the slipping of the broken layers of which may result in earthquakes.

"In 1925, before the Kentucky Academy of Science, I remarked that geologists would not be surprised if a quake occurred within the next twenty years in the Los Angeles district. Three weeks later came the Santa Barbara quake. I cannot be sure at this distance just which one of these faults is guilty this time.

Causes Often Deep in Earth.

"There are many causes for earthquakes—volcanic explosions, collapse of caverns, slipping of muds in river deltas, but these are local. The world shakers are almost entirely the result of settling of the subterranean rocks. The rock fall may occur as far down in the earth as 25 miles. There is a slippage of one part of the bed rock, caused by growing stresses within the body of the earth.

"The San Francisco quake was along the line of the San Andreas fault, 191 miles long. There have been slips there as far back as the Tertiary age, the total slippage being as much as twelve miles.

"These same bendings and breakings make mountains. We find them located around the globe in belts or zones, in the regions of young mountains, still in the process of formation. These are belts of crustal disturbance. The periodicity of the major disturbances is a matter of guess. Information is meager. There was a 21 foot slip at San Francisco. Before that, the region had been moving north five hundredths of a meter a year.

No Faults Near Chicago.

"The periodicity has averaged a quake every 72 years. On this basis San Francisco would be safe for another 50 or 75 years from a major quake. But California has had more quakes than any other part of the United States, and they are likely to continue.

"There are no earth faults near Chicago. California has its mountains and we live on a plain. That is one reason. The nearest faults to Chicago are in Hardin county, Illinois, in western Kentucky and in Missouri, but these are old and small.

"The only thing that men can do is to build for protection against these quakes. In the districts subject to them the buildings and aqueducts should be of reinforced concrete. These permit just enough swaying to take up the shock. There were 16 buildings of this type in Tokio at the time of the big quake, and of these six were slightly damaged."

Federal Relief Funds End April 1, Reynolds Warns

Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, in a letter mailed yesterday warned Illinois counties that no more federal funds will be available for relief after April 1 and that the counties will have to depend upon their local resources. He pointed out three means of raising more funds through an increased use of motor fuel tax funds, maximum township levies for 1932 and further subscriptions from private citizens.

SHIP PASSENGERS SEE LANDSLIDES AS QUAKES ROCK SHORE

San Francisco, March 11.—(AP)—Passengers arriving here today on the coastwise steamer Yale from Los Angeles told of witnessing four landslides near Palos Verdes, caused by the quakes which shook southern California last night.

The vessel left Wilmington at 5 p. m. and at 5:55 p. m. when the first shock was felt, was off Point Vincente. Passengers felt a severe jolt and rushed to the deck, believing the ship had struck a submerged object. Looking toward land they witnessed four distinct landslides as part of cliffs loosened and slid toward the water. One nearly took away the lighthouse on Point Vincente, they said.

The ship was not damaged.

Pilot Denied a Divorce and Wife a Separation

Circuit Judge Frank J. Bicek yesterday refused to grant a divorce to Walter A. Brooke, 3256 West 62d place, airplane pilot, and denied his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Hopkins Brooke, 6314 South Troy street, a bill for separate maintenance. The judge ruled that Brooke's assertions that his wife threatened him with a revolver and once threw a glass of milk at him did not constitute cruelty. He also decided that Brooke had not deserted his wife, as she had alleged in her separate maintenance bill.

ASK U. S. LOAN FOR REBUILDING IN QUAKE ZONE

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—William A. Simpson, president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, toured the area of earthquake destruction today, and issued a statement declaring the trembler demonstrated the importance of modern building construction.

Mr. Simpson said that modern buildings, which had been constructed on principles devised to withstand earth shocks, had withstood the stress in the manner they had been expected to, and had suffered less damage than others. Much of the terrific property damage was due to improper construction he said.

Mr. Simpson, as representative of Los Angeles business, sent a telegram to President Roosevelt urging employment of Reconstruction Finance corporation funds to restore the demolished area.

"The chief need here is for R. F. C. funds to be made available to property owners for repairs of buildings, repayable over a long term," he wired the President. "If this can be done it will contribute more than anything else to recovery."

Quake Severest Under Sea, California Scientist Avers

Santa Clara, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—Dr. Albert J. Newlin, director of Ricard Memorial observatory at Santa Clara university, declared today the southern California earthquake was "surprisingly local in effect, moderate in intensity, most severe under the ocean and attended by an exceptionally low death rate."

The analysis was made from the record left by a beam of light on a revolving cylinder on sensitized paper, the scientific recording of the disaster. The quake, he said, was comparable to the Santa Barbara earthquake of eight years ago, but "not quite as severe."

"Classifying all quakes into four divisions—very light, light, moderate and severe, this would be classified as 'slightly above moderate,' but in no sense severe," Dr. Newlin said. "It in no manner approximated the recent upheaval in Japan, which was wholly of the severe type."

Along Small Fault.

Dr. Newlin said the quake was not along the San Andreas fault, which passes to the east of Los Angeles, but was along a small fault which dips into the ocean west of Los Angeles.

"Buildings and structures built on or near these faults should be constructed with this in mind," he said. "There was surprisingly low loss of life in the Friday shake. This was probably due to the better building precautions which are being taken. Many people ran from buildings in front of automobiles, or jumped from windows and were hurt. Here and there some one was injured by flying bricks. But very few were hurt by the direct action of the earthquake—the collapse of buildings. This would not have been true many years ago."

Scientists Set Trap.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—(AP)—Uncle Sam's scientists set a trap for an earthquake a few months ago, and now a quake has come along and jumped right into it.

The trap—really a series of traps—consists of machines designed to record just how the ground shakes and shivers when an earthquake occurs. A knowledge of this is necessary for scientific construction of buildings designed to resist the "snap-the-whip" effect of earthquake shocks.

Seek Results of Earthquake.

Today scientists of the U. S. coast and geodetic survey on the west coast were on their way to inspect the traps, to see just how much earthquake knowledge had been caught.

Four traps were in the earthquake zone, two at Los Angeles and one each at Long Beach and San Diego. Just how the traps had worked was not immediately known, due to difficulty of reaching points where they were installed.

Earthquake knowledge gained from the records of the traps, etched in the form of zigzag curves on photographic paper, may help prevent earthquake disasters of the future. Chief damage and loss of life in quakes comes from falling buildings and the fires they start.

When the coast and geodetic survey set its "traps" it did not know whether they would be sprung the next day or twenty years hence. Twelve were placed in various parts of the country where it was believed earth shocks might occur. They were set to be "shaken into action" automatically by a quake and start recording its speed, direction and force.

Just Like Cracking Whip.

Earthquakes shake buildings in a "double reverse" manner. The top of the building sways one way, while the foundation is moving the other. This sets up a strain that throws off copings, roofs and chimneys, and sometimes causes buildings to collapse. With better knowledge of how this double strain works, it is believed buildings can be stiffened to resist it.

The earthquakes write their own record in the traps. A sheet of photographic paper moves with the quaking earth, under a pencil of light that remains stationary. On the moving paper the light records a curve that is a picture of the earthquake's action.

LONG BEACH CHURCH SERVICES IN PARKS PLANNED FOR TODAY

Long Beach, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—Temples of worship will remain closed tomorrow, but community church services will be held in four city parks, pastors announced tonight.

City schools will not open for at least a week to give engineers time to examine the buildings.

Long Beach also will be without gas, its main item of fuel, until early next week.

CHICAGO DOCTOR TELLS OF QUAKE AT LONG BEACH

Says House Cracks Open, Doors Fall Off.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Long Beach, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—Dr. and Mrs. Halford J. Morlan of the Windermere hotel, Chicago, and Fairfield, Ill., were two Long Beach quake survivors who came through thrilling experiences unscathed. Dr. Morlan, who is a surgeon and lecturer, and former president of Illinois Isaak Walton league, describes his experiences:

DR. HALFORD MORLAN.

"Without the slightest warning, the major shock struck, accompanied with a report like booming artillery. Buildings swayed, twisted and heaved.

"When the first great shock occurred, Mrs. Morlan was in the dinette of our three room apartment in the Warwick apartment building, a two story structure at Long Beach. I was in the living room. I attempted to get to Mrs. Morlan. The sides of the building were cracking open and the tops of the walls fell down.

Dodge Through Doorway.

"The inside partitions were crushed. The doors fell off their hinges. The lights of the building were off, leaving us in semi-darkness. We dodged out through the passage way, while debris fell, and plastering pelted us and made our way into a rear alley, because the way to safety there seemed more open.

"From the alley, looking across a vacant lot toward Atlantic avenue, I could see buildings already in heaps. Behind me, Mercy hospital, the sisters were trying to remove patients in fear the building would collapse. The sisters were met by other people trying to get patients into the hospital for treatment. The arriving patients were deposited on the barren ground or on rugs hastily laid about the rear yards and vacant adjacent lawns. Facilities for quick and scientific operating naturally were lacking but despite this, many dead and scores of injured were rapidly attended.

Goes Back for Belongings.

"From the hospital I went back into the apartment through the rakish doorways, hastily assembled our belongings, while Mrs. Morland waited outside and stored them in my car, whose garage fortunately — being frame—had withstood the shocks.

"In attempting to walk during the first acute quake and the after-shocks which came upon us in rapid succession, we experienced the same sensation that it felt aboard ship in heavy seas when the deck reaches up and bumps one's knees. The shocks were extreme and seemed continuous.

"With each succeeding tremor one heard the increasing noise of falling bricks and stone. The reports of cracking plate glass multiplied the horror and the casualties. All brick buildings we could see suffered great damage or total loss.

Razes Churches, Hospitals.

"For miles along the streets almost every building seemed beyond repair. The many magnificent churches and hospitals of Long Beach were in no way favored. Polytechnic High school on Atlantic boulevard, two blocks from our apartment, was on the ground and in flames.

"Demolished roofs, bulging sides, cracked and distorted corners, warped foundations and collapsed fronts evidenced the magniture of the catastrophe.

"There was perfect order and benumbing calm. There was no screaming, no cursing, and no looting. Most of the people had been preparing their evening meal, but few had eaten, so all went hungry throughout an anxious night.

"There was ample evidence of unselfishness, although calamity and disaster had struck, and homes and business were gone. I heard no voice in complaint from crushed and homeless residents.

"All remained in streets and vacant spaces all night. No one slept. Like hundreds of others, Mrs. Morlan and I passed the night in our automobile."

ASK ROOSEVELT TO TAKE CONTROL OF FARMS IN U. S.

Heads of Varied Groups Draft Special Act.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Farm leaders today asked President Roosevelt to assume a dictatorship over agriculture.

In recommendations, presented through Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who had summoned them into conference, representative of farm organizations proposed that Mr. Roosevelt, with Secretary Wallace, seek from congress almost supreme authority over farm operations and marketing.

Will Consider Plan.

The President, meeting a committee of the farm leaders, told them today he would take their plan under advisement. Secretary Wallace is believed strongly in support of the proposals, but other advisers of the President are said to be in opposition, and in view of the radical nature of some features of the plan, considerable doubt was expressed on the question of whether Mr. Roosevelt will seek to put it through.

The recommendations of the farm leaders sought to have the President vested with powers to fix farm prices, to enter into the leasing of marginal farm lands, to levy taxes upon farm products.

The crops to which the provisions of the act should be made to apply, in the opinion of the farm representatives, are wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, cattle, rice, tobacco, milk and its products.

Backers of the Project.

Those who presented the plan to the President are:

U. B. BLAYLOCK, president, American Cotton Coöperative association.

C. V. GREGORY, Prairie Farmer, Chicago.

C. W. HOLMAN, National Coöperative Milk Producers federation, Washington, D. C.

CHARLES A. EWING, National Live Stock Marketing association, Chicago.

L. J. TABER, master, National Grange, Columbus, O.

EDWARD A. O'NEIL, president, American Farm Bureau federation, Chicago.

C. E. HUFF, president, Farmers' National Grain corporation, Chicago.

RALPH SNYDER, chairman, committee of National Farm Organization, Manhattan, Kas.

W. P. LAMBERTON, congressman, representing Farmers' union.

W. R. RONALD, editor, Evening Republican, Mitchell, S. D.

EARL SMITH, Illinois Agricultural association.

M. L. WILSON, Montana State Agricultural college.

DAN M. PIERCE, Wallace Publishing company.

O. O. WOLF, National Live Stock Marketing association, Ottawa, Kas.

DAN WALLACE, The Farmer, St. Paul, Minn.

Drastic Action Proposed.

The proposal to give the President authority to regulate marketing, some persons say, would give him power to fix arbitrary prices for the farm products, and by that power he could abolish existing grain exchanges.

The consensus of the conference with Secretary Wallace, it was learned, was a combination of the domestic allotment plan with a proposal for leasing marginal farm lands. The President is expected within a day or two to announce whether he will submit to congress a message asking the passage of the legislation the farm organization conferees recommended. The proposed law follows:

"That following the preamble setting forth the condition that exists in agriculture, the measure shall declare that an emergency exists and that the powers granted to the President under this act shall continue for such period of time as in the judgment of the President the emergency continues.

"It shall be the purpose of this legislation to establish the principle of parity of prices between agricultural and industrial commodities on the basis of their pre-war relationship and to approach this parity of prices by wages at as rapid a rate as seems feasible in the circumstances.

Broad Powers Provided.

"Powers to be conferred upon the President and the secretary of agriculture as follows:

"1. To lease agricultural land and/or enter into contractual agreements for the control of agricultural production.

"2. To take such action and to make such settlements as are necessary in order to acquire full legal title to all cotton or other farm commodities on which the government has made loans or advances, upon such terms as may seem fair and just, and to exchange such cotton or other products with growers for acreage reduction.

"3. To regulate and supervise the marketing and processing of agricultural and competing products in domestic and foreign commerce.

"4. To levy such charges on agricultural products or products manufactured from them as seems necessary to accomplish the purpose of the act.

"5. In the drafting of a bill to carry out these recommendations, all powers necessary to the successful carrying out of the purpose to be achieved shall be included."

A bill to carry out the terms of the recommendations already has been drafted, it is said. In connection with the proposal for the leasing by the government of marginal lands, which will be taken out of cultivation to curtail the present farm surpluses, the experts will propose the leasing of 50,000,000 acres at an average of $5 an acre, an annual cost of $250,000,000. This sum would be deducted from the aggregate tax to be levied on the various farm products.

Cotton crop curtailment, in return for selling of government cotton at prices not to injure the growers, is part of the plan.

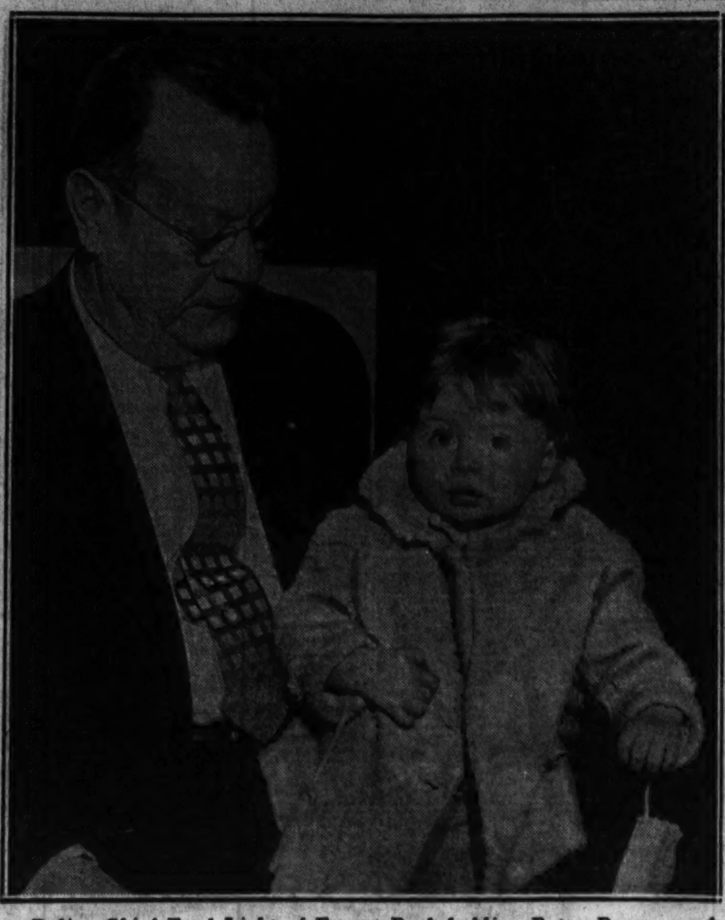
THIEVES ABANDON BABY IN AUTO



Police Chief Fred Licht of Forest Park holding Patsy Burgess, who was kidnaped by auto thieves and then abandoned with car.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Give Radio Alarm

Patsy, the 17 month old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Burgess, 325 South boulevard, Oak Park, was kidnaped for a short time yesterday afternoon. Neither Patsy nor the kidnapers knew for a time she was kidnaped, and as soon as the fact was discovered by the abductors she was released.

The infant had been taken for an automobile ride by her grandmother, Mrs. Rose Schwab, 215 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, and her aunt, Miss Dorothy Schwab. The two women stopped in at the home of Mrs. Caroline Wilkes, 334 South Des Plaines avenue, Forest Park, leaving the baby asleep in the rear seat of the Schwab car.

While Mrs. Schwab and her daughter were in the house two youths got into the front seat and drove away. A radio call was sent out to all police as soon as the theft and kidnaping were discovered. Twenty minutes later Patsy and the car were found abandoned at 15th avenue and Washington boulevard, Maywood. It was believed the youths seen driving away in the car became fearful of the consequences when they found the baby.

ASSASSINS SHOOT CHIEF OF CUBA'S STRONG ARM GANG

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, March 11.—Fifteen machine gun slugs fired from a speeding automobile this morning killed Leopoldo Fernandez Ros, 45, former newspaperman and chief of the notorious "strong arm" organization La Porra, in front of his home.

Eye witnesses said the slayers were five youths, apparently students. Despite a spectacular chase by motorcycle police through the business district, the assailants escaped. Later their car, with three machine guns and five hand grenades, was found five miles west of Havana. The government prohibited news af the assassination in the press of the island, and police broke the cameras of photographers at the scene of the shooting.

La Porra, known officially as the National Patriotic league, was formed during the August revolution of 1931, supposedly by citizens coöperating with the government to preserve peace. However, oppositionists assert it was formed at the instance of President Gerardo Machado, included mostly conditionally released convicts, and was used to eradicate by criminal acts and intimidation enemies on the so-called official "black list."

SOVIET EXECUTES 35 FOR SABOTAGE ON STATE FARMS

Wrecked Tractors, Mills and Broke Up Work.

MOSCOW, March 11.—(AP)—The chairman of the state political department announced today that 35 persons had been executed and that 40 others had been sentenced to 8 or 10 years in prison for participating in "counter revolutionary activities and sabotage in connection with farming in the Ukraine, North Caucasus, and White Russia."

Those convicted, the communique said, included persons of the bourgeois and landowner classes and state employés in the commissariat of agriculture and the commissariat of state farms.

The most active participants in the alleged plot were given the severest punishment for this "social offense—death by shooting," the announcement said.

Aimed to Cause Hunger.

The department's communication to newspapers set forth that prosecution of the offenders was taken under a decree of the soviet central executive committee on Nov. 15, 1923, and that the department had examined the charges today.

The men were charged with "organizing counter-revolutionary activity and wreckage at machine and tractor stations and at state farms detrimental to the peasantry and the state; damaging and destroying tractors and farming machinery, machine workshops and flax mills; disorganizing sowing, harvest, and threshing work with the object of undermining the material position of the peasantry and of creating hunger in the country."

Twenty-two of the accused were sentenced to ten years in prison and 18 were sentenced to eight years. The communication said the sentences had been carried out.

COMMISSARS INCLUDED.

A week ago news dispatches said that the soviet secret service had accomplished the "liquidation" of a counter-revolutionary group involving more than 70 persons.

Among the accused were the heads of the commissariat for agriculture and the planning and financial section of the same commissariat.

The Ukraine and North Caucasus have been described as the most backward of the soviet agricultural regions in the last two years, because of crop failures through drought and because of disagreement with the soviet agricultural policy involving grain collections and sowing.

HOOVER AND WIDOW OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT WILL DINE TOGETHER

New York, March 11.—(AP)—Former President Hoover, as his stay in New York neared an end, tonight accepted an invitation to have lunch tomorrow with Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the twenty-sixth President, at her Long Island home at Oyster Bay.

Lawrence Richey, Mr. Hoover's secretary, said present plans are for the former President to leave New York Tuesday or Wednesday for the coast.

During the day Mr. Hoover made a number of telephone calls to California and learned that all his family and friends were safe.

Mrs. Hoover is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr., who live just outside Pasadena.

Accompanied by his son, Allan, and by Richey and Lucius Boomer, hotel man, Mr. Hoover walked for 15 blocks along Fifth avenue this morning and then had breakfast at Boomer's apartment in a hotel overlooking Central park. On the walk the wind blew off his hat, but it was retrieved by one of three plain clothes men who followed him.

DANIELS REFUSES TO HEAD TRANSIT BOARD FOR U. S.

Likely to Get Diplomatic Post in Latin America.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, to whom was offered the chairmanship of the proposed transportation commission, has indicated to President Roosevelt his desire not to assume the heavy duties that would be called for in such an important position.

It was indicated at the White House today that Mr. Daniels will be offered a diplomatic post, probably in one of the Latin-American countries. There was mention of the ambassadorship to Mexico but it was said that he probably would not be named to that place.

Cox Not to Be Ambassador.

James M. Cox, who was the Democratic nominee for President in 1920, will not be appointed ambassador to Germany. The attitude of Mr. Cox is that while he will not accept a fixed appointment in the Roosevelt administration, he stands ready to do anything to assist the administration in any way public, but does not desire active service.

Norman Armour of New Jersey was nominated by President Roosevelt today for reappointment as minister to Haiti, and the name of Paul Knabenshue of Ohio also was sent to the senate for re-appointment as minister resident and consul general to Iraq.

Both officials are career diplomats of long service and their redesignation to their posts had been expected.

Foreign service officer to be a consul general, Avra M. Warren of Maryland.

Foreign service officers to be secretaries in the diplomatic service: Harold Shantz of Rochester, N. Y.; H. Merrell Bennighoff of New York, Cloyce K. Huston of Iowa, Winthrop R. Scott of Ohio, H. Merle Cochran of Arizona.

In addition, President Roosevelt sent nominations to the senate of four assistant postmaster generals and an assistant secretary of agriculture, the selection of all of whom had previously been announced. These were:

To be first assistant postmaster general, Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming.

To be second assistant postmaster general, William W. Howes of South Dakota.

To be third assistant postmaster general, Clinton B. Eilenberger of Pennsylvania.

To be fourth assistant postmaster general, Silliman Evans of Texas.

To be assistant secretary of agriculture, Rexford Guy Tugwell of New York.

Names Philippine Vice Governor.

Other nominations included:

To be vice governor of the Philippine islands, John H. Holliday of Missouri.

To be governor of the Panama Canal, Lieut. Col. Julian L. Schley, corps of engineers, United States army.

Lieut. Col. Julian L. Schley was named governor of the Canal Zone during the last session of congress, but because of the general blockage of confirmations in the senate, his name had to be resubmitted. In the absence of confirmation he had been serving as acting governor since the expiration of the service as governor of Col. Harry Burgess, whose principal assistant as engineer in charge of maintenance he was.

Lieut. Col. Schley was born in Georgia in 1880 and was graduated from the United States Military academy in 1903, being commissioned in the engineers. He was a lieutenant colonel of engineers in the national army during the world war and has been stationed in the Canal Zone for the last four years.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[U. P.]—Miss Dorothy Statler, niece of the late E. M. Statler, who founded the hotel chain that bears his name, is working as a head waitress in a hotel restaurant here, it was learned today. Miss Statler said she was determined to succeed on her "own" although her father now directs the Statler hotel system. She previously had attended a hotel training school for four months.

DRAFT PLAN TO HAVE COUNCIL SELECT MAYOR

Democrats to Hold Another Meeting Today.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A tentative program for the selection of an acting mayor to fill Mayor Cermak's vacant chair, in the shape of amendments to the cities and villages act, began to emerge yesterday from the Democratic organization, at a conference between the patronage office holders, a score or more of them, and County Chairman Pat Nash and Governor Henry Horner. Nothing definite was decided upon, but sentiment at the meeting covered the following proposals for emergency action at Springfield:

1. Empower the city council to select an acting mayor from among or outside its own membership.
2. Clothe the acting mayor with full powers of mayor.
3. If he proves to be a good selection, let the acting mayor serve the full unexpired term, which runs to April, 1935.

Call Meeting For Today.

A meeting of all Democratic ward committeemen and Democratic aldermen is to be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Morrison hotel, at which a plan of procedure is to be taken up. Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton has been asked to present an opinion as to whether the city council is empowered to fill the vacancy under the law as it stands. The cities and villages act contains no specific provision for electing an acting mayor in Chicago where the unexpired term is a year or more. It merely calls for a special election.

A vote of confidence in County Chairman Nash was given at the meeting of the Democratic office holders. By most of the Democratic leaders Mr. Nash is regarded as the sheet anchor most qualified to hold the organization steady, and among the Democrats he has been most prominently spoken of as a possible acting mayor, if he cares to assume the task.

Whether a special session of the city council will be called for Tuesday is expected to depend on today's action. The regular meeting is Wednesday.

Need Republican Votes.

Whatever emergency legislation is to be sought at Springfield will require the aid of Republican votes to put it through. In the house the Democrats have 80 members. An emergency bill requires a two-thirds vote, or 102, so that the Democrats will need to hold their own forces intact in the house and get the aid of 22 Republicans.

Indications yesterday were that the Deneen group among the Republicans may travel with Gov. Horner on at least part of the contemplated program. The group figures it has between 22 and 30 legislators among its following.

At a luncheon yesterday the Deneen men, after hearing opinions from State Senators Arthur Adam Huebsch and James J. Barbour, and Representative David I. Swanson, declared in favor of validating legislation to clothe an acting mayor with full powers. It took no action on the proposal to empower the city council to select some one not an alderman as acting mayor.

Would Avoid Election.

On the question of holding a special election for mayor, the Deneen men took the stand that it would be better to refrain from calling a special election and to allow the acting mayor, if he is suitable, to serve the full unexpired term, than to hold the special election June 5 at the time of the judicial elections. The Democratic view is that if a special election is held it should be at the June election, to save expense.

The Democratic view is that the necessary amendments to be sought might be incorporated in an election bill, which has already passed the senate and is on second reading in the house, with a view of quick action. This bill provides that whenever a special election is necessary to fill a vacancy the candidates shall be nominated by the party managing committee instead of by direct primaries.

Oppose Power for Present G. O. P.

One criticism has been that this would tend to establish a poor precedent in removing a mayoralty election from direct primaries. Prominent Republicans have been expressing themselves strongly against action that would enable the present Republican organization to pick a candidate. Their criticism is that the makeup of the committee would not tend to regain any confidence in the local G. O. P. Among the Deneen group the idea is expressed that instead of a special election without primary nominations, it would be better to make provision for the acting mayor to serve the full unexpired term.

Much, of course, depends on what the council does. The Democratic organization believes it will be able to exert a guiding hand upon the aldermen, of whom 32 are Democrats and 18 Republicans.

On all sides there is diverse opinion as to whether the council has any power to pick an acting mayor under the law as it stands. Hence Mr. Sexton's opinion is being awaited with great interest.

Chicago Omitted in Law.

Some hold the council is without power, others that it has implied powers. One upsetting discovery was announced in Springfield yesterday. Two years ago the legislature amended the cities and villages act to enable cities of 500,000 or less to cope with a situation such now exists in Chicago. It provided that where the vacancy is for a year or more, the city council shall elect one of its own members to act as mayor until a mayor is elected at a speical election. This measure was introduced by Representative E. W. Mureen of Galesburg.

It was amended in the committee on municipalities, and word from Springfield yesterday was that Chicago was taken out of this amendment at the instance of Cook county members. Many interpreted this yesterday as a denial of "inherent rights" of the city council to elect an alderman as acting mayor where the vacancy is for a year or more.

Hitler Seeks to Tighten Grip at German Elections Today

BERLIN, March 11.—(AP)—Chancellor Adolph Hitler's iron broom will be wielded more vigorously than ever tomorrow when two more elections will be held throughout the Reich. These are the provincial and municipal-communal elections.

It is estimated that the fate of 200,000 office holders will be at stake. Approximately a million candidates are running for the places.

In Berlin alone, where the communists hitherto have been dominant, 7,403 candidates are running for 225 municipal offices and 780 other jobs in greater Berlin's 20 districts.

The fate of anti-National Socialist councilmen and other officials may be imagined from a speech delivered yesterday by Capt. Hermann Goering, minister without portfolio, at Essen.

War on Corruption.

"This coming Sunday there will be a big cleanout and it will only be the beginning," Capt. Goering said. "The German communes, once the strength of the German people, are ruined and overburdened by debt. The worst form of corruption has been rampant.

"I have prepared a decree, called the inti-corruption decree, which will tear up the present accursed system of graft, root and branch."

The cabinet minister intimated that his measures would be retroactive and that persons found guilty of graft would be called upon to refund their spoils. He hinted that the pensions of such offenders might be revoked.

The newly elected reichstag, in which the government parties have a majority, will meet March 21 in the Kroll Opera house, opposite the reichstag building which was damaged by fire two weeks ago. The session will be preceded on the same day by an inaugural ceremony at the Potsdam garrison church, where Frederick the Great is buried, with President von Hindenburg officiating. The new reichstag is expected to take an extended vacation, possibly two years, almost immediately after it meets. This will leave the Hitler administration in full control of the government.

Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior, is authority for the statement that the eighty-one communists elected to the reichstag last Sunday will not be allowed to take their seats. Thus the Nazis will have a clear majority and will not have to depend on the support of their Nationalist allies.

German Jews have received the government's promise that they will be fully protected by the law, but many of them, impelled by anti-Semitic demonstrations on the part of the Nazis, are taking precautions for their own safety.

Jews Leaving Germany.

Numerous Jews have considered it wiser to leave Germany until conditions are more nearly normal. Among them are Theodor Wolff, editor of the Berliner Tageblatt; Prof. George Bernard, former editor of the Vossische Zeitung; Oscar Cohn, former Socialist member of the reichstag; Alfred Kerr, dramatic critic; Bernhard Weiss, formerly second in command of the Berlin police; Isaac Steinberg, a Russian emigre who was minister of justice in Lenin's first coalition cabinet; George Tietz, head of a large department store, and Robert Weismann, state's secretary in the former Prussian cabinet headed by Premier Otto Braun.

The produce exchange at Breslau was entered today by Nazi storm troops who searched the place for arms and ousted the occupants. Several Jewish owned department stores there were forcibly closed, and the storm troopers ejected Jewish judges and lawyers from the courts.

Arrest Jewish Correspondent.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 11.—Jacob Lestschinsky, correspondent for the Jewish Daily Forward of New York, was arrested in Berlin this morning for "compromising Germany in his reports." He has agreed to leave Germany immediately. He is a citizen of Lithuania. The president of the International Foreign Press club and the Lithuanian minister have protested his arrest and asked his release.

Two Americans Molested.

BERLIN, March 11.—[U.P.]—Cases of the molestation of Americans—mostly Jewish—by Nazi brown shirts reached a total of eight today. The latest cases reported were those of Julius Fuchs and Herman Rosenman.

LITTLE PROSPECT OF DISARMAMENT, MACDONALD TOLD

Talks with Chiefs to Geneva Conference.

GENEVA, March 11.—(AP)—A dark picture of the disarmament situation was painted for Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain today by the chiefs of the principal delegations and by officials of the arms conference.

With Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, Mr. MacDonald received in turn Arthur Henderson of Great Britain, president of the conference; Dr. Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia, Hugh Gibson of the United States, Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy, and Count Rudolf Nadolny of Germany.

The conversations will continue next week in the hope of finding a solution for the deadlock in which the conference finds itself. It was to break this deadlock that Mr. MacDonald and his foreign secretary came to Geneva after they had been informed by the British representatives here that the parley was entering upon a crucial period which would determine whether any concrete arms reductions could be effected.

At his conferences today Mr. MacDonald heard discussions not only of the disarmament crisis but also of the far eastern arms embargo.

Wife Wins a Divorce from Auto Sales Head

Mrs. Claire F. Saunders of the Orrington hotel, Evanston, was granted a divorce yesterday from Charles P. Saunders, sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company in Chicago. Superior Judge Francis B. Allegretti signed the decree which alleged desertion. Mrs. Saunders was granted alimony of $250 a month and given three insurance policies and several parcels of Brooklyn, N. Y., real estate. The law firm of Epstein & Arvey was given $1,000 in fees for representing Mrs. Saunders. The divorce was uncontested.

KNOCKED OUT BY BURGLAR.

Herbert Farrar, 7232 South Park avenue, was struck on the head and knocked unconscious by a burglar in his home yesterday. Farrer was awakened when the intruder entered the house. As he opened his bedroom door the intruder struck him with the butt of his revolver and fled.

NEW YORK OPERA SEASON CLOSES; $180,000 PLEDGED

New York, March 11.—(AP)—The Metropolitan opera closed its forty-ninth season tonight amid a shower of checks and currency—contribution to the $300,000 guaranty fund needed for next year.

As the fund mounted to approximately $180,000, the "Met's" reopening next season seemed assured. This feeling prevailed in the family circle—that sent down a basketful of dollar bills. It prevailed in the "golden horseshoe"—that gave large checks.

Two $10,000 contributions were made today. One from Pierre du Pont and another from Louis Eckstein, Chicagoan of Ravinia opera fame.

Tonight's opera was "Lucia," with Lily Pons and Lauri-Volpi. It was the last of a season that presented 172 performances of 37 different works in 16 weeks.

The season brought from Gatti-Casazza, the shy, silent impresario, one world première—"Emperor Jones," with Lawrence Tibbett.

SAFE RESISTS BURGLARS.

Burglars early yesterday attempted to open the safe in the offices of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance company at 733 West 64th street. It was discovered when employes reported for work.

HAPSBURG HEIR REPORTED ABOUT TO RULE AUSTRIA

Said to Be Near Frontier Awaiting Revolt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, March 11.—Already nervous over the threat of a civil war arising from the dictatorship established early this week by Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, Vienna was excited further today by reports emanating from Berlin. These reports said Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, heir apparent to the Austrian throne, is poised just across the border in Switzerland awaiting a monarchist revolt which would make him the nation's ruler.

Otto, the 20 year old son of former Emperor Karl and former Empress Zita, is said to be staying at a Swiss monastery. He was recently in Berlin, ostensibly doing research work in connection with his studies at a university in Belgium. While in Berlin he visited President von Hindenburg and other government officials.

Dictatorship Weakening.

Austrian police stated they were seeking to locate Otto but would not comment on the significance of their action.

It became apparent today that Chancellor Dollfuss' dictatorship is in a state of disintegration. Josef Resch, minister of welfare, resigned in protest against the policy being pursued by the government. Army authorities warned several other cabinet members that the troops could not be relied upon 100 per cent in case of an uprising.

General Strike Predicted.

Leaders of the Socialist party, who have been fighting and defying the dictatorship ever since its inception, today delivered to the government a final ultimatum. It is understood to be the forerunner of a general strike unless the present regimé is liquidated.

The dictatorship was proclaimed Tuesday on the heels of Austrian Fascist agitation, in connection with the celebration of Chancellor Hitler's German election victory, for union with Germany. It was made possible by the voluntary dissolution last Saturday of the diet over a political row concerning the operation of state railways.

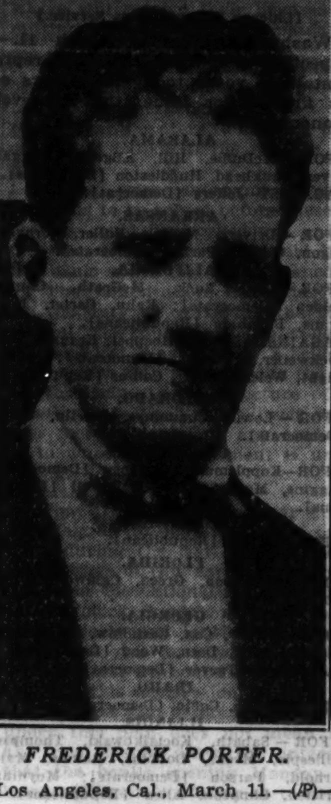
RESCUER KILLED



FREDERICK PORTER.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—(AP)—Three men were killed early today when their airplane crashed as they were en route to Long Beach to render aid to quake stricken victims. They were:

Frederick Porter, Chicago sportsman and pilot, owner of the plane.

Capt. Charles Towne, field manager of the Santa Monica airport.

Police Sergt. Charles Morton of the Santa Monica department.

Frederick Porter, who was killed with two other men in a plane crash near Los Angeles yesterday, was a son of Mrs. Washington Porter, 4043 Lake Park avenue. She is the widow of a millionaire loop property owner. Frederick Porter left Chicago more than a decade ago. He was educated at Leland Stanford university. He was married and father of two children. They, his mother, and a brother, Washington Porter II., survive.

DOLLY SISTER SERIOUSLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 11.—Jenny Dolly of the Dolly sisters was seriously injured in an automobile crash near Bordeaux two weeks ago, according to the French Journal aux Ecoutes. The dancer was a passenger in a car driven by Max Constant, a movie actor, who had rôles in the pictures "Why Get Married?" and "Trilby" in 1924. The car skidded and crashed against a tree. The couple were taken to a hospital in Bordeaux, thirty miles away. Constant, who was born in the United States and is a naturalized citizen of France, was unconscious for 48 hours. Miss Dolly's life still is in danger, the paper states. She suffered three fractured ribs, a pierced lung, and cuts about the face.

Miss Dolly's prolonged absence from Paris has given rise to rumors that she is in financial difficulties and is planning to sell her jewels, valued at $2,000,000, and her château at Fontainebleau. She intends buying an interest in a theater or movie house after the sale. Jenny Dolly, who was born in Hungary Oct. 25, 1892, is a sister of Roszika Dolly. The latter married Irving Netcher of Chicago last year.

HOUSE PASSES ECONOMY BILL OF PRESIDENT

Crush Opposition by Vets' Bloc, 266 to 138.

Long Dashes Over to House.

On one occasion, Senator Long dropped his work on the senate side to dash to the house, where he urged Louisiana members of congress to fight the Roosevelt program to a finish.

As approved by the house, the bill gives the President vast powers over federal compensation and disability allowances for veterans of all wars since the civil war. It would uproot the pension system that has grown up since the Indian and Spanish-American wars, trim large numbers of nonservice connected veterans from the present rolls and close the doors to entrance of millions of others eligible under present laws.

It hits hardest at nonservice connected veterans. The bill authorizes the President to trim federal salaries up to a maximum of 15 per cent. Congressional salaries are cut 15 per cent.

Close Billion Dollar Gap.

Estimated savings from the economy bill and government reorganization are expected to total between 600 and 700 millions. This with 150 millions to be added to revenues through the passage of a beer bill, is counted on by the President to close a gap in the budget of close to a billion dollars.

The final announcement by Speaker Rainey that the bill had been approved was preceded by one of the most dramatic and stormy sessions in the house history. For five hours while the bill was before the Democratic caucus and up for debate, Democratic leaders staged a continuous running battle with the veterans' bonus bloc, led by Representative John E. Rankin [Dem., Miss.], Representative Wright Patman [Dem., Tex.] and Representative William P. Connery Jr. [Dem., Mass.].

The first sign of revolt against the spread of the Roosevelt dictatorship developed at the morning caucus called by Speaker Rainey to line up the entire majority party back of the Robinson-McDuffie economy bill, carrying the Roosevelt economy program. The plan of the leaders was to arrange to push through the bill without the changing of a line. This program was knocked at once into a cocked hat by the veterans' faction, which immediately kicked over the party traces, smashed the leadership machine temporarily and repudiated the Roosevelt program.

Cuts in Veterans' Pensions.

Led by the Rankin-Patman group, the house rejected Speaker Rainey's program to bind the party to support the economy bill and voted by 158 to 112 to adopt an amendment restricting the cuts in veterans' pensions, disability allowances and compensation to 25 per cent. Such a limitation on the power of the President would have emasculated his economy program and reduced the savings by half. The amendment was offered by Representative Gordon Browning [Dem., Tenn.].

Surprised by the action of the caucus, Speaker Rainey decided it would be better strategy to send the Democrats to the house unbound than to pledge them to vote for the measure with the Browning amendment. The Browning supporters immediately fought to bind the caucus back of the amendment but failed, 174 to 112. Had they won the Roosevelt program would have been lost.

Faced by revolt in their own party and without knowledge of how many of those who supported the Browning amendment would continue their opposition to the Roosevelt program on the house floor the Democratic leaders turned to parliamentary strategy. They sought Republican votes sufficient to win and got them eventually.

As a first move Chairman John McDuffie [Dem. Ala.] of the special house economy committee appointed yesterday to handle the Roosevelt economy program sought and obtained the most drastic rule in recent years to govern consideration of the bill. Under its provisions no amendments were in order, all points of order against the measure were arbitrarily waived, and debate was limited to two hours.

Representative McDuffie opened the debate with the warning that it looks very much as if the nation was headed toward bankruptcy. Aggressive and a veteran advocate of drastic cuts in governmental cost, the Alabaman asserted that the present emergency was of war time nature.

"President Roosevelt has assumed leadership," he said. "He is trying to save the nation. The people are with Franklin D. Roosevelt in this effort to restore the financial condition of the country. Your vote for this bill simply shows your willingness and your desire to coöperate with him.

President's Call to Arms.

"I say there is no quicker way to restore economic conditions in this country on a sound basis than to balance the budget and get behind President Roosevelt wholeheartedly. This country is in a state of war against economic evils.

"Your President has called you to arms and in the language of a great federal national hero, on the glistening waters of Mobile bay many years ago, the time has come to give the command, full speed ahead, damn the torpedoes." Applause came from the crowded galleries and the closely packed house chamber as the Alabaman concluded.

A bonus advocate spoke next.

"I wish to say," spoke up Representative Rankin, "that I am one of the first friends the present President ever had in this house. I was supporting him under fire, if you please, when some of those now standing by him were opposing him.

"The gentleman from Alabama brings up the old harp about balancing the budget. Are you going to balance the budget at the expense of the disabled veterans? You spend 2 billions for the rich bankers through the R. F. C. and now you want to pass a measure which will take bread from the mouths of the disabled veterans and their widows and orphans."

Wisconsin Radical Joins Fight.

As Mr. Rankin took his seat, Representative Gardner R. Withrow [Rad. Rep., Wis.] rose to back up Rankin.

"President Roosevelt is no superman," he asserted. "Why must we follow him? He is just a human being. If we pass this bill we might as well get out as legislators and go home."

A few moments later the house was thrown into an uproar by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum [Dem., Va.].

"If Franklin D. Roosevelt is the sagacious politician I believe him to be he will look over the roll call today so that those who vote no will be known——"

A chorus of catcalls, hisses, and noes drowned out the speaker. For five minutes the chamber resounded as opponents of the bill charged that Woodrum was attempting to intimidate them into voting for the measure on threat of political reprisal.

"I had not attempted to imply coercion," Woodrum shouted as temporary quiet was restored. "I simply wanted to emphasize that this is a vote which separates those willing to support the President from those who are against him."

A few minutes before debate was to be closed the Republican and Democratic leaders delivered their final blows. Then uprose Minority Leader Bertram H. Snell of New York, Republican stalwart.

G. O. P. Supports Roosevelt.

"I speak not as a Republican nor as a Democrat," Mr. Snell explained to the stilled house. "I speak as one who holds the country's interests first. I know that if you are going to accomplish anything in cutting government costs you must give the President authority to make the cuts.

"I am going to vote to give him that authority and then I shall hold him responsible. I do not want to throw any monkey wrenches into the machinery set up by the majority."

Democratic supporters of the economy bill applauded wildly at this evidence of Republican support.

Byrns Battles for Bill.

Majority Leader Byrns tall, spare, his face emaciated and pale, began making his way into the well of the house. The chamber tensed as he began to speak. A vote was near.

"I have complete faith in the President," he said in a low voice.

Then louder:

"It is unfair to deny the President the power he has asked for. It would handicap him."

Then he uttered a thought uppermost in many minds in that chamber.

"If it should go out of here," he added, "that we are unwilling to support the President, what would the country say? This is the President's bill. You cannot vote against it without casting a vote against him."

Every seat was taken and representatives crowded the well as the previous question was moved. Then came the big test. Representative Connery offered a motion to recommit. It was defeated, 272 to 90. The Democratic opponents of the bill turned to leave the chamber. Chairman McDuffie jumped to his feet.

"I demand the yeas and nays," he called out.

A chorus of noes came from revolters who did not wish to be put "on the spot." But the vote was taken.

Measure in Senate Tomorrow.

The senate did not take up the bill today. All the action on that side of the chamber came in the finance committee. The same pressure from the two most powerful lobbies in Washington—the veterans and federal employés—was employed on the senate side as in the house. Messenger boys were run ragged carrying telegrams to senators. John Thomas Taylor, national legislative representative, ducked from senate to house and back again—working for votes.

Late in the day the economy bill was reported to the senate. There were but two dissenting committee votes. Two senators, Tom Connally [Dem., Tex.] and Bennet C. Clark [Dem., Mo.], opposed the measure.

The house economy committee headed by Chairman McDuffie also filed a report with the house in which it declared that an emergency existed which made it mandatory for congress to slash governmental costs if the national credit was to be preserved.

RAINEY INSISTS ON VOTING FOR ROOSEVELT ECONOMY MEASURE

Washington, D. C., March 11.—(AP)—Speaker Rainey today voted for the Roosevelt economy bill.

"Clerk, call my name," the veteran Democrat said.

"Mr. Rainey," said the clerk.

"Aye," Rainey said.

Usually a speaker votes only in case of a tie vote. His name is not on the roll call.

OPEN CAMPAIGN TO AID ROOSEVELT ECONOMY DRIVE

A country wide campaign to marshal support for President Roosevelt's program to gain congressional authority for drastic federal retrenchment was launched yesterday by the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures. Among groups participating in the campaign are the Chicago Association of Commerce, Illinois Mannufacturers association, and Midwest Manufacturers' association.

George W. Rossetter, president of both the National Organization to Reduce Expenditures and of the Association of Commerce, telegraphed the President a message of congratulation and simultaneously dispatched a reminder of their economy pledges to all senators and representatives, who campaigned on an economy platform last autumn.

"Your courageous and forceful stand for national economy entitles you to the profound gratitude of every thinking American," Mr. Rossetter wired the President. "On behalf of the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures, I express wholehearted approval of the sound principles and effective program presented in your message to congress with respect to the finances of the government and assure you of our earnest support."

Mr. Rossetter's reminder to the congressmen is, in part, as follows:

"We confidently expect that you will give wholehearted support in fulfilling the pledge which you made to this organization before your election to work for a reduction of not less than $750,000,000 in current annual expenditures."

Thomas S. Hammond, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, and Samuel M. Hastings, president of the Midwest Manufacturers' association, sent Mr. Roosevelt similar pledges of support.

Give Out Cash for Pay Rolls.

For the first time since the national banking holiday was declared a week ago the larger Chicago banks yesterday were paying out cash for pay roll purposes. Estimates were lacking as to the total amount paid out, but all reasonable demands of corporations with good credit standing were being met.

The pay roll money was being handled through employing corporations. No attempt was being made to cash the salary checks of individuals.

"We have set no certain percentage of pay rolls to be taken care of," said an officer of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company. "We simply ask the company how much it needs to get along on. The percentage varies in different cases. All requests have been reasonable."

At the Northern Trust company an official said that by special arrangement some concerns had been permitted to draw cash on checks payable to currency and marked especially for pay roll purposes, the amount withdrawn not to exceed 25 per cent of a company's pay roll. The First National bank, the Harris Trust and Savings bank, and the City National Bank and Trust company all were reported operating on a similar basis.

Some Outlying Banks Help.

Some outlying banks said that they were aiding old customers in the matter of pay rolls, but the majority were waiting for further instructions.

This supplying of cash for pay rolls was in accordance with instructions given out by Secretary of the Treasury Woodin. Other functions permitted were the supplying of credit for the shipment of perishable foods and hospital supplies and the cashing of checks for welfare purposes. Many banks, including loop institutions, also were paying out currency to customers who were lugging gold out of safe deposit boxes to turn in before the list of gold hoarders is published.

Another clamp on the middle west's financial lid was removed yesterday when the federal reserve bank of Chicago opened its doors for the first time in a week.

Busy Scenes at Reserve Bank.

The reserve bank was a scene of great activity. The main floor lobby was crowded with hoarders bringing back their gold and gold certificates. On the second floor was a steady stream of bankers bringing in applications of their institutions to reopen. These were being forwarded to Washington for approval.

Another second floor office was crowded with representatives of state banks seeking membership in the federal reserve system. The board of directors of the reserve bank met to pass on these petitions and make recommendations to the federal reserve board in Washington, which has final authority.

It was pointed out by clearing house officials that the mere fact that a bank is not among the first group to reopen is in no way to be considered a reflection upon the quality of the bank. Because of the great number of banks applying for permission to reopen it simply has become physically impossible to take care of them all at once, the officials said.

See Delays for State Banks.

This is particularly true of state banks which are not members of the federal reserve system. In such cases neither the federal examiners nor the federal reserve system has information on file. Such information together with recommendations must go to the Washington authorities from the state banking commissioners—in Illinois the auditor of public accounts. Examination by state officials, in turn also takes time.

BANKING BILL AROUSES FIGHT AMONGSENATORS

Robinson Counter Attacks Huey Long's Position.

BY JOHN HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Recovering from their retreat in the face of President Roosevelt's demand for emergency banking legislation, a senate group headed by the radical Huey Long of Louisiana today stung Democratic spokesmen into a fiery defense of the administration's banking program.

In parallel attack, sponsors of some form of a federal bank deposit guarantee laid the groundwork for a drive for that form of banking legislation.

Both groups had the support of letters and telegrams which have been pouring in on Capitol hill by the hundreds, some protesting that the emergency bank law and the treasury program are about to leave state banks out in the cold, some urging that the full power of the federal credit be placed behind deposits in banks of varying degrees of solvency.

Long Fears "Destruction."

Senator Long launched his attack on the emergency law by renewing his demand that the senate pass an amendment under which the President might bring state banks into the federal reserve system as special members.

To open only a selected list of banks, said the Louisiana senator, would "spread fire and destruction throughout the country."

Senator Long denounced the law passed last Thursday as "hasty, half baked legislation." In a bitter attack on Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] Long added:

"It is a fit climax to the glorious accomplishments of the senator in the field of banking legislation that for the first time since Columbus landed every bank in the United States should be closed."

Glass, Long Near Blows.

The debate turned into a hot verbal exchange, that almost developed into a fist fight on the senate floor, immediately following adjournment, between the large Senator Long and the diminutive and peppery Senator Carter Glass.

Confronted with the bulk of the Louisiana senator as he sought to leave the chamber in the company of Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, Senator Glass shot out:

"I'm tired of having him try to make a personal issue of this discussion."

Then he whirled on Senator Long and flung a stinging description of the senator into his face.

"Now wait a minute, see here——" Senator Long began.

Senator Robinson, solid and sizeable, grabbed Senator Glass by the arm and dragged him off the field of pending battle.

Robinson Answers Long.

During the debate Senator Robinson, one of the chief sponsors for the banking law, picked up the challenge flung down by the Louisiana senator.

Robinson called for coöperation from all banks and from the public. Then he recalled that Senator Long was the one who had led the filibuster against the Glass banking bill.

"For many months the senate and house had before it the Glass banking bill which had for its object some of the purposes which, it is now complained, have not been accomplished," Senator Robinson said. "We found here directed against the passage of that measure the very influences and forces which are now appealing for the enactment, as emergency measures, of many of the provisions which they then resisted with all the power that they possessed.

Censure for Some Banks.

"Some of the big banks of the country resisted, secretly and openly and by the use of influences that are to be condemned in any decent assembly, the separation from affiliates and the discontinuance of the use of depositors' funds by banks for speculative purposes. Now, when the opportunity has been made impossible by their influence, they come and ask congress to reform the banking laws of the country.

"This bill that we passed as an emergency measure extends liberal considerations to state banks. It is true that there has been a delay in the opening of banks; but when the smoke clears away, and the tumult and the shouting have died, I think it will be found that wise precautions have been taken; that every possible assistance has been rendered, under the terms of the bill and within the fair discretion of the officers entrusted with authority, to encourage and assist the state banks.

"Criticism is easy; by ill-considered criticism one might retard the very progress which he thinks he is facilitating."

All Lean on Uncle Sam.

Every one attempts to lean on the federal government, the Democratic leader declared. He had received messages from state banking commissioners, he said, urging that the federal government immediately take over every state bank and liquidate its assets.

The senator pointed out that the state banks for years have had the option of coming into the federal reserve system.

Let amendments to the emergency law be considerately proposed, Senator Robinson urged.

"For God's sake," he asserted, "give the government authorities all the opportunity they can have to go forward with the administration of the law in the most effective manner possible."

"Nearly all of the telegrams we are receiving insist upon a form of bank guaranty," Senator Robinson added, "I have no doubt that the people are in sympathy with that idea, and that they believe that if the federal government would guarantee the deposits in all banks, conditions would be very greatly improved, and prosperity promoted.

"In every state where such a policy has been tried it has proved a failure.

Might Bankrupt U. S.

"If the federal government should guarantee all deposits, it would immediately assume a loss of billions and billions of dollars, and as a result of that action the government would be threatened with bankruptcy and ruin. If it limited its guarantee to the solvent banks it would give little help to the public and it would be taking the risk of incurring great liabilities in the future. But, paramount to all that, it would be leaving undone the things which those who are now urging an emergency bank guarantee law are insisting upon.

"These big banks resisted the provision in the Glass bill for a liquidating corporation, to the funds of which they were expected to contribute, but now they have changed their minds, and they are asking congress to guarantee their deposits. I leave senators to draw their own conclusions."

Recalls Hoover's Warning.

Answering a question by Senator James F. Byrnes [Dem., S. C.], Senator Robinson asserted that a federal guarantee of deposits would wreck the prices of government bonds. Senator Glass recalled President Hoover's prediction that a guarantee bill would mean a 50 per cent depreciation of federal securities.

"If you want to wreck your government," Senator Robinson argued, "if you want to pull the last pillar from the temple and bring the ruins down upon your own heads, then enter upon a provision guaranteeing bank deposits in state institutions."

Why, Senator Glass wanted to know, should the government place its credit behind the banking business any more than behind any other form of business.

Senator Fletcher [Dem., Fla.], banking committee chairman, pointed out that he was in favor of a bank guarantee fund to be supported by the banks and the depositors themselves.

Banks Want Something Else.

But that wasn't what the bankers wanted, Senator Glass retorted. Of the messages coming in, he said, 95 per cent wanted a federal guarantee.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], took issue with Senator Robinson's contention that no form of federal guarantee fund would be sound or possible.

Criticizing the emergency bank bill, he declared it would have been much better that the frozen assets of all banks been impounded for ultimate liquidation and participation certificates issued against them. Then, he said, it would have been possible for the banks, the federal reserve banks, and the government, under a system of federal supervision of all banks, to join together and guarantee deposits represented by the liquid portion of the banks.

STATE STREET STORES REPORT ACTIVE TRADE DESPITE MORATORIUM

Yesterday, the eighth day since banks of the city ceased to function, State street buzzed and bustled as of old. The supply of ready cash might be dwindling, but Chicago still had plenty to spend, whether it came from week before last's pay check or out of the old sock. Whatever the source of the cash that was tendered across loop counters, it was sufficient to bring the day's volume surprisingly close to normal for a busy Saturday.

One of the largest State street stores reported that business had been increasing day by day, and estimates in midafternoon yesterday indicated that the company's trade for that day had surpassed a normal business. Credit sales have shown only a slight increase over ordinary times, this store reported, and there has been no rush to open new charge accounts.

Another large establishment reported that though cash sales were off somewhat, the average that had been maintained while the moratorium kept the bank doors closed, had surprised the store executives.

"We're immensely cheered to note how the money that undeniably had been hoarded, is being put back into circulation," one official stated. "The odd pieces of gold and currency handed in show exactly, in many instances, the source of the funds."

"It may interest people to know," said another, "that one customer bought an oriental rug this morning for $1,185, another for $245, and a pad that brought the entire transaction up to $1,452. Cash was paid on the spot for the entire purchase. And that isn't all. Four rugs bought on part payment in the same department totaled $1,465. So you see, they still buy."

CAR LINES PAY $800,000 IN CASH TO EMPLOYES

Approximately $800,000 in cash was distributed yesterday to 15,000 employés of the Chicago Surface Lines. The employés received pay roll drafts as usual, which were cashed at windows set up in each of the sixteen car stations.

The pay roll was met with receipts which had accumulated during the bank holiday. Ordinarily receipts of the company are deposited in banks, but during the last week they were held in the company vaults.

The Commonwealth Edison company is providing moderate cash advances to those of its 8,000 employés who have been unable to cash their semimonthly pay checks.

Found Dead in Garage; Believed Auto Gas Victim

Believed to have been overcome by carbon monixide gas from the motor of his automobile, Ross M. Glass, 4419 Magnolia avenue, manager of the motor bus department of the Willett Teaming company, was found dead in a garage at the rear of 4412 North Racine avenue last night.

HUNDREDS FLOCK TO TREASURER'S OFFICE TO PAY 1931 TAXES

With only four days left in which to pay 1931 real estate taxes before the penalty deadline of March 15, hundreds of small home owners jammed the county building office of County Treasurer McDonough. A total of more than $1,000,000 was paid by 5,000 persons, the treasurer reported late in the afternoon.

To date only $12,000,000 out of $147,900,000 in city real estate taxes for 1931 has been collected. This amounts to approximately 8 per cent of the full bill. George Hagenauer, chief auditor in the treasurer's office, stated that last minute payments by the largest taxpayers in the county were expected to bring payments up to more than 25 per cent by penalty date.

Because of the short time left in which taxes can be paid without the addition of penalties the treasurer's office will remain open from 9 a. m. until 3 p. m. today. Next week the office will open at 8 a. m. and remain open each day until 7:30 p. m.

Indiana Reduces Residence Time to Get Divorces

Indianapolis, Ind., March 11.—[Special.]—The residence requirement for obtaining divorces in Indiana was reduced from five years to one year today. Gov. Paul V. McNutt signed a bill passed by the recent general assembly. The law is not yet in effect.

PRESIDENT SETS THREE DAYS FOR BANK REOPENING

Will Talk to People Tonight by Radio.

formally notified by Secretary Woodin late tonight of the procedure to be followed by the federal government. He suggested that state officials take similar steps with regard to state institutions outside the federal reserve system. His telegram stated that federal reserve officials will not permit the reopening of any bank not able to resume business on a 100 per cent basis and suggested that the state superintendents enforce a similar rule in reopening banks under their jurisdiction.

Applications have been received for admission to the federal reserve system from many nonmember state banks. Indications are not wanting that this is one of the objects of the administration, which is known to be aiming at the establishment of a unified banking system.

As to how many of the 7,000 member banks of the reserve system will be allowed to reopen, treasury officials would not hazard any estimate. Some thought it would be not far from the 5,000 predicted by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia.

The member banks that are not licensed to reopen by Wednesday will be committed to federal conservators, under the terms of the emergency banking act, for reorganization or liquidation. Deposits in such banks will be tied up pending the disposition of the institutions.

The revision of the program, to provide for progressive reopening of the banks by classes was forced by an inundation of protests in behalf of banks that could not qualify for permits by Monday. There was a continuous procession of senators and representatives to the treasury and to the White House in behalf of banks in their constituencies. The universal contention of these petitioners was that the bank that failed to open on Monday, as the original program provided, would be regarded as unsound and would be unable to survive when it did reopen.

Talk for State Banks.

Most of the pleas for postponement of the reopening date were in behalf of state banks outside of the federal reserve system. Representative Henry B. Steagall [Dem., Ala.], chairman of the house banking and currency committee who piloted the emergency banking bill to passage, was a leader in the movement for revision of the program.

He visited Secretary Woodin, in company with Senator Huey Long [Rad., La.].

"It is physically impossible to pass on the condition of the state banks before Monday," Mr. Steagall said. "Banks that do not reopen will be under suspicion, and will be liable to runs of depositors when they do reopen. If the program for reopening on Monday stands, 10,000 state banks will go to the wall."

Mr. Woodin hastened to consult the President. The result was that the device of progressive reopening was decided upon.

Other Protests Received.

There was also throughout the day a running fire of complaints from member banks that reserve banks were defining too strictly the collateral required for issuance of the new asset currency. According to the telegrams received, reserve banks were demanding prime paper as such collateral. The tenor of the complaints was that virtually all the prime paper had already been handed over to the reserve banks or the Reconstruction Finance corporation as collateral for loans.

Banks contended that the emergency banking act provided for the acceptance of paper hitherto ineligible for discount as collateral for the new currency. The collateral specified in the act is government securities, notes, drafts, bills of exchange or bankers' acceptances.

Reserve bank authorities ruled that they would issue the new currency only on the best commercial paper, that which matures quickly and is sound beyond question.

The author of the strict interpretation is said to be Gov. Eugene Meyer of the federal reserve board.

He, it is rumored, is about to be removed from that position by the President. Unless the ruling is liberalized, the flow of new money, with which the banks are to fight off any unusual demands by depositors, will be choked at its source, according to the views telegraphed and telephoned to the treasury by a number of member bank officials.

Will Pay in Currency.

One of the most interesting disclosures of the day was that the United States government is repudiating its promise to pay off its own outstanding securities in gold.

Approximately $694,000,000 worth of government securities mature March 15. Secretary of the Treasury Woodin today told the Federal Reserve banks that they may redeem these issues, but, he added, "no gold or gold certificates shall be paid out."

When the securities were sold by the government a year ago the treasury announced that both the principal and the interest "will be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value."

Anti-Hoarding Bonds Included.

One of the maturing security issues is the anti-hoarding "baby bonds" issued by the government a year ago in conjunction with a campaign to bring money out of hiding. Approximately 33 million dollars' worth of these baby bonds are now held by persons who, when they bought them a year ago, were told that they could collect both their principal and interest in gold.

The other maturing issue is a series of treasury certificates amounting to a little more than 660 million dollars. They also were sold a year ago, but they went mainly to banks and investment houses as do most of the treasury's routine financing issues.

TEXT OF BANK STATEMENT

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[U. P.]—The text of President Roosevelt's statement tonight on bank openings:

"I am glad to be able to announce that technical difficulties which operated to delay the opening of banks, both state and national, have finally substantially been overcome by tireless work on the part of the officials of the treasury and the federal reserve system, and that a definite program has been arranged consisting of successive steps by which banks throughout the country will be opened progressively on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings.

"The secretary of the treasury will issue licenses to banks which are members of the federal reserve system, whether National bank or state, located in each of the 12 federal reserve bank cities, to open Monday morning.

"So also the state authorities having supervision over state banks which are not members of the federal reserve system will be asked to permit any such state institutions located in any one of the 12 federal reserve bank cities to open for business on Monday morning if in their judgment they deem it wise to do so.

"Under this progressive plan, banks located in any city having an active, recognized clearing house association, of which there are 250 cities, will receive licenses for reopening on Tuesday morning, and banks located elsewhere will receive their licenses permitting reopening for Wednesday.

"Time is thus afforded for the necessary shipments of currency provided under the emergency bank act from reserve bank centers to clearing house cities and banks in the smaller communities.

"There were enormous technical problems to be solved before these mechanics could be worked out and before the actual currency could be in the bank when the doors opened.

"The constitution has laid upon me the duty of conveying the condition of the country to the congress assembled at Washington. I believe I have a like duty to convey to the people themselves a clear picture of the situation at Washington itself whenever there is danger of any confusion as to what the government is undertaking.

"That there may be a clear understanding as to just what has taken place during the last two days since the passage of this act it is my intention, over the national radio networks, at 10 o'clock Sunday evening, to explain clearly and in simple language to all of you just what has been achieved and the sound reasons which underlie this declaration to you.

"The fact that banks will be opened under this plan does not mean that any one should draw the inference that the banks opening Monday are in any different condition as to soundness from the banks licensed to open on Tuesday or Wednesday or any subsequent day."

Bandits Terrorize Coal Office Staff; Take $1,545

Six robbers forced ten men and women employés in the offices of the J. J. Wallace Coal company, 3928 North Keystone avenue, to stand with hands raised and eyes closed yesterday while they forced the manager, Frank B. Brandt, 4044 North Kedvale avenue, to open the office safe. The bandits removed $1,500 from the safe and forced Brandt to give them $45.

Act to Protect Teachers' Property from Tax Sale

James Armstrong, executive secretary of the Chicago Principals' club, announced yesterday that he was working with County Judge Jarecki on a plan to protect the property of teachers from sale because of nonpayment of 1931 taxes. The plan amounts to a blanket objection and would be in effect until teachers receive their salaries. A similar plan was agreed upon by Judge Jarecki and County Tax Attorney Hayden Bell last summer in connection with 1930 tax bills. Armstrong said that 1,500 teachers were protected last year.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

AFTER PROHIBITION, WHAT?

The Illinois legislature has repealed the state's prohibition code. There is, therefore, no liquor control whatsoever by Illinois for the present. That is just as well for the immediate present, but the great probability of beer legislation in the present session of congress and the further probability of a repeal of the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution before many months have passed emphasize the need for a code regulating the sale of intoxicants in this state. The fact that prohibition failed as a measure of control does not mean that no control of the sale of liquor is needed. Every one who can remember back to pre-prohibition days knows that control is required, if only for the collection of the revenues which the governments expect from the sale of beer and other drinks.

Fortunately, Illinois does not have to improvise legislation without the experience of this state and of other jurisdictions to guide the legislature. We know that the methods of selling liquor here before prohibition left a good deal to be desired. If the pre-prohibition saloon was preferable to prohibition, as it certainly was, still it could have been improved upon. We know, also, many of us from direct observation, that the system which has been worked out in Quebec is a satisfactory one, there at least.

In Quebec beer is sold at retail in barrooms without hindrance. Wine and beer are also served in public places with meals without hindrance. Stronger drinks are sold only by the bottle and may not be consumed on the premises. The seller is the Quebec liquor commission, a semi-public agency whose profits go to the government. No ration cards are required.

The Quebec system assumes that beer is a convivial drink and that it can be drunk in public places without menacing any one or anything. This assumption we believe to be correct. It assumes, further, that strong drink is just what its name implies. In Quebec the consumption of distilled liquor is discouraged in the sense that no individual makes a profit from its sale and its consumption in saloons is forbidden. This distinction between beverages is founded upon fact and experience and if possible it ought to be adopted in this state, too.

It can be argued, of course, that the American citizen will insist on having whisky in a saloon as soon as he has a saloon and that the same pressure which has broken down prohibition will force strong drink into beer halls. Possibly so; but the present generation, despite its acquired taste for high powered gin, is disposed to look kindly toward reasonable liquor legislation and it is not at all unlikely that public opinion will be far more insistent upon the enforcement of reasonable liquor legislation than it ever was for the enforcement of prohibition or of the previous restraints.

Under the Quebec system the government gets its revenue and the people get what they want to drink, under restrictions which most men regard as reasonable. Further than that, any community which does not want saloons or liquor stores within its limits can keep them out. It may not be possible to adopt the Quebec system in detail, but in its broad outlines it suggests the kind of law which our legislature ought to pass.

A NEW DEAL IN DIPLOMACY.

John Steele cabled recently from London that the British government intended, as soon as the President elect is inaugurated, to get into touch officially and formally with the new administration. The British ambassador has already talked with the new state department. Expedition is obviously desirable from the standpoint of both governments and both countries. At the same time recent experience with conferences between American and British representatives offer less matter for optimism in the American public than we could wish. That the British hand will be played for all it is worth may be taken for granted. For the American hand to be so played will require a reversal of form.

The old diplomatic relationship has not been welcomed or condoned by the American people, nor should have been by farsighted Britons. The long line of diplomatic victories won by British diplomatic finesse and firmness over American ineptness and irresolution may in the long run prove to be victories Great Britain cannot afford to win. Back from tidewater social ambition it has been realistically assessed by the American nation and has impaired the relations which ought to have been maintained between the two nations.

But that is a consideration for British statesmanship, not for ours. The British have a right to press every advantage they possess, and it is the duty of their representatives to do so as far as the ultimate interest of their country may seem to justify. The American representation has a parallel responsibility. We expect it will be met. We believe the new deal which Mr. Roosevelt promised will include a new deal in our foreign relations. We need it badly. We need a diplomacy which is consistently directed by a self-respecting regard for the legitimate interests of the American people. We need diplomats who are less anxious to win the applause of Europe than to deserve the grateful approval of their own countrymen, diplomats inspired by devotion to the United States and proud of their nationality, as are the representatives of the other nations they meet in controversy, not ambitious to earn tablets in Westminster abbey or the approving smiles of foreign drawing rooms.

Such diplomats were the representatives of the American government and people long ago, and well they served the republic. We have had few if any in this apologetic generation. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt can find their like. The American people are self-respecting and stanch. The conduct of their foreign relations has not represented them for years. It has puzzled and irritated every nation with which we have relations, inspiring suspicion and contempt instead of the amity it sought to conciliate. Aimed ostensibly and grandiloquently at "world peace," it has created friction in all our contacts and invited imposition, deception, and aggression. There is no field of American government in more need of a new deal. We hope President Roosevelt will give it.

EDUCATORS AND ECONOMY.

The recent convention of the National Education association at Minneapolis does not encourage confidence in the educators gathered in that assembly. Instead of recognizing the critical financial problems which educational administration, like every other enterprise, public and private, must solve, the speakers seem to have joined in a chorus of protest against what they allege is "an uncritical drive against educational expenditure." This overstuffed monster was kept in the foreground of the proceedings and was the target for all its indignation. Jesse Newton of Columbia declared that we must "spend more, not less, on education," and Glenn Frank of Wisconsin that "educational leadership will be derelict in its duty if it permits economic leadership, without let or hindrance, to do what it will with local, state, and national budgets." Dr. Frank conceded a distinction between "real" and bogus economy, but there was very little said at the convention on behalf of any economy at all. In short, our professional educationalists or educators as reported in the press seem to have talked precisely like all other organizations of spenders as distinguished from payers.

It was not an event conducive to confidence in the disinterestedness or good judgment of the men to whom the education of the nation is intrusted. Their failure to give due recognition to the critical situation of public finances throughout the country, to realize that reduction in public expenditure is not a matter of expediency but of necessity, is as conspicuous as it is ominous. In such an emergency what they are fond of referring to as educational statesmanship, as it was expressed at this convention, showed little practical interest in the problem with which every government and every citizen is struggling, the problem of making both ends meet. The expediency or indeed the possibility of cutting out luxuries and nonessentials, of eliminating courses not essential to the fundamentals of education, consolidation and elimination of schools and other measures equivalent to those which have been adopted in business enterprise everywhere seem to have had little more interest for the convention than retrenchment has for parasitic politics. There apparently is the same dislike of and resistance to retrenchment in the National Education association as in congress, and despite its front of pretended altruism the hard driven American taxpayer will conclude that the reason for this resistance in both bodies is much the same.

The American people has no wish to impair the essentials of education. But it has a right to expect and it demands from educational administration a decent respect for the nation's plight. Little was shown at this convention and its absence will be justifiably resented.

The convention presumably asks the public to accept without reserve the judgment of educators as to what must be spent for education, but its attitude inspires no confidence in educational judgment. On the contrary, it emphasizes the need for intelligent check upon educational enterprise and for a thorough reconsideration of the educational plant and educational aims and methods. No doubt tax supported schools are now subjected to a disagreeable pressure for retrenchment, in some cases ill-advised or of dubious motive. Nevertheless education needs to be restudied from the standpoint of the actual needs of children and youth. Provision for these needs is not endangered by the justifiable demand for retrenchment but by the refusal of this demand. It is educational waste and extravagance that imperil education, not the effort to bring expenditure to conform to economic conditions. For this necessary accomplishment the advice and loyal coöperation of educators should be assured, but the Minneapolis convention is a warning that the advice is not to be very reliable nor the loyal coöperation likely to be forthcoming.

Editorial of the Day

A COMMUNITY ACHIEVEMENT.

[Beloit Daily News.]

In the last 60 days Beloit people again have demonstrated their financial stability and the fundamental stability of this community. They have paid more than three-fourths of the total tax levy on real property. By doing so they have established a mark at which many a community will shoot unsuccessfully.

It was not easy for the people who at the close of business yesterday had paid $491,000 to the city treasurer to pay that great sum of money. Payment would have been impossible except for self-denial in many directions. The taxes were paid because Beloit people recognize their financial obligations and are determined to meet them. Those who have not yet paid will do so when they are able, and they will stint themselves to do so.

We believe the people of this community have the same sense of responsibility with regard to their other obligations, and that when they can earn the money to meet these obligations they will be met. They are that kind of people.

We admire the kind of determination and self-sacrifice that enables a community in these times in 60 days to pay more than 75 per cent of its taxes. It is an achievement of which all of Beloit should be proud.

Better Government

BY WILLIAM E. DODD.

[Professor of American History, University of Chicago.]

I.

No great reforms in a complex and tangled economic life can become wholly effective if applied by corrupt and self-seeking political machines or bosses of the type who have governed American states in these last decades. The best place to speak the truth is in one's own home and no man can read the news of a week or scan the proceedings of the courts for a month without arriving at the conclusion that Chicago is one of the worst governed cities in the world. Nor would such a person have half the damaging information of an expert student of urban politics and administration. It is a fact that the one-time greatest democracy in the world is no longer a democracy when it comes to urban administration and control. The history of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Chicago proves this beyond question. But Chicago is our responsibility.

Nor are the other great industrial states any more effectively or honestly governed. The counties, the commissions, and the boards are generally controlled by men who have little thought of the common welfare. Here as in the cities there is amazing waste and unconscionable self-seeking. In Chicago as in Illinois the voter turns in an election from one boss with his gangs of onhangers and underworld adherents to another boss with similar onhangers and adherents. The party long in office is somewhat worse than the party long out of office. This state of things has grown up under the noses of the great industrial leaders whose structure is about to fall about our heads. If we are to save anything of the democracy of which we have boasted a hundred and fifty years all the great cities and industrial states must be reorganized. At present they probably waste a billion a year.

II.

If one wishes to study an example of genuine reform he has but to visit Cincinnati. There some fifteen years ago their bosses became intolerable and the people rose and put them out of control. The magnificent house of Boss Cox is now pointed out as the decaying reminder of their age of robber-barons. The government of the city is in the hands of a small elective board. This body appoints the more important administrative officials and the daily work of the city is done by civil service appointees subject to removal when disabled or guilty of maladministration or corruption. Under this system Cincinnati has remained solvent nearly four years, in spite of the terrific strain of the economic depression, and has paid every teacher or other official regularly; and at the present moment the taxes are in arrears only 5 per cent. There is no boss, no mayor or cabinet official who has ever made profits out of the city, and everywhere there is a feeling of pride on the part of the public. Is not Chicago equal to some such example? Or does Chicago wish to collapse with its bosses, its self-seeking councilors, its multitudinous and duplicating park boards? It is time to consider.

III.

If the men in the mayor's cabinet or those who have charge of affairs in Springfield really wished to do so the present year would not pass without the beginning of a drastic change. The governor and the assembly, if they set themselves to the task, could not only call a constitutional convention; they could cease appointing or supporting scores, even hundreds, of duplicating and corrupt officials and thus bring a measure of relief before the state and city are reorganized. There is no time to waste.

But the greater work would lie with a constitutional convention which needs to be called, and its members would then need to realize that both the state of Illinois and the city of Chicago, in all their intricate ramifications, must be reconstructed. There should be a redivision of the state according to industrial or agricultural interests into fifteen or twenty areas, each with a member in a single-house elective assembly. The old cumbersome counties would be absorbed in the new districts. The reason of their size and organization no longer exists. The districts should take on an area convenient to modern methods of transportation. There ought to be an elective governor who would supervise the administration of the state, and the governor with the consent of the assembly ought to appoint administrative and judicial officials for long terms and from the people best qualified for the given tasks. Thus thousands of incompetent and self-seeking onhangers of government, and even the courts, would be dispensed with, and these men would not in the future be in a position to set up bosses and dominate elections.

If the city of Chicago were then similarly reorganized and blocked out into proper areas for representation in Springfield or perhaps set up as an independent state, its present council abolished, and a board of nine to fifteen officials set up as an administrative-advisory cabinet, each with a special part of the city's administration under his supervision, there would be a chance for good government and for the people to vote intelligently on issues, taxation, and expansion. The thousand and one hungry and incompetent onhangers and underworld manipulators would be put out of commission. The board of control would almost certainly be guided by the best men in the city. The appointive judges would not be subject to boss manipulation, and crime might really be reduced. It might become safe to walk the streets without a gun. The police might come to regard themselves as public servants; the firemen, here as in Cincinnati, would not fear boss domination; and taxes might again come regularly from a less weary public. There would be something like public order.

IV.

Some people may say this would be the abandonment of democracy. Not so at all. The masses of officials can never be intelligently elected by the voters. When that is tried nominations become decisive; and nomination in the present system is utterly beyond the common man. Democracy consists in the approval or disapproval of issues or the greater officials of a given community, and in elections only when there is an issue. Good administration and honest, prompt judicial procedure are the great desiderata of good government; and good government in a densely populated area is of the very first consideration. Let's hope the present economic depression may serve to work some such reform as I have indicated; if so and it spread over the country these terrible years would not have been without value to us all.

THAT PROVES IT!

MENINGITIS.

EPIDEMIC meningitis is a seasonal disease. While it may be found in all climates and during all seasons, it does not become a worth while community menace until the latter part of winter, and it is far more prevalent in cold climates. In the tropics it is rarely of importance. In colder regions it is apt to flare up in the latter part of February, to continue at a high level during March and into April, and then to decline, reaching a low in June.

The disease is as choosy about weather as it is about climates. It is very apt to follow in the wake of cold, rainy weather. It also is selective among people, picking out especially the young. Young men are preferred over young women. The groups who are most menaced are young soldiers living in barracks and young college students living in dormitories. A large room in which many men sleep on cots and on double deck beds is an ideal breeding place for meningitis. If such a room is heated by a large stove, around which the men congregate to swap stories when it is raining or snowing, the soil for the disease is improved.

In every gathering of young persons there is apt to be one or more healthy people harboring the coccus that causes the disease. If the members of the group are in close association the meningicoccus carrier will infect some others, the microbe finding a home in the nose. Of those so infected only a few get sick and are recognized as cases of meningitis. The majority never go beyond the carrier stage. If the weather is right for the disease, exposure may result in one or more cases and sometimes in an epidemic.

We need to know more than we do about the disease, but the available information is ample to show us what we can do to escape infection. The first is not to sleep in a room occupied by several persons. If this cannot be avoided try to separate the beds as much as possible. If the occupancy of the room is dense and beds must remain close together, try the following plan of alternation: the head of bed No. 1 being to the east, that of No. 2 should be to the west. When possible put some sort of screens between the beds, so as to screen off the head areas if all the beds have the heads to the east. If no other screening is possible put the day clothes on a chair and place that improvised screen in such a position so that it will protect one sleeper's head from that of the nearest other sleeper.

Keep away from the crowd around the stove. If it is raining put on a slicker and take the weather. Out is safer than in. In so far as possible avoid using a common drinking cup, or spoons, forks, cups, dishes, and towels shared by the members of the group.

SCABIES.

H. L. K. writes: 1. What is scabies, or seven year itch?

2. Does it take that long to cure?

3. Is it curable?

REPLY.

1. A form of chronic skin trouble, caused by a burrowing parasite. The favorite location of the eruption is between the fingers. It is catching.

2. If one goes about it in the right way it can be cured in seven days. If treated in the wrong way, or untreated, it may last longer than seven years.

3. Yes.

ALUMINUM.

Mrs. W. writes: Is it in any way harmful to cook with aluminum or if there are any foods as tomatoes or apples which could be in any way made harmful by cooking them in an aluminum utensil?

REPLY.

It is not.

Trade wars are rather ruthless and reckless.

NEURALGIA.

Mrs. T. F. M. writes: I read your article on facial neuralgia and I want to tell you that I doubt if any one ever had it much worse than I did. I now take a teaspoonful of Epsom salts every morning before breakfast and I have no more facial neuralgia.

REPLY.

It is too much to expect that this treatment would cure all cases or even a large percentage of them.

EXERCISE MAY HELP.

B. K. writes: What can be done to correct my left hip? It is lower than the right one. I am 16 years old.

REPLY.

If one hip is lower than the other the probability is that you have a lateral spinal curvature, unless you have a short leg. Has any one examined you to find out what is wrong? This may call for X-rays. Corrective gymnastics done in a gymnasium under a competent director should be of service.

SETTLING ESTATE.

Chicago, March 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Mother died leaving an estate of about $8,000 in bonds, notes, cash, and real estate. It is now one year one month and twelve days since probation of the will. Have not heard anything concerning same to date. Will said real estate should be sold within two years and that all property was to be equally divided among the heirs. What is the executrix [1] waiting for? 2. Can I as an heir demand my share of cash, bonds, notes, etc., at once? 3. Must it be given out all together? H. D.

1. The executrix is the best source of information.

2. Of course you can demand. Your chances of enforcing your demand depend on the facts as to reasons for delay.

3. See preceding answers.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

APARTMENT LEASE.

Chicago, March 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—The apartment building in which we live has gone into the hands of receivers. Our lease will expire Sept. 30, 1933. 1. We cannot afford to pay as much rent as the lease calls for. Can we break our lease [2] inasmuch as the party we signed the lease with is not the owner any more? E. F. P.

1. This fact would not release you.

2. On principle, we would say that since the theory on which the receiver is in possession is a denial of the title on the landlord with whom you dealt that the receiver is not in a position to enforce your lease until there has been the equivalent of a new lease between him and you, but there seems to have been some trial court decisions tending to hold that the receiver can, at his option, affirm or disaffirm existing leases. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, March 2.—[Friend of the People.]—1. My husband was born in Canada in 1906. His father died in 1918. His mother married an American citizen in November, 1923, in Canada, coming to the United States directly after the marriage. Are my husband, and his sister, and brothers citizens of the United States? 2. If my husband is not a citizen, did I lose my citizenship when I married him in July, 1930? I was born in the United States. W. J. G.

1. It is assumed that the father and mother of the husband were Canadian citizens. The mother did not become a citizen by marrying a citizen of the United States in 1923. Hence, it does not appear that either the natural father or the mother of the husband became citizens of the United States and, therefore, the children are not citizens.

2. The writer, being a native born citizen, did not lose her citizenship by marrying her husband in July, 1930, even though he may be an alien.

FRED J. SCHLOTFELDT.
Dist. Dir. U. S. Dept. of Labor.

SHOULD HAVE A LAWYER.

Chicago, March 3.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—About a year ago my brother and I owned some property. Later I sold it to him. 1. I gave him a clear title to it on a sheet of paper that we made out ourselves and had it approved by a notary public. Now I find [2] I am being sued. 3. Was our transaction legal? 4. If I lose can judgment be put on said property? N. S. S.

1. We cannot give an opinion as to the effect of this instrument without having its wording before us.

2. Sued for what? What does the plaintiff claim?

3. We are not in a position to say.

4. Depends on facts that are not before us.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 12, 1917.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—A tornado swept over central eastern Indiana late yesterday, killing more than a score of persons at Newcastle, two children in Wayne county, near Richmond; three persons at New Lisbon, three at Moreland, three at Mount Summit, and at least three persons at Cincinnati, whence the storm proceeded after crossing the state line into Ohio. The total number of injured in Newcastle will run over 200, some of whom are probably fatally hurt. The damage will total well over $1 000,000 at Newcastle and several thousand dollars in Wayne county. Looting among the ruins at Newcastle was reported to Mayor Watkins late at night. Over 200 men were sworn in as deputies to guard the wrecked section of the town.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The establishment of what is widely regarded as a military dictatorship stands foremost among the plans being worked out by President Wilson and his advisers to prepare the nation for a possible war with Germany. If the President succeeds in putting his measures through congress at the forthcoming session, despite tremendous Republican and some Democratic opposition, he will be empowered, even before the advent of war, to suppress all exposures of inefficient and inadequate defense policies and all criticism of the administration.

LONDON.—Gen. Frederick Stanley Maude, in command of the entente forces in Mesopotamia, telegraphed the welcome news for the British of the occupation early yesterday of the city of Bagdad, the chief Turkish city in Mesopotamia and formerly the capital of the empire of the Caliphs. No details of the capture have been received, Gen. Maude's story of the operations carrying events only up to the afternoon of March 11, when the British, after effecting a surprise attack and crossing of the Diala and bridging the Tigris, had driven the Turks back to within three miles of Bagdad. It is evident, however, that the Turks have been unable to offer any serious resistance since the fall of Kut-el-Amara.

HAVANA, Cuba.—Former Ambassador James W. Gerard and his party stepped ashore in Havana early yesterday after an exciting voyage of 4,500 miles from Corunna, Spain. Warned by a prominent German before his departure from Berlin that his boat was to be sunk Mr. Gerard, at Corunna, armed himself and party and was prepared to fire on any U-boat crew that attempted to attack the Infanta Isabel. Except for the suspicious actions of a steamer which hovered around the Gerard ship when the latter was three days out from Spain and the passing of a Spanish submarine no peril was apparent.

OTHER WAR NEWS.—Petrograd says the Russian troops have occupied the town of Sahna, in northwestern Persia, and are pursuing the Turks in the direction of Bisitun, fifty miles southwest of Hamadan. Berlin admits the retirement of German troops from Irles and neighboring positions north of the Ancre river after the British attacks several days ago. Count von Bernstorff, former German ambassador to the United States, on arriving at Christiania on board the steamship Frederik VIII, said he was ignorant of the political developments of the last four weeks and was not in a position, therefore, to make any comment regarding them. "It is news to me," he remarked when told of the disclosure of Germany's efforts to make an alliance with Mexico.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Enough explosives to blow up every ship and building at the Philadelphia navy yard and to wreck the drydock have been shipped into League island since the break with Germany, it was learned. Two persons were arrested in connection with this plot.

CHICAGO.—Six men are under arrest charged with complicity in a plot to blow up with nitroglycerin the Bismarck garden, North Halsted and Grace streets. The plot originated, it is said, in the council of union waiters, formerly employed in the gardens, who have been on strike for a month. When it was found the treasury of the union did not contain enough money to pay for the dynamiting, it is said, affiliated unions in Peoria, Cincinnati, and several other cities agreed to supply the necessary funds.

MILK AND EDUCATION.

Oconto Falls, Wis., March 2.—There is a singular similarity in the cry of the milk strikers of Wisconsin and the cry of the educators. The milk strikers say their product is of vital importance and entitled to the cost of production. They think city people can pay the price if they only want to.

"School Chiefs Attack Cut in Their Revenue," says a TRIBUNE headline. The convention at Minneapolis received a committee report calling on teachers and superintendents to take a militant attitude against efforts to take support from public schools. Educators from the tone of their remarks seem to think that taxpayers can support schools in the style to which they have become accustomed, that the only trouble is that people do not realize the vital importance of education, and that the economy idea is a sort of fad.

Human nature is the same wherever found. Both milk producers and educators are profoundly interested in their own welfare. Milk producers should first of all be interested in seeing that the babies in cities have their milk supply. Educators should remember that the greatest teachers of all time got no revenue at all, but the results of their teaching were not impaired thereby.

The best thing for both milk producers and educators to do just now is to carry on. Educators most certainly will get tax revenue in so far as there is any. To those of us who are in dire economic straits—and that means a large percentage of the population—the cry of the educators against cuts in revenue merely reveals a deep ignorance of economic conditions, and we are inclined to suspect their fitness for leadership. We feel the same way about the milk strikers.

My husband and I both hold A. B. degrees and life certificates to teach. For ourselves we can say this: Our fourteen years on the farm have taught us more economics than any college could teach us, and one of us took courses in economics, too. If college training could produce economic leadership then our difficulties would have been solved long ago. The country is full of college graduates. But leadership and vision are native qualities and function with or without college training.

We would like to see President Glenn Frank run a paper mill in Wisconsin so as to produce plenty of tax revenue for education. Then we would call him a real leader. DAIRY FARMER'S WIFE.

HE'S GLAD.

Winfield, Ill., March 2.—The morning papers of this date indicate that the Friends of Music are to abandon the plan of building a permanent building in Burnham park.

Judging from the picture of the proposed building as published in THE TRIBUNE it is just as well the enterprise has failed. Such a building should not be permitted to stand near such fine structures as the Field museum, aquarium, and the planetarium.

The monstrosities now erected and in course of erection will soon disappear. Their memory will be like a hideous nightmare. The Century of Progress will be remembered not as a thing of beauty but as a horrible example of jazz architecture, quite in keeping with the present times but not for pleasant memories.

Such huge, unnatural, distorted buildings have never been erected before and, thank God, never will be again.

LOVER OF BEAUTY.

PARKED TRUCKS.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 25.—One reason the motor lines have an edge on the railroads is found in the fact that they may drive to their Chicago terminal and park their big, clumsy trucks on our city streets. How many places they do this in Chicago I can't say, but I have noticed repeatedly that at times it is impossible to drive through Campbell avenue just south of Madison street on account of trucks owned by the Michigan Freight Lines being parked on both sides of Campbell avenue.

Would it not be well for the police commissioner to order the precinct captains to look into this matter?

J. A. CLARK.

LIQUOR, THEN AND NOW.

Chicago, March 2.—You published an editorial in THE TRIBUNE, Sunday, Feb. 26, which attracted my attention and which merits the approval of all your readers. It was written in defense of your convictions in regard to prohibition.

For many years before prohibition I was engaged in the wholesale liquor business. Since 1920 I have been connected with companies engaged in the wholesale distribution of medicinal liquor and alcohol to druggists, doctors, and dentists holding federal permits to purchase granted by the United States government.

From my thirty years of experience I am prepared to state that the distribution of liquors during the years before prohibition through bars, restaurants, and saloons [bad as some of them were] caused less graft, less misery, less crime, less loss of life, less corruption, less contempt for law, order, and decency than such so-called legal distribution has caused under the childish and apparently unenforceable provisions of the Volstead act.

I could write volumes on this subject, but what is the use? All thinking people who have had an opportunity to judge the matter from known facts know that prohibition does not prohibit. Very little of the liquor distributed for medicinal purposes since 1920 has been used legally. Prohibition officials and enforcement officers know this if they know anything about their jobs. Thousands of seizures of medicinal liquors, the trials of many more thousands for the unlawful possession and sale of medicinal liquors show the illegal traffic in liquor under the prohibition law.

Any one who has been in any way connected with the distribution of liquor during the last thirty years will probably agree that before the eighteenth amendment went into effect 95 per cent of the total sales of liquor, alcohol, wine, and beer were legal, and that since 1920 95 per cent or more of the distribution to the consumer has been illegal. Does this mean anything to the reformers? Not a single thing. Why try to convince those who will not be convinced? Why use reason or logic on those who have no use for it? What is the use? R. A. P.

NO NEED TO PIONEER.

Washington, Ind., March 3.—The article of E. E. Torrel in Sunday's TRIBUNE relative to location on northern Wisconsin cutover lands should be well considered by persons wanting farms. The person wanting farms now has the most opportune time in many years to get a desirable farm, well located, on such payments, more favorable to the buyer, as were never known. Well improved, productive farms can be had in any of the central states at prices that are much less, in many cases, than the improvements cost and on payments very little more than the annual rental of the farm if rented. Any one able to buy wild land and improve it is able to buy such a farm ready for cultivation, many of them, the greater portion in meadows and pastures set and producing, with producing orchards and small fruits, everything ready for operation, barns and buildings for stock and chickens, the fields ready for the plow and seeding, in old settled communities, near church and school, with improved roads and all the modern conveniences of the community. Farms can be had from small acreage to half sections or more. W. W. MARMADUKE.

AT THE BLACKBOARD.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Your cartoon in today's TRIBUNE depicting a lesson on balancing a budget is certainly well put. The dunce class represents some of our tax eaters who are amazed that 1 minus 1 equals 0. My own thoughts naturally go back to the schoolroom, which prompts me to suggest that the school teachers should have been included in this cartoon because they do not seem to understand why they cannot collect more salary than the taxpayer is able to pay.

RITCHIE PLEADS FOR U. S. HELP TO STATE BANKS

Critical Emergency Faces Them, He Says.

Baltimore, Md., March 11.—[Special.]—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie tonight issued the following statement on the banking situation:

"I am in hearty accord with President Roosevelt and the national administration in efforts to relieve the banking crisis, but I feel it my duty to call attention to the effect which the law enacted Thursday as interpreted officially is almost certain to have upon the state banks.

"There are more than 7,000 state banks in the country, with more than 0 per cent of the deposits of the nation. Nearly two hundred such banks are in my own state of Maryland, and to their hundreds of thousands of city and county depositors I owe the duty of speaking plainly in what I believe is a critical emergency for them.

"The new federal currency provided by the federal law is solely for the benefit of national banks and the federal reserve member banks. The state banks are even excluded from applying to the federal reserve banks direct for the use of the new currency, except for 90 day loans on government bonds, which privilege applies to all corporations and individuals.

Hold Funds of Millions.

"The deposits in the state banks constitute the livelihood and the savings of millions and millions of the people of this country, in the city and on the farm, and yet not a single one of these state banks to which millions of depositors have entrusted their all, with the exception of those banks which are members of the federal reserve system, can receive one dollar of the vast sum of two billion dollars which the national administration has provided for the relief of the people, unless admitted to membership in the federal reserve system, which will take time, running into months.

"The only privilege allowed the state banks in the new law is the opportunity of asking the Reconstruction Finance corporation to purchase, if the President and the secretary of the treasury approve, an issue of their preferred stock.

"The exercise of this privilege necessarily will take time. It will be of value in the case of larger state institutions, but it is hard to imagine it being helpful to many of the town or rural banks of the country.

Charges Discrimination.

"No matter how solvent they are or how sound their collateral may be, the nonreserve state banks everywhere are denied the privilege of even applying for loans of the new emergency currency from the federal reserve banks. That tremendous and life-saving privilege is accorded to the national banks and the federal reserve member banks alone.

"How is it going to be possible under these circumstances for the state banks to survive this handicap and this discrimination? The answer is plain. It will be difficult for them to survive in the face of the great federal aid allotted among their competitors.

"I am not opposing this aid to the national and reserve member banks. I believe it is essential in this crisis. But it is just as essential for the state banks as it is for the national and reserve member banks.

Believes U. S. Will Act.

"I cannot believe that an administration whose brains and heart have conceived this relief for the depositors in our national and reserve member banks will not extend it to the depositors of the state banks, too.

"There is neither the right nor the necessity to sacrifice or put in jeopardy these established repositories of the people's money. There is neither the right nor the necessity to imperil the savings and the resources of these millions of depositors."

ROBBER SUSPECT BATTLES POLICE; GETS 2 BULLETS

A bandit suspect was shot below the heart and in the abdomen last night when, with four police guns leveled at him and a companion, he drew out his own revolver in an evident attempt to escape.

Removed from the Woodlawn hospital to the Bridewell hospital, where he is expected to die, the gunman identified himself as Lawrence Gottfried, 27 years old. His companion, Elliott Graham, 22, of 1544 East 65th street, said Gottfried's first name is George and that he lives at 7308 Kenwood avenue.

Gottfried and Graham were seen entering a stolen car in front of 6324 Stony Island avenue, the car answering the description of one used in several chain store robberies during the night. Sergt. Joseph Conley and his squad surrounded the pair, guns drawn. Gottfried suddenly whipped out his own weapon and pressed it against Policeman Charles Cohen. Cohen proved to be quicker, shooting him twice.

GIANT DIRIGIBLE IS CHRISTENED

The U. S. S. Macon, sister dirigible of the Akron, which was christened yesterday by the wife of Admiral William A. Moffett, aeronautical chief of the navy.

NAVY GREETS NEW AIRSHIP; CALLED MACON

Georgia Girls Help at Christening.

Akron, O., March 11.—[Special.]—Before a crowd of several thousand persons the U. S. S. Macon, companion airship of the Akron, was christened in the huge Goodyear-Zeppelin hangar here this afternoon by Mrs. William A. Moffett, wife of Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the navy's bureau of aeronautics.

The ceremony was brief, with the great airship officially receiving identification as Mrs. Moffett pronounced the words, "I christen thee Macon." She pulled a red, white, and blue cord which released a hatch high above and freed forty-eight pigeons. While a band played the national anthem the airship was "air born" by being allowed to rise a few feet in the air and then was pulled back into position by a ground crew.

Georgia Girls Help.

Mrs. Moffett was accompanied to the christening platform by nine young women of Macon, Ga., the city for which the ship was named, and by Admiral Moffett and several others. A silver service for the Macon was presented to the new cruiser's captain, Commander Alger H. Dresel, by Mayor G. Glenn Toole of Macon.

Short speeches were made. There were a congratulatory telegram from President Roosevelt to Admiral Moffett and the admiral's response. Both were read by P. W. Litchfield, head of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation. The President's telegram read:

"It must be a source of gratification to you because of the splendid and continuous record you have made as chief of the bureau of aeronautics since it was created in 1921, to be able today to complete the navy's five year aviation program by christening the U. S. S. Macon at Akron, O. I congratulate you."

Admiral Moffett replied:

"Such a commendation from my commander in chief is deeply appreciated and inspiring not only to me but to the entire aviation service of the navy."

Trial Flights March 30.

Trial flights for the Macon, depending on weather conditions, are tentatively set for March 30. On acceptance by the navy the airship is to fly directly to the new naval hangar at Sunnyvale, Cal. Test flights will require about six weeks.

The Macon marks the completion of two similar naval airships for which congress appropriated $8,000,000 in 1927.

The Akron was christened in August, 1931, and launched the following month. Both airships have helium gas capacities of 6,500,000 cubic feet.

ROUT PROWLERS, GUARD HOME OF JUDGE M'GOORTY

A police guard was posted last night near the home of Judge John P. McGoorty of the Superior court, at 929 East 45th street, following the discovery of prowlers at the rear. A neighbor saw two men at the rear garage and notified Judge McGoorty, who reported to Hyde Park police. The men fled through the front yard, the judge said, when they became aware they had been discovered. Last year a bomb was exploded in front of the judge's home, blinding a 17 year old boy and also injuring a 16 year old girl.

SMOOT, PRIVATE CITIZEN, PRAISES ROOSEVELT PLAN

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 11.—(AP)—Reed Smoot, for 30 years a senator from Utah, came home today, a private citizen, warm in his indorsement of President Roosevelt's program involving dictatorial powers and stringent government economy.

"We are in a war against the economic conditions of the world," he said in a newspaper interview. "The President must have far reaching authority."

Smoot reiterated previous statements that he will devote himself to his duties as a member of the twelve apostles of the Latter Day Saints' church and his personal affairs.

"I have had numerous offers of $25,000 a year positions, but I'm through with the east," he asserted.

WISCONSIN FIRST STATE TO ISSUE ITS OWN SCRIP

$10,000,000 New Money for State Banks.

Madison, Wis., March 11.—[Special.]—Manufacture of $10,000,000 in state scrip was begun in Wisconsin today under supervision of the state banking review board which set out immediately upon its program designed to put banking in this state on a sound footing.

Wisconsin will be the first of the forty-eight sovereign units to have a temporary inflation of negotiable paper and is the only state thus far to outline a detailed program for rehabilitation of state banks that are not associated with the federal reserve system, members of the board said.

The "liquid assets" of each bank will be pledged for the new state "money," much on the plan of the federal reserve system.

Accountants Begin Work.

Under direction of Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the banking board, and Arthur C. Kingston, banking commissioner, thirty accountants today were assigned to studies of state bank assets. They began a thorough appraisal of several large Milwaukee banks and will be directed next to study condition of other key banks throughout the state. Eventually they will have scrutinized assets of each of the 600 banks.

Meanwhile a Neenah company is manufacturing a durable paper water marked with the state's seal. A Milwaukee lithographing firm is preparing a scrip design and has given assurance it will be ready for use Monday when the scrip paper will arrive in Milwaukee.

Choose Scrip Colors.

The scrip will be printed Monday. A grey will be used for $1 notes, canary for $5 units, blue for $10 and orange for $20. The entire publication is to be sent to Madison Tuesday where it will be held in vaults of the Capital City Bank building from which it will be distributed to state banks by Wednesday, providing the scheduled program is maintained.

Crowley announced the state rented the Capital City Bank building which has stood vacant since the banking institution formerly occupying it was told to cease functioning about two years ago. Persons who purchased bonds for erection of the bank building are hoping the new tenant will give new life to the defaulted securities.

The initial issue of scrip will approximate 3 per cent of the total deposits held by banks which are to use it. Crowley indicated it might be necessary to call for a second printing. The program of the banking board would allow each bank to distribute scrip up to 5 per cent of its deposits and even more if assets are sufficiently sound.

Accepted at Par.

Each scrip note will have printed on it "State of Wisconsin Bank Scrip." Below this heading there will be the following inscription:

"This certificate will be accepted at par from bearer for deposit or in settlement of indebtedness by any Wisconsin state bank, mutual savings bank, or trust company issuing scrip pursuant to the provisions of section 220.20 Wisconsin statutes, series 1933."

BOETTCHER PLANS TO VISIT RANCH HOUSE PRISON

Denver, Colo., March 11.—(AP)—The isolated ranch hideout near Chamberlain, S. D., where Charles Boettcher II., Denver broker, was held prisoner by kidnapers for $60,000 will be visited by Boettcher tomorrow, Chief of Police A. T. Clark announced tonight.

Weather permitting, Boettcher will leave early in an airplane of the Colorado National Guard. He will be accompained by Detective M. D. Corney.

Chief Clark said the purpose of the visit is to have him identify the house in which he was held by his captors. Boettcher told police he had made many identification marks while he was held, including a hole he burned with a cigaret in a rug.

Meanwhile law enforcement agencies in the United States and Canada continued the search for Verne Sankey and Gordon Alcorn, alias Elkhorn, suspected of leading the kidnaping gang.

Decision Wednesday in Judge Hayes' Alimony Case

Judge Philip J. Finnegan announced yesterday that he would render judgment next Wednesday in the suit of Mrs. Grace Houston of 1400 Lake Shore drive, to collect $1,350 back alimony from Municipal Judge Howard Hayes. Judge Hayes, who is asking a reduction in his $225 a month alimony on the ground that his salary has been cut, testified that his debts now total $7,620.

FILM PRODUCERS CLOSE STUDIOS IN DEBATE ON PAY

Hollywood, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—As a result of official word from all except one of the union locals representing motion picture studio craftsmen, film producers tonight declared a temporary shutdown of all studios for Monday.

While the studios remain closed on Monday producers will debate whether to continue the shutdown or to parley further with the unions in an effort to obtain their approval of a salary cut for eight weeks. Producers have obtained signed agreements from 97 per cent of their unorganized studio workers accepting a 50 per cent salary cut for eight weeks.

The uions refused to accept a similar proposal and held out for payment of their wage scale as agreed. Some of the unions' pacts with producers expire next week, and there were predictions the studios would seek to reopen on an open shop basis.

John Simpson, 29 years old, 554 North Parkside avenue, a night watchman, was overpowered and bound early yesterday by four robbers in the office of the Druley-O'Brien Coal company, at 4619 Maypole avenue. As the bandits prepared to blow the office safe, however, Simpson escaped. He ran to a restaurant across the street and called police. The safe contained $800. When a squad from the Austin station arrived the bandits had fled.

ONLY 6 IMPORTS VITAL NEEDS OF UNITED STATES

Other Necessary Articles Produced Here.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—America's billion dollar import trade could be cut to just six vitally necessary articles.

Out of the myriad types of goods which flow into this country each year, only a half dozen are absolute necessities which have no substitute produced at home, which could not be produced here or which are not already produced in this country.

These six articles, listed by the United States department of commerce, are platinum, tin, manila, sisal, kapok and rubber. In 1931, the latest year for which detailed figures are available, they made up only 6 per cent of Uncle Sam's total bill for imports. If America's importations were suddenly reduced to those six commodities, cotton, the most important export, could pay for them all twice over.

Coffee, Tea on List.

Another ten articles which cannot be produced here or for which no substitute can be produced are listed by the commerce department as only semi-necessities. They are coffee, tea, cocoa, camphor, cinchona bark, cork, opium, cloves and pepper.

Cataclysmic upheavals would transform American economic and social life if imports came to include only the unproducable necessities or even the semi-necessities listed by the department. But it could be done.

Commerce experts have sorted out not only the products which America must have, but also those now being imported which could be produced domestically under favorable price conditions, which could be replaced by American substitutes and which are partly produced at home already.

Together these categories, which embrace only 60 articles in all, are half of the skeleton of American foreign trade. Altogether their cost in 1931 did not make up more than 56 per cent of what the United States actually spent on imports.

Cotton Revenue Largest.

The other half of the skeleton is the 10 leading American exports, cotton, petroleum, automobiles and other vehicles, industrial machinery, tobacco, fruits and nuts, grains, nonferrous and nonprecious metals, and coal and related fuels. They are the goods bringing the most money, in the order named, into this country.

If foreign trade were suddenly cut to the skeleton, if America bought only the 60 commodities on the commerce department list and sold only the 10 types of goods now most largely sold abroad, she would still have had a 286 million dollar favorable balance of trade on the basis of 1931 figures. Her exports would have been worth about $1,464,400,000 and her imports about one billion, 178 million dollars.

All Are Raw Materials.

Imports tell the same story. All of them are raw materials and most of them, not being native, would have to be bought regardless of the country's economic age. Others of the essential imports, however, disclose the exhaustion or outstripping of natural resources known as economic middle age. For instance, America, the land of lush forests, must import pulp wood.

None of the six absolutely irreplaceable imports—platinum, tin, manila, sisal, kapok, and rubber—ever have been produced in this country, however. They play a very small part in America's actual import business. In 1931 they represented only $51,549,000 in a total import trade of $2,090,635,000. America is dependent upon the United Kingdom, Russia, Colombia, Mexico, Dutch East Indies, Malaya, and the Philippines for them.

Most costly import on the department's whole list is sugar. It is classified as a necessity which we import but which we also produce in some measure at home. It comes largely from Cuba and the Philippines and its exclusion is now the aim of proceedings before the United States tariff commission.

Silk, a semi-necessity for which American products could be substituted, commands the second largest import business among the articles listed. China, Japan, and Italy ship it into this country. Coffee, an irreplacable semi-necessity is third in importance, and newsprint, a necessity produced in part at home, is fourth.

Taken together these four imports made up exactly a third of the money spent abroad for imports during 1931. They composed 59 per cent of the cost of goods listed by the department as necessities and semi-necessities. After them in importance comes rubber and wood pulp.

No Substitutes for These.

Here is the department's full list of the vital imports, articles which cannot be produced in the United States and for which no substitute is available:

Necessities—Platinum, tin, manila or abaca, sisal and henequin, kapok, rubber.

Semi-necessities—Coffee, tea, cocoa, camphor [natural, cinchona bark, cork and manufactures, opium, cloves [unground], pepper [unground].

Articles which could be produced in the United States under favorable price conditions:

Necessities—Wattle bark, asbestos, unmanufactured; manganese ore, chrome ore or chromite, nickel, tungsten ore and concentrates.

Semi-necessities—Flax fibre, antimony, cobalt, argols, tartar and wine lees; goat and kid skins, tung oil, camphor [synthetic].

Articles for which a related domestic product can be substituted:

Necessities—Quebracho, Myrobalans fruit, valonia, gambier, shellac.

Semi-necessities—Copra, coconut oil, palm oil, silk [raw], jute, burlaps, damar, kauri, vanilla beans.

Articles for which the United States is largely dependent upon imports, although considerable quantities are now produced in the United States:

Necessities — Sugar, cattle hides, pulpwood, wood pulp, newsprint, magnesite, sodium nitrate, wool and mohair, flaxseed, pyrites, quicksilver, creosote oil, potassium and its compounds [except argols], potash fertilizers.

Semi-necessities — Sheep and lamb skins, kip and calf skins, iodine.

SENATOR DAVIS IS STRICKEN ON PLANE; UNDERGOES OPERATION

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 11.—(AP)—The condition of United States Senator James J. Davis [Rep., Pa.], who underwent an operation for appendicitis, was described as "satisfactory" tonight by his physician, Dr. J. W. Shirer.

Dr. Shirer said Davis is also suffering from diabetes.

"If we can control the diabetes everything will be all right," Dr. Shirer declared.

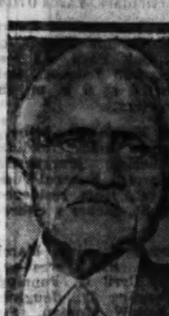
Davis was stricken in an airplane yesterday as he sped from Washington to Pittsburgh on business. Dr. Shirer performed the operation early today.

Davis was to have gone on trial in New York Monday on federal lottery charges. Louis Mead Treadwell, assistant United States attorney, said in New York the government will insist that the trial proceed as soon as Davis recovers. Charles J. Margiotti, Davis' counsel, stated the defense is also anxious to get the trial over.

PRESIDENT CALLS EDDIE SAVOY TO THE WHITE HOUSE

State Department Says Farewell, Too.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Eddie Savoy, 77-year-old Negro who has served secretaries of state, first as page and then as messenger, since the days of Hamilton Fish, 64 years ago, retired from active service today with the congratulations of President Roosevelt, who summoned him to the White House to say a personal good-by.



EDDIE SAVOY.

Savoy has been officially on the retired list for years, was retained in active service by Secretary Stimson. He could have continued with Secretary Hull, but decided that, as he expressed it, his legs were not as good as they once were, so he had better rest.

Sends White House Car.

When President Roosevelt heard that this was Savoy's last day, he sent a White House car for him and had him come to the White House, just across the street, for a farewell.

Accompanied by Clinton E. MacEachran, chief clerk of the state department, Savoy was greeted cordially by the President, who had known him first years ago when Mr. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy. Mr. Roosevelt told him how sorry he was to have him go, and invited him to drop in to the White House any time for a call.

This story was told by others, not from Savoy, who said he couldn't remember what was said.

Would Retain Flavor.

"If I could," he said, "I wouldn't tell because it might spoil the flavor."

Savoy said he intended to write his memoirs, but he had not decided with whom he would collaborate. "A newspaper correspondent saw me the other day," he added, "and wanted to help me out. I said to him: 'Well, I'll think it over; I've got to have most of the money.'"

On leaving the White House the photographers asked him to pose. He agreed to this, saying:

"You may snap me, gentlemen, on one condition—that you don't show the shape of my legs. I am like Richard the Third in that respect."

Present Him with Purse.

Prior to leaving the department, Secretary Hull, Under Secretary Phillips and their associates bade Savoy farwell and presented a purse made up by department officials.

His associate messengers gave him a chair, the presentation speech being made by James O. Holmes, who has served since the days of Secretary Elihu Root.

"We, your co-workers," Holmes said, "have been fortunate to come into the department of state and find you with your sterling character, backed by your honest endeavor—your great ambition to make the best of that which has been assigned to you to do.

Serves 21 Secretaries.

"To find in you the high appreciation and fulfillment of your duty. You have been faithful and have had the honor of serving twenty-one secretaries of state which is an extraordinary record. We your co-workers congratulate you and take great pleasure in presenting you this chair as a token of our desire that you may have peace and comfort until you have played your last part for humanity."

PETRILLO BARS NONUNION MUSIC IN WEST PARKS

James Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, who recently became a west park commissioner, yesterday announced a ban on all nonunion music in the park system.

At an organization meeting of the park board a month ago President Harry Joseph appointed Petrillo chairman of the recreation committee. As such, the czar of the musicians' union is virtually dictator of the way that functions are to be carried on in the eighteen recreation halls and refectories in the system. Commissioners Samuel Kostelny and James O'Keefe are also on the committee.

One of the first results of Petrillo's edict was that a group of high school students were forced to abandon their Wednesday night dances in the La Follette community house at Laramie avenue and Hirsch street. The group had been dancing to music from a nonunion band.

"They get the hall for nothing," asserted Petrillo, "why shouldn't they pay for their music? For various charitable organizations and ladies' bunco parties I make a special rate for the music, almost half of what it would be ordinarily."

JAPAN WARNS CHINA TO STAY OUT OF JEHOL

Threatens to Send Army South of Great Wall.

TOKIO, March 11.—(AP)—Whether there is war or peace in north China, where there are sizable colonies of Americans and other foreigners, depends upon the moves made by the Chinese, a war office spokesman declared today.

The Japanese consider that a new situation has developed in China with the resignation of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang as the chief warlord of the north to make way for Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese nation's strongest military leader and its dictator.

"The key to the future is in the hands of Chiang Kai-shek," the war office spokesman asserted. "If he seriously attempts to recapture any portion of Jehol it means war on a national scale, in which event there is no reason that Japanese operations should be restricted by the Great Wall."

Extend Rule to Great Wall.

In conquering Jehol the Japanese extended the frontier of the territory they dominate to the Great Wall, below which lies the Peiping-Tientsin area, in which there are 3,000 Americans, including 1,300 marines and soldiers.

It was learned at the war office that if the Chinese attempt to gain back Jehol the Japanese are prepared to send additional troops from Japan "to Shanhaikwan and Tientsin, or anywhere else military necessity dictates."

Apparently as a precautionary measure to meet possible developments in north China, the war office announced its intention of requisitioning part of the motor trucks in Tokio, Osaka and Nagoya.

The war office interpreted the dispatch by Marshal Chiang Kai-shek of one of his own divisions to the Great Wall front as a move to meet domestic political considerations.

China Charges Conquest Plot.

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

NANKING, March 11.—The war ministry revealed yesterday that it possessed a copy of a plan allegedly drawn by Manchukuoan and Japanese delegates at Changchun, Manchuria, two months ago for the conquest of China and restoration of the empire as "the Chinese Federated Empire" under Regent Pu Yi of Manchukuo.

The Jehol drive was supposed to be a part of the initial move. The draft was said to have been memorized by a Chinese spy. It is said to reveal that the new empire was to ally itself with anti-communist nations for the demolition of Russia. The draft copy of the supposed plan provides that Japan should offer 80 warships and 100 airplanes as the first unit to be used in the conquest of the region north of the Yellow river.

According to the draft, the "empire" was to tolerate all religions and invite foreign capital but to abolish concessions and extraterritoriality. It was to enter first into an economic and then a military treaty with Japan. The supposed plan, taken seriously enough at Nanking, revived talk of transfering the capital to Changsha.

Decision to Quit League O. K.'d.

TOKIO, March 11.—[UP.]—Japan's decision to resign from the league of nations because of its condemnation of her Manchurian campaign was approved today by the cabinet.

Viscount Saito, prime minister, submitted the documents in the case to the emperor, who will refer them to the privy council before his approval is given.

In addition to the two years' notice of resignation, the documents include notification of Japan's intention of retaining the former German islands in the Pacific, which she holds under league mandate.

O'LAUGHLIN IS NAMED AID OF G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Announcement was made today by Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican national committee, that John Callan O'Laughlin, former assistant secretary of state and former Washington newspaper correspondent, had been appointed to assistant chairman, with duties as an administrator and in organization work. Mr. O'Laughlin was assistant secretary of state under President Theodore Roosevelt, assistant to the chairman of the shipping board under President Harding, and visitor to the naval academy under President Hoover. During the war he served as aide to the quartermaster general and in the intelligence section of the general staff, A. E. F. He was formerly Washington correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and New York Herald. He is now publisher of the Army and Navy Journal.

SENATOR HOWELL IS DEAD AT 69 OF PNEUMONIA

Heart Attack Follows 2 Weeks' Illness.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—Senator Robert B. Howell of Nebraska, Republican chairman of the special campaign funds committee which has been investigating election expenses, died at the Walter Reed hospital here today. Death was caused by a heart attack brought on by a two weeks' fight against pneumonia.

Serving Second Term.

Senator Howell contracted a severe cold while conducting meetings of his committee in connection with the Broussard-Overton senatorial contest in Louisiana.

The senator was 69 years old. He is survived by his widow, the former Mrs. Alice Chase Cunningham of Omaha, and a stepson, J. S. Cunningham. Senator Howell was serving his second term, having been elected in 1922 and reëlected in 1928.

Born in Adrian, Mich., on Jan. 21, 1864, Senator Howell secured an appointment to the Naval academy in 1881. He graduated in 1885 and served as a lieutenant in the Spanish-American war. Returning to civilian life he became an attorney and entered politics.

Public Ownership Champion.

Senator Howell served as water commissioner of Omaha, state engineer of Nebraska, and eventually as state senator. While in the state legislature he obtained the passage of measures which resulted in public ownership of Omaha's water, ice, and gas plants. These he managed for many years.

Senator Howell was Republican national committeeman for Nebraska from 1912 to 1920 and a member of the executive committee of his party from 1916 to 1924.

DENTIST KILLED IN AUTO CRASH ON THE MIDWAY

Dr. David B. Bell, 45 years old, of 6327 Kenwood avenue, a dentist, was killed this morning in a collision between two automobiles at Dorchester avenue and the Midway. He was taken to the Illinois Central hospital, where his wife, Margaret, is a patient, but he was pronounced dead. She was not told.

The dentist was riding in the Midway with two friends, H. E. Raymond, an attorney with offices at 160 North La Salle street, and J. Seward, 6801 South Michigan avenue. Raymond was driving. At Dorchester avenue their car collided with an automobile driven by A. M. McMahon, 6134 Kimbark avenue, head of the science department of the museum of science and industry in Jackson park. McMahon, Seward and Raymond were unhurt.

This death and three others raised the Cook county motor toll for the year to 158. The other victims:

GIRL SCOUTS HAIL FIRST LADY AS HONORARY CHIEF

Be Cheerful During Crisis, She Urges Them.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—[Special.]—A tall woman in a blue gown walked on the platform at Continental hall this afternoon and 2,500 little girls in the sturdy uniform of the Girl Scout, sang to her:

"How do you do, Mrs. Roosevelt, how do you do.

"Is there anything that we can do for you?"

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, their new honorary president, told them there certainly was. Let them be cheerful in this crisis; patient with their elders who are having "such a strenuous time of it. And let them learn that lesson, difficult for adults, that we can't have everything we want.

Equipped to Aid.

That the Girl Scouts of America, celebrating their 21st birthday, could do these things, Mrs. Roosevelt was happily confident, she declared. For weren't they already equipped with the character that comes from association with nature and the outdoor life?

Because the Girl Scouts, through their outdoor camps, have learned "to take care of themselves" they will be better prepared, Mrs. Roosevelt told them, to play a praiseworthy part in today's emergency.

Be Helpful at Home, She Urges.

"The greatest thing you girls can do in this emergency," she told them, "is to accept everything cheerfully. Remember, many of your elders are going through strenuous times. Be as helpful at home as possible and be understanding of the fact that many people are having to do without things."

After admitting to the girls that when she was a girl she found it "hard to understand why I was deprived of things," and that "not always" did she behave gracefully about it, Mrs. Roosevelt spoke to them as one camper to another, saying:

"Nothing builds character so much as living outdoors. Nothing shows up character so quickly as camping with somebody."

Lights Birthday Cake Candles.

The girls applauded their approval; then produced a birthday cake, white, festooned with green icing, circled by 21 green candles. Mrs. Roosevelt lighted the candles; a special troop of scouts, headed by Francoise May, daughter of the Belgian ambassador, blew them out.

Mrs. Roosevelt left to hold a reception for diplomats at the White House. The girls stayed to learn about the organization that was founded in Savannah, Ga., long before they were born.

Lafayette, Ind., March 11.—(AP)—National and state political leaders and life-long friends paid final tribute today to Will R. Wood, who died suddenly in New York Tuesday after concluding eighteen years in the national house of representatives.

Funeral services, held in Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, were conducted by the Rev. Thomas F. Williams.

"Because citizenship was to him a sacred trust, he completed forty years of useful public service with distinction and without a stain on his record," said Dr. Williams.

The church was filled to capacity. Floral offerings included a huge spray of lilies from Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover.

The veteran Hoosier congressman was laid to rest beside the grave of his wife, who died in 1924, in Spring Vale cemetery here.

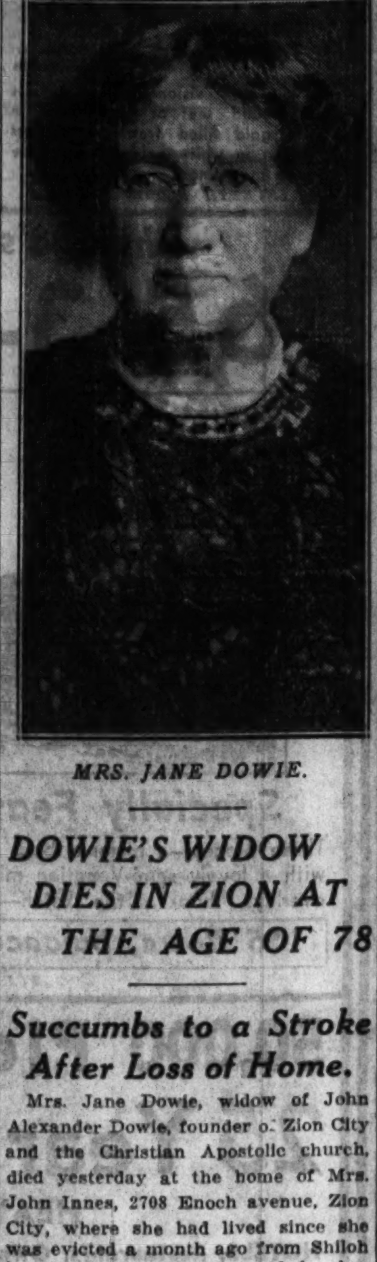
Dowie's Widow Dies



MRS. JANE DOWIE.

DOWIE'S WIDOW DIES IN ZION AT THE AGE OF 78

Succumbs to a Stroke After Loss of Home.

Mrs. Jane Dowie, widow of John Alexander Dowie, founder of Zion City and the Christian Apostolic church, died yesterday at the home of Mrs. John Innes, 2708 Enoch avenue, Zion City, where she had lived since she was evicted a month ago from Shiloh house, the mansion erected by her husband. She was 78 years old.

Following the death of her husband in 1907 and the ascension to leadership in the church of Wilbur Glenn Voliva, Mrs. Dowie moved away from Zion City. She returned three years ago with her son, the Rev. A. J. Gladstone Dowie, an Episcopal minister, and purchased Shiloh house.

Fails to Break Voliva's Grip.

She had announced an intention of winning members of the Voliva church away from his dominance, but failed in the effort. This recalled the quarrel between Dowie and Voliva in 1906 which split the religious colony into two factions.

Mrs. Dowie was born in Australia. She was a first cousin of her husband. They came to America late in the 19th century and to Chicago at the time of the World's Fair in 1893. Dowie established a church here and later preached to huge crowds in the Auditorium. He organized the religious colony at Zion City in 1896.

Accompanies Husband to London.

Mrs. Dowie, who had been an active assistant of her evangelist husband throughout his career, was made an overseer of the newly organized Christian Catholic Apostolic church in charge of women's activities. In 1905 she accompanied her husband to London on a speaking tour. When they returned Voliva had assumed control of the Zion City colony.

After their return to Zion in 1930 Mrs. Dowie and her son suffered financial reverses and recently were unable to keep up payments on the mortgage against their home. Foreclosure proceedings were started and they were forced out. A week ago Mrs. Dowie suffered a stroke.

Funeral services will be held on Tuesday at 10 a. m. in Christ church, Waukegan. The Rev. Howard Ganster will officiate. Burial will be in Lake Mound cemetery, Zion City, where Mrs. Dowie's husband was buried 26 years ago.

A coroner's jury late yesterday decided that John P. Barrett, an official in the sales service department of the Commonwealth Edison company who was found dead early yesterday at the rear of his home, 902 Greenwood boulevard, Evanston, died of "an undetermined cause."

Mr. Barrett was 50 years old and, according to relatives, had been in ill health for the last five years. He was a son of the late John P. Barrett, former city electrician, who installed the first electric plant in Chicago and invented a police alarm system long in use here.

Mr. Barrett apparently had fallen from the rear porch of his home, his body striking a concrete walk below. Three unmarried sisters — Margaret, Florence, and Genevieve—survive.

PERUVIAN REGIME PERILED; RULES AS DICTATORSHIP

Leticia Row Seen as Effort to Sidetrack Opposition.

BY NORMAN INGREY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 11.—Travelers who arrived from Lima today by plane reported continual revolutionary ferment in Peru. They declared that President Sanchez Cerro is able to retain power only by mass deportations and diversion of domestic attention to external issues.

Sanchez Cerro would not hesitate to go to war with Colombia over the disputed Leticia boundary, even though he knows his country is in the wrong, if by so doing he could maintain his grip on the government, the travelers stated.

That Sanchez Cerro is ruthless in his treatment of political opponents and is as dictatorial in his methods of government as was former President Augusto Leguia is evidenced by the stream of exiles from the west coast of South America to Chile and Argentina. This year's deportees already number nearly 1,000, many of them aristocrats and politicians.

Lima University Closed.

Lima university has been closed for nearly two years and Peruvian students have been forced to attend other institutions. One hundred and fifty are studying at the University of Chile this term.

Members of a Chilean medical mission who recently returned from Lima asserted that Peru is governed by a cunning and cruel dictatorship, "much worse than was that of Leguia."

They said that the jails are full of political prisoners, ranging from conservatives to communists, many of whom have launched hunger strikes. They added that many civil liberties have been abolished. Newspapers are controlled and there is a strict censorship to prevent foreign newspaper representatives from divulging the true state of affairs.

See Collapse of Sanchez Cerro.

The Chilean visitors to Lima found the Peruvians generally hostile to war with Colombia and alleged that patriotic demonstrations were promoted by the government. They claimed that in one case police disguised as civilians headed a procession.

By conjuring up external war threats Sanchez Cerro has so far succeeded in retaining the presidential chair, but observers believe that his collapse is not far distant.

"Funeral by Hursen" Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

EXPECT WILL OF CERMAK TO BE FILED THIS WEEK

MONTREAL, Que., March 11.—[Special.]—Hooley Smith, Maroon center, scored three goals in the second period tonight to lead Montreal to a 6 to 2 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks in a National hockey league game.

Montreal went into the lead halfway through the first period and assumed a four goal advantage before the Hawks got their first score. Brydson, Robinson and a former Chicago player, Cy Wentworth, got Montreal's other scores.

Doc Romnes and Jenkins scored for the Hawks, with Danny McFadyen drawing two assists and MacKenzie one.

There was little to choose between the two teams as the game started with a series of alternate rushes.

Brydson finally put the Maroons ahead with a difficult angle shot from the right. Duguid made the scoring pass and was credited with an assist.

Mr. Smith Gets Some Goals.

Gardiner made a splendid stop as Smith drove at the outset of the second period, but Smith scored on the next play, taking a pass from Conacher and driving the puck into the nets from about three feet out.

A minute later the Maroon center scored again on the same play. Ward passed to Northcott and Northcott to Smith, Smith flipping the puck into the cage from close range.

Maroons continued to command the play and Smith scored his third goal of the period when he rushed Gardiner and bounced the puck over the goalie's back as he dived to save.

Hawks broke into the scoring column in the closing minutes of the period on a MacFayden-Romnes rush. MacFayden passed to Romnes from the wing and Romnes hammered it home from close in.

Two More for Maroons.

The pace speeded up as the third period started, and the Maroons soon made the score 5 to 1 when Robinson drew in Trottier's rebound. Gardiner had come out a few feet to stop Trottier's shot and left the net unprotected.

Wentworth got the next and last Maroon goal, connecting on a double pass from Duguid and Brydson.

Later Jenkins, MacFayden and Mackenzie swept in towards Kerr and Jenkins scored on passes from the other two. The Maroons protested the goal, but Rodden ruled there had been no obstruction.

A fist fight broke out between Tommy Cook and Lionel Conacher, but Referee Rodden did not allow it to proceed far and sent both to the penalty box.

TULSA DEFEATS ARVEYS, 25 TO 23, IN A. A. U. FINAL

Kansas City, Mo., March 11.—(AP)—The Diamond Oilers of Tulsa, Okla., won the A. A. U. national basketball championship tonight by defeating the Rosenberg-Arvey quintet of Chicago, 25 to 23, in the final game of the annual tournament.

The Oilers, who defeated the Wichita, Kas., Henrys, three times champion, in last night's semi-finals, held a 14 to 6 lead at the intermission but the Chicago team played brilliant ball in the second half to wipe out the advantage and make the issue in doubt until the end.

The Henrys won the third place by defeating Southern Kansas Stage Lines, Kansas City, 25 to 24 in the playoff between the defeated semi-finalists. Lineup:

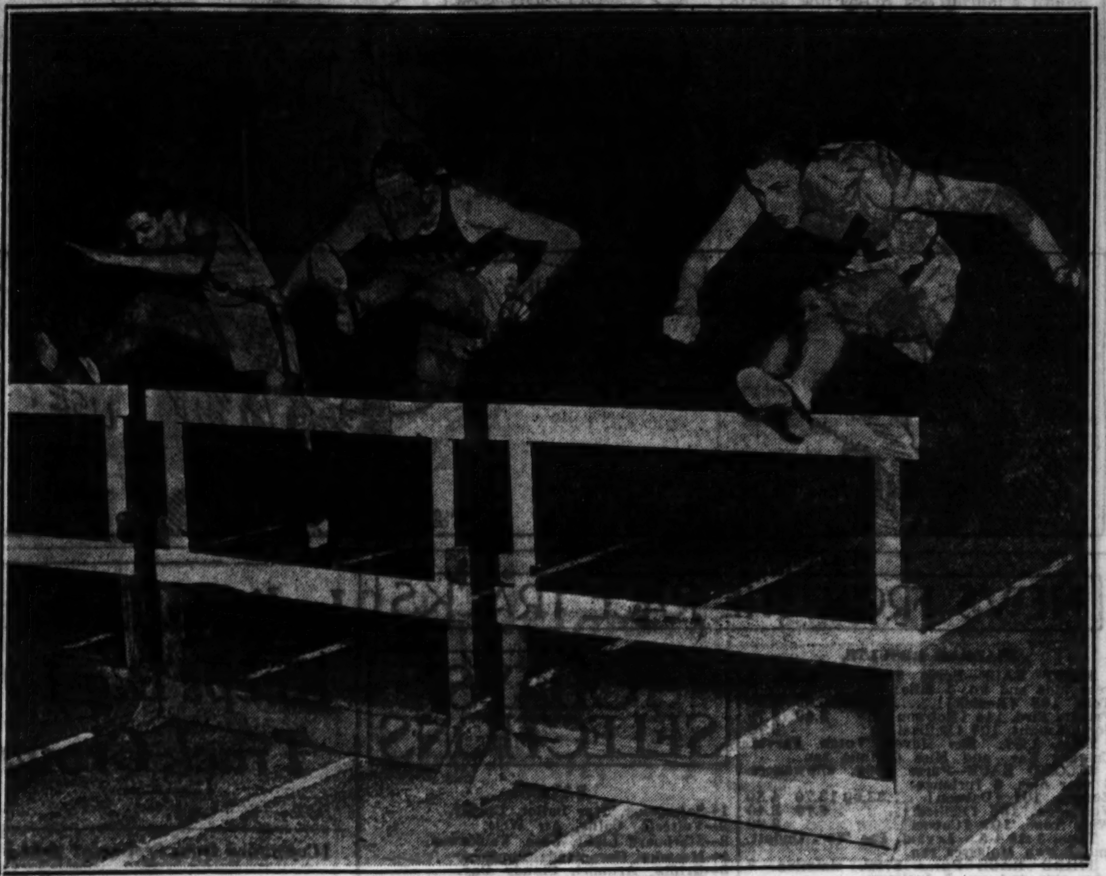
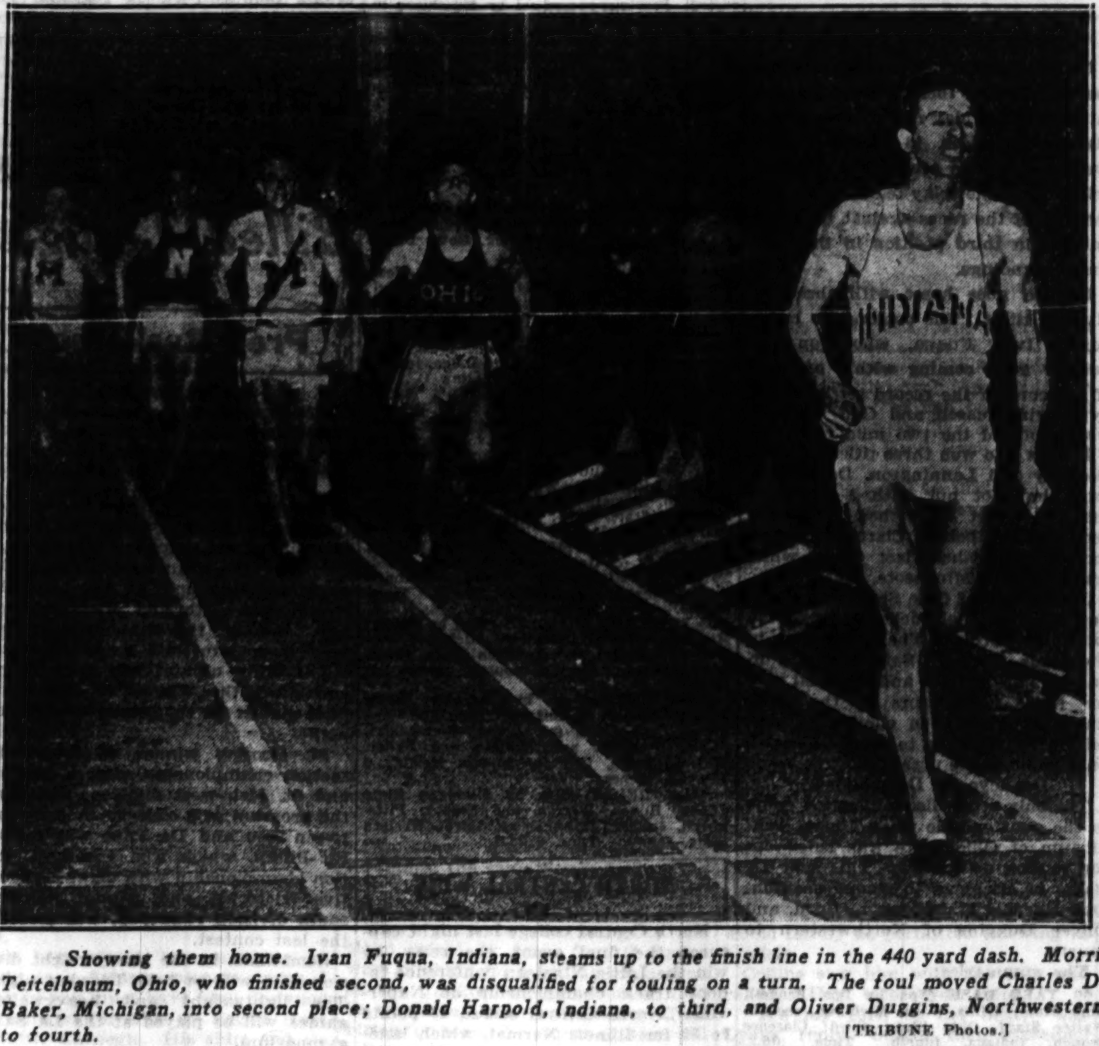
'TWAS EVENING, AND ALL THE STARS WERE OUT

A record! Capt. Ike Lennington of Illinois soars over the bar at 13 feet 10 inches to win the pole vault and establish a Big Ten record in conference meet last night at Chicago fieldhouse. Two other records were broken.



Over the top. The 70 yard high hurdles attracts a speedy field and the winner is Jack Keller of Ohio State. Left to right: Boyd Pantlind, Michigan, who was third; Keller, and Hawley Egleston, Michigan, second.



Showing them home. Ivan Fuqua, Indiana, steams up to the finish line in the 440 yard dash. Morris Teitelbaum, Ohio, who finished second, was disqualified for fouling on a turn. The foul moved Charles De Baker, Michigan, into second place; Donald Harpold, Indiana, to third, and Oliver Duggins, Northwestern, to fourth.

$13,000 FLORIDA DERBY IS WON BY CHARLEY O.

Miami, Fla., March 11.—[Special.]—Twelve thousand hailed Charley O., full brother to Mike Hall, as the best of the 3 year olds in this area when he won decisively in the $13,975 Florida Derby, closing day feature at Hialeah Park today.

The son of Hourless and Clonakilty, which has received more than desultory support to win the Kentucky Derby, scored by three lengths, paying $22.40 for $2.00.

Jungle King Is Second.

Second to the wire was Jungle King, 4 to 5 favorite in a field of ten, leading Inlander by three lengths. The winner earned $10,475 and finished the mile and an eighth in 1:49 3-5, only two-fifths of a second back of the track record. He had up 118 pounds and was piloted by Johnny Gilbert. Charley O. ran in the name of the R. M. Eastman estate.

There was another disappointment for form players in the Hialeah juvenile championship when Slapdash, made a 1 to 2 favorite, finished fourth in a field of six.

The winner was Constant Wife, a daughter of Chicle and Penelope, which bore the Dixiana colors to a victory in time which equaled the three furlong track record of :35 4-5.

She returned $26.70 for $2.00 and was ridden by Buddy Hanford who scored a double on the day. His other winner was Wise Advocate in the third.

$50,000 RACE TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, March 11.—Cuba's greatest racing event, the Cuban Grand National handicap, for 3 year olds and up, with $50,000 added, will be run tomorrow afternoon over a mile and one-quarter course and will mark the closing of the winter racing season here.

It is expected that White Clover II. or Chief John will rule as the favorite. The latter is owned by John Marsch, Chicago contractor.

The winner will receive the $50,000 stake and all entrance and starting fees; $6,000 will go to second, $4,000 to third, and $2,000 to fourth. The jockey riding the winner is to receive $1,000 and the trainer $2,000.

Track to Be Fast.

While there was rain here early in the week, the track was drying out rapidly today and it is expected the rich race will be decided over a lightning fast running strip. A field of at least 10 is expected to parade to the post and there may be two or three eleventh hour starters.

Roguish Eye, owned by Ald. John Coughlin of Chicago, after working in sensational form for the race, turned up lame 48 hours before the battle and will not start.

Another Chicago candidate, old Pigeon Hole, owned by Mrs. Emil Denemark, is also a doubtful starter. He showed signs of lameness today and Trainer Dick Watts did not hold out much hope for him to get to the post.

The odds and jockeys follow:

BIKE RIDERS TO START ON 6 DAY WHIRL TONIGHT

Chicago's twenty-ninth international six day bicycle race will get under way in the Stadium at 9 o'clock tonight with Kate Smith, radio star, firing the starting gun. The field, composed of riders from America, Canada, France, Belgium, Germany, Italy and Australia, appears to be well balanced. There will be four new riders, two of whom are well known to Chicago fans.

Bobby Thomas of Kenosha, Wis., national amateur road champion for the last two years and a member of the 1932 Olympic team, will make his first appearance in a six day race here, along with Al Kingbeil, Chicago amateur who is turning professional for this race. The other new riders are Henri Le Page of Montreal and Giovanni Manera of Italy.

Previous to the start of the race tonight there will be a one hour amateur team race which will start at 7 o'clock and have about 20 teams competing.

A change has been made in the hours of the sprints and also in the closing time next Saturday night. The race will wind up at 12 o'clock instead of 11. The sprints, as usual, will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 9 at night, but the next series then will be at 11 o'clock instead of at midnight. The final sprints will be run from 1 to 2 a. m., instead of from 2 to 3.

Reggie McNamara, the "Iron Man," will start in on his 92d race with Harry Horan, another veteran, as his teammate. Jules Audy, popular blond youngster, will be paired with Bill Grimm, a consistent American six day star. Franz Deulberg of Germany will ride with Paul Croley of Brooklyn. Mickey Rodak, brother of Leo Rodak, the Golden Gloves champion, will ride with William [Torchy] Peden, the red head from Vancouver, B. C.

Chicago Golden Gloves Team Reports for Drill Tomorrow

Twenty-five Golden Gloves boxers who will represent Chicago in the sixth annual intercity bouts with New York at the Stadium March 29 will report for a two weeks' training period at the Illinois Athletic club, 112 South Michigan avenue, tomorrow. The members of the Chicago team will be assigned quarters by Coach John Behr and then on Tuesday morning all will begin preparation for the intercity contests.

Sixteen of these boys will fight against New York. The eight champions will oppose the eight Golden Gloves champions who will be determined in the New York finals tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden. The opponents in the other eight bouts on the intercity program will be named by Coach Jack Elliott of New York and Coach John Behr of Chicago and his assistants. The New York team will arrive several days before the fights to finish training.

Seek to Develop Stamina.

The two weeks' training for the Chicago squad is not intended to teach the boys all there is to know about the game. It is the purpose, however, to bring the boys to their best physical form, develop stamina, a team spirit and point out the weaknesses and strength of their probable New York opponents as seen by the Chicago scouts who will attend the finals tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

The intercity bouts will consist of three rounds, each three minutes long. None of the rounds in the bouts in Golden Gloves this year has exceeded two minutes, so the increase in time makes it imperative that the boys be in top form. Proper diet, supervision of exercise both on the road and in the gymnasium, and regular sleeping hours should accomplish these aims.

The consensus is that Chicago will have a much stronger team than a year ago. If this is true, Chicago well may hope to whip the New Yorkers, who last year won the intercity series, 12 bouts to 4. The Chicago boys also will possess the advantage of fighting at home. No team ever has won away from home, although the first year of Golden Gloves ended in a tie. The scores for intercity competition follow:

1928—New York, 8; Chicago, 8. [At Chicago.]
1929—New York, 11; Chicago, 5. [At New York.]
1930—Chicago, 10; New York, 6. [At Chicago.]
1931—Chicago, 13; New York, 3. [At Chicago.]
1932—New York, 12; Chicago, 4. [At New York.]

Two of the eight champions of 1932 won Golden Gloves this year. They are Leo Rodak, 126 pound title holder, who last year won the 118 pound championship, and Henry Rothier, welterweight champion, winner of the 135 pound title in 1932. Fred Caserio, the middleweight victor this year, held the same title in 1931.

Two Ex-Champs Finish Second.

Vernon Miller, 175 pound champion in 1932, finished runnerup to Max Marek this year, reversing the results of a year ago. Jack Kranz of Gary, Ind., who held the light heavyweight title in 1931, now is runnerup to John Pacek, the heavyweight king.

Five of the 25 boys on Chicago's team have won in intercity competition. They are:

Leo Rodak, 1931 as champion flyweight; Fred Caserio, 1931 as champion middleweight; Max Marek, 1932 as middleweight runnerup; Vernon Miller, 1932 as light heavyweight champion, and Jack Kranz, 1931 as light heavyweight champion.

Johnny Baltzer, John Ginter, Henry Rothier, and Adolph Winter fought in New York last year and were defeated.

Tickets for the intercity bouts now are on sale. Orders will be accepted by the Golden Gloves Ticket Manager, Tribune Tower, Chicago. The prices are $1.10, $2.20, and $3.30.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 11.—Babe Herman, a native of Glendale, Cal., and Mark Koenig, a native of San Francisco, this afternoon were the main men in a 4 to 1 Chicago Cub victory over the New York Giants. The two Californians were aided materially by Kiki Cuyler of Michigan, who can call an earthquake by its right name.

Herman drove in Cuyler with the first Cub run after Ki had tripled in the fourth and the Babe gave the Chicagoans a 2 to 1 lead with a far flung homer in the sixth. Babe led off the ninth with the fourth Cub hit, Stephenson followed with a single and, after two were retired, Koenig, eminent ninth inning specialist, socked a double, scoring Herman and Kreevich, who ran for Stephenson.

Giants Use Three Pitchers.

It was a fine ball game, played by a crew of greatly distressed young men. Hubbell started for New York and allowed only two hits in four innings. Fitzsimmons followed for three innings and Babe Herman's homer was the extent of the hitting done off his stuff. Spencer worked the last two innings and didn't let the ball get out of the infield in the eighth, but encountered the aforementioned trouble in the ninth, though he struck out two hands in the inning.

Bush started for Chicago and allowed four hits in five innings, including a score tying homer by Richards in the fifth. Root allowed only one hit, a single, in the last four innings and it promptly was nullified by a double play which he himself launched.

Few Get Any Rest.

There probably never will be a game played by major league athletes so short of sleep. Half of the players didn't have a cat nap all night or during the morning and the remainder, with scarcely no exceptions, got no more than three hours' rest.

Some of the Cubs, notably Reb. Campbell and Buck Newson, said they would leave town if forced to undergo a similar ordeal from a recurrence of the quake. Gus Mancuso of the Giants

Sox Held to 8 Hits, but Win at Pasadena

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 11.—If the White Sox go through their spring exhibition program in the same fashion they started it off today, they will not be guilty of wasting base hits. They produced only eight against two former Coast league pitchers who were assisting the local Merchants' team. The Merchants, however, were in a generous mood and tossed in enough errors to let the Sox win, 2 to 1, before about 1,000 who were able to dig up a 50 cent piece.

In a way the hitting of the Sox could be excused. They were looking at two men who knew how to pitch and were in condition. Besides, not many of the Chicago players attempted sleep last night. They preferred to sit in their rocking chairs to be prepared for a hurried getaway if any of the slight intermittent tremors should develop into something worth while. As a matter of fact the Sox were lucky to be hereabouts. The jolts were so slight here that not even a broken window was reported in the entire city, a fact which the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce will not fail to emphasize in future publicity matter.

Blanked by Peters.

The game itself would have been nothing but a married men's — fat men's game if it hadn't been for the two enemy pitchers—Buz Wetzel and Lefty Peters. Wetzel pitched the first five innings and gave up both runs. One of these went across in the third when the shortstop fumbled a grounder hit by Al Simmons while the bags were loaded. The other tally was driven home in the fourth when Manager Fonseca sent a two bagger against the center field fence after a single by Pitcher Joe Heving and an error.

The crowd quite naturally centered its attention on Simmons, but the ex-Athletic slugger wasn't able to satisfy them. With one on in the first inning, he tapped to the pitcher. In the third he hit the grounder that precipitated an error worth a run. In the fifth with a runner on base, he neglected to swing at a third strike.

Simmons Goes for a Trot.

After that display Simmons decided to retire and devote himself to running back and forth along the outfield fence. Another reason for his desire to withdraw was a sore arm brought on by too much throwing the day previous. It is a usual spring malady with him.

Three Sox pitchers shared the job of keeping the locals in their place and none of the three did any more than necessary.

The Merchants will be taken on again tomorrow, after which the Sox will have two days to make ready for the two game series with the Cubs at Los Angeles.

MICHIGAN GETS SECOND PLACE; ILLINOIS THIRD

Hornbostel, Ward Lead Scoring.

Table of Points

Indiana	32	Purdue	3
Michigan	28	Wisconsin	3
Illinois	20	Iowa	3
Ohio	13	Minnesota	2
Northwestern	5	Chicago	1

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Charles Hornbostel led the Indiana team in successful defense of its Western Conference indoor track and field championship last night at the University of Chicago fieldhouse. Hornbostel set a new record in the half mile run, which was one of three marks wiped out during the evening, and he tied Willis Ward of Michigan for individual honors with eight points.

Hornbostel was the sole individual defending champion. He retained his honors when he raced four times around the track in 3 minutes 53.9-10 seconds, nearly two seconds faster than the mark set two years ago by Orville Martin, now track coach at Purdue.

Indiana scored 32 points to win the meet, its second triumph in Big Ten indoor history. Michigan followed with 28 points and Illinois was third with 20 points. All the universities scored. Chicago finished in last place with one point.

Times Race Perfectly.

Hornbostel ran a perfectly timed race. He made the pace all the way, something that last year he frequently hesitated to do. Ed Turner of Michigan provided the hustling Hoosier with his only competition. Turner hung doggedly at Hornbostel's heels, but coming into the back stretch on the last lap, the Indiana star lengthened his stride and moved on to an easy triumph.

Ike Lennington, captain of the Illinois team, smashed the two year old pole vault mark, formerly held by Verne McDermont of the Illini, when he cleared 13 feet 10 inches. This height, carefully computed because of the sagging bar, was three-fourths of an inch better than McDermont's mark.

Break Relay Record.

The third record to fall came in the final event when Michigan's quartet of 440 yard dash men won the mile relay in 3 minutes, 20 3-5 seconds. Three of the men who ran last night helped set the record in 1932 at 3 minutes, 23 1-10 seconds. Lat night's championship four were Ellerby, Lemen, De Baker, and Allen, who ran anchor instead of Edwin Russell, Michigan captain last year and the winner of the conference 440 yard sprint in both the indoor and the outdoor games.

Don Bennett, Ohio State junior, also wrote his name permanently into the records, or at least until some conference sprinter can travel 60 yards faster than 6.2 seconds, the present accepted world record. Bennett won his semi-final heat in 6.4 seconds and then stepped up his pace to tie the performances of such men as George Simpson of Ohio State and J. A. Timm of Illinois, who set the present Big Ten mark in 1929; Eddie Tolan and Don Renwick of Michigan, who equaled this mark in 1931 and 1932, respectively.

Ward Wins High Jump.

Bennett barely nosed out Willis Ward, Michigan's sophomore Negro star. In addition to winning his varsity football letter as an end last fall, Ward promises to break a lot of high jump records before he quits Ann Arbor. Last night Ward jumped 6 feet 4 inches to win the title. While a freshman last spring he won the high jump in the national collegiate meet at Stagg field, which also constituted one of the five United States Olympic semi-finals, with a mark just short of 6 feet 6 inches.

Hornbostel's other points were gained in the one mile when he followed Dean Woolsey, veteran Illinois distance star, to the tape. Hornbostel led for the first lap, then gave away

E. H. BAUMGARTEN OF CHICAGO TO BE A. B. C. SECRETARY

Bowlers Hold Convention at Columbus Friday.

BY MORT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., March 11.—The 33d annual convention of the American Bowling congress here next Friday will probably go on record as one of the most important in the history of the national ten pin body. Besides acting upon a number of new playing rules and the selection of the site for the 1934 tournament, a new secretary will be elected.

ELMER H. BAUMGARTEN.

Elmer H. Baumgarten of Chicago is expected to succeed A. L. Langtry as secretary. Langtry served the congress for 25 years and has been the real leader of the national pin organization. Baumgarten was named temporary secretary in Langtry's place at a special meeting of the A. B. C. executive committee last September when Langtry became ill. The veteran executive is still unavailable for duty.

In Game 35 Years.

Baumgarten took over the reins of the organization in a tough year but despite conditions has succeeded in staging a successful tournament here. He has been identified with the game for the last 35 years and was president of the tournament companies when Chicago staged the tournaments in 1924 and 1929.

Peoria, St. Louis, and Rochester will bid for the 1934 event. Invitations have been received from other cities, including Atlanta and New Orleans. The real battle for the show is expected to be between Peoria and St. Louis.

Twelve Chicago teams are scheduled Friday. The convention date always is the red letter day of the tournament. Included in the Chicago lineups will be the Bangart's 33d A. B. C.'s and the Live Stock Press. Peter P. Howley and George Bangart will roll with the first mentioned lineup. They are the only two men of the congress who have participated in all tournaments since the first at Chicago in 1901. The Live Stock Press five has shot together in national tourney competition for more than 20 years.

Alleys Strictly Neutral.

Bowlers can roll on no more neutral alleys than those which are installed for the American Bowling congress tournament each year. Brand new, the A. B. C. drives are in a class by themselves for neutralizing conditions. That's why a checkup we have made on the averages of the country's leading bowlers in the last six A. B. C. tourneys reveals just who's who in the ten pin game.

Joe Bodis of Cleveland sports a 207 average for the 54 games rolled in the last six meets to top the list. Charley Daw of Milwaukee and Barney Spinella of New York both show a 203 figure, and Chicago's leading representative is Adolph Carlson with a 202 mark.

JOINS 300 CLUB

Chicago's newest member in the bowlers' hall of fame is Fred Richter. Performing with the Joseph B. McDonough team in the County league on the Randolph alleys, Richter accomplished a perfect 300 game. He is now eligible to compete in the fourth annual 300 club tournament, which will be bowled at the Adams Recreation Palace in Columbus during the American Bowling Congress tournament. The 300 club now boasts 1,378 perfect score shooters of the country.

PIN SPLINTERS—Entries to the third annual Acacia national bowling tournament, to be staged at the Stevenson & Schalk Recreation, 79th and Cottage Grove avenue, will close next Saturday night. . . Andy Varipapa, runnerup in the eastern match game eliminations, is leading New York City's two foremost leagues with 218 and 209 averages. . . Marie Warmbier and Agnes Higgins rolled the first six of their 18-game national championship match last night. They will continue at the Harding alleys Saturday and March 25, total pins to determine the winner of the women's title. . . A squad of 30 teams consisting of officers from 30 different councils opened the eleventh annual K. of C. National Bowling association tournament last night at Schueneman's Lake View parlors.

The entry deadline for the 16th annual tourney of the Chicago Women's Bowling association has been extended to Saturday, the meet to open March 25 at the Bensinger Recreation, 131 South Wabash avenue. . . Lloyd Strouse, leader of the Chicago match game eliminations at the end of the semi-final round, started his bowling career in the navy in 1921.

to Woolsey for two laps before resuming the pace setting position. With a half lap to go Woolsey pasesd the Hoosier and finished 50 yards in front.

Three Titles for Hoosiers.

Indiana brought 15 athletes to the games. Two of them were eliminated in the trials Friday night. Seven men placed last night in the individual events while two others of the squad helped form the relay team which won the first of the races against time, but finished in third position in the composite standings.

Indiana goes home with three individual titles. The owners are Hornbostel, Ivan Fuqua, who won the quarter mile, coming within one-fifth of a second of the record set last year by Edwin Russell and Cliff Watson, who captured the two mile run.

Illinois also won three titles. Besides Woolsey and Lennington, Dave Cook took the shot put with a mediocre toss of 46 feet 1½ inches. It was 2 feet 8 inches behind Clarence Munn's record established last year while competing for Minnesota.

Jack Keller of Ohio State won a second title for the Buckeyes in the 70 yard high hurdles. The fourth man in the finals, Kenneth Sandbach of Purdue, was disqualified and a special race for those competitors in the semi-finals who had been eliminated, permitted Ted Haydon to score Chicago's only point of the night.

Buckeye Is Disqualified.

The only other disqualification came in the quarter mile when Morris Teitelbaum of Ohio State was ruled out for fouling on a turn. This sent De Baker of Michigan to second position, Don Harpold of Indiana to third, and Oliver Duggins of Northwestern to fourth.

MOTORS—TRAFFIC HIGHWAYS

A TAXI DRIVER GIVES VIEWS ON ARREST SLIPS

BY HAL FOUST.

A taxicab driver, on picking up a passenger in front of the Merchandise Mart, had just received a ticket from a policeman for parking in a restricted area.

"Will you or your company have to pay that fine?" asked the passenger.

"No one will pay any fine," the chauffeur replied, confidently. "I'll tear up the ticket and nothing more will ever be heard about it."

"But that ticket is a court summons. If you don't appear in court, won't you be arrested on a warrant?"

Don't Serve Warrants.

"The city police don't serve their warrants in traffic cases," said the driver. "No one has to pay any attention to city traffic tickets.

"But don't ever try to get by with tearing up a Lincoln park arrest ticket. Those boys will get you with a warrant if you fail to show up in court."

This sounded like a lot of ignorant talk—if not contempt of court—from the taxicab operator, but a check on the available records of the Municipal court indicated that there is some foundation for the driver's attitude.

"My best estimate," said Joseph L. Gill, clerk of the court, "is that the city police have about 60,000 traffic warrants that will never be served against motorists for failure to respond to summonses. Each of these motorists tell four or five friends about 'getting by' without going to court with a ticket. So there are probably 250,000 Chicagoans with personal knowledge of how easy the tickets have been evaded.

Follow Up Every Ticket.

"This breeds contempt of court and contempt for the police and contempt for traffic regulations. I'm not in favor of big penalties for traffic violators, but there should be a certainty of punishment.

"The Lincoln park police have been working the right system. They don't issue many tickets, but they follow up every ticket to see that the defendant answers to the court. They obtain warrants and serve them in every case where the motorist doesn't respond to the ticket.

"Last September's 'safety drive' with wholesale arrests by the police is an example of what should not be done. About 38,000 tickets were issued. Of this total, 10,495 paid fines. Warrants were issued for most of the others, and most of these warrants will never be served.

"Here's an example of what portion of traffic warrants are served. This is for thirteen days last year. There were 5,101 warrants issued and 412 served.

Clerks All Transferred.

"Some of this failure to get service may be due to motorists giving fictitious names and addresses or to errors of policemen in noting the names and addresses. But this couldn't account for such a large portion of the defendants escaping arrest."

"Do you think there is 'fixing?'" he was asked.

"I'm not running the police department," Mr. Gill replied. "I found evidence of fixing in the Traffic court last summer. There were 300 or 400 cases that never got on the judge's trial call. So I transferred all of my men working in that court.

"My interest in this entire traffic ticket situation is my interest from a civic standpoint and from the standpoint of an officer of the court. I'll do my part in the clerk's office to correct conditions."

When 80 Miles an Hour Is Just Rolling Along

With The Tribune roadster in a garage for clutch adjustment, a dealer loaned his luxury sedan demonstrator last week for a one day tour into southern Indiana, where the meadows are turning green and where song birds are returning to the wooded hills.

The ride was a demonstration of performance, comfort and safety on crowded city streets, open highways and graveled byways as afforded by today's fine cars. The vehicle stepped sure footedly around clumsy old models cluttering the outer drive. On the long straightaways of U. S. 41 the car cruised comfortably at 80 miles an hour. And there was no discomfort on the gravel road that dips and twists into Turkey Run State park.

Spend for Comfort, Safety.

"It is for the extra performance, comfort and safety," said S. A. Stephens, Chicago manager of Pierce-Arrow Sales corporation, "that those who are able buy first class motor transportation. Folks no longer have big cars merely to impress neighbors and business associates."

"And," added Roy Faulkner, president of the corporation, "whatever you do, don't say ours is a silk hat automobile. These 1933 models, responsive to accelerator, brake and steering wheel, are enjoyable companions in recreation and sport and they're reliable partners in business."

Power Brake a Revelation.

Outstanding mechanically is a new power brake that is a revelation in automobile driving. The pedal resembles the foot accelerator, and requires little more effort to operate. In the shift of the right foot from the gas to the power brake pedal the heel doesn't leave the floor.

Leg muscle isn't used in stopping the car. Here's a technical description:

Depressing the brake treadle brings a pressure plate in contact with a friction disc rotating on an extension of the transmission main shaft. As the disc is retarded it sets in rotation a treaded actuator, causing the latter to move forward on the shaft. This moves a power arm which in turn operates the brake linkage.

Front Wheels Can't Lock.

The front wheels cannot lock on a turn. A mechanical device lessens the front brake pressure in relation to the turn of the wheels. The brake drums and shoes on all four wheels are designed to radiate heat rapidly so their efficacy does not dissipate with heavy use.

These are luxury brakes, in keeping with other parts of the car.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Chevrolet dealers yesterday displayed a new line of automobiles, a companion series to the models introduced shortly before the first of the year. W. S. Knudsen, president, said the new car is the "lowest priced, full size, six cylinder enclosed model ever offered to the public."

The "Standard Six," as it has been christened, resembles in outward appearance its older brother, the "Master Six," except that it is shorter in wheel base and without some of the de luxe features. Mr. Knudsen estimated that the smaller model will account for about a fourth of Chevrolet's 1933 sales, with a large portion of the sales going to commercial fleet operators primarily interested in low initial costs and operating expenses.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

40 M. P. H. PRETTY FAST.

Chicago, March 8.—I have been driving machines for the last twenty years and never got a ticket before, as I always look and try not to break any laws. I have notice now that the Chicago police are getting as bad as the county police. They hide in filling stations and side streets and come out after you pass.

I don't see why they don't stay on the street more and issue tickets to machines with one head light and no tail light. I think they would do more to help Chicago than to give tickets for going 40 miles an hour where the street is clear. You can look for them along Ashland avenue at 35th also Western avenue around 55th.

Trusting to see this in one of your papers so people won't have to lose time going to court and the chief of police can tell these said police to ride instead of resting and looking for such minor offenses. LEO CULLEN.

DEFENDS 1932 PLATES.

Chicago, March 6.—I want to answer Mr. Johnson and all the others that are yelping about the fellow who has not his 1933 license plate. They don't seem to have brains enough to figure that perhaps there is a reason, such as loss of work, charity, sickness, etc.

I haven't my state license at present [and I have had one by Feb. 1 of each year for 15 years], and the reason is I have been kicking in $50 per month to keep unemployed relations off the relief. I wonder how many squawkers have been doing anywhere near as well. To do that I have to be very careful with my financing.

Another thing must be considered. If I should have to let my car stay in the garage the state would be out 3 cents per gallon on the gasoline I would have consumed in the car. The state officials have shown very good sense, and may they continue to do so.

Under the existing conditions we must have sense, charitable thoughts for the other fellow, and not holler our heads off if things are not as they should be. D. SNYDER.

ABANDONED CAR.

Chicago, March 7.—Why is it that an auto carrying Ohio 1932 license 438-795 can stand in a public street for the past three months without being moved?

This auto stands in front of 1041 Loyola avenue, and lately the tires have become deflated and they have now blocked it up with bricks. I am a resident in this block, keep my car in a public garage, but have a hard time to find parking space during the evening. MC.

FRAUDULENT LICENSES.

Chicago, March 1.—Your editorial on license plates was very good, but you neglected one of the main features, namely, the owners of cars in Illinois, and mostly Chicagoans, driving with out of state licenses.

If the motorist using this method of defrauding the state of Illinois would be arrested and fined $100 for such an offense, permitting the arresting officers $50 of said fine, it would soon enable the officers to receive their back salary, which is long overdue.

Can you imagine the run there would soon be for state and city vehicle license? W. E.

SIGHTLY PARKING LOTS.

Chicago, March 3.—I have read with great interest the letter to The Tribune decrying the unsightliness of loop parking stations. You are entirely correct in your contention that an advantageously located parking station is an essential requisite to business—and indeed there is no logical reason why these locations should constitute an eyesore.

Your suggestion of planting trees is a splendid one—but, regretfully, is impossible on any of the locations throughout the loop. When a building is razed for a parking lot the foundation is invariably filled with bricks and building debris, with the net result that no type of vegetation could flourish.

The impression of unsightliness, however, is in most instances occasioned by untidy layout of the parking station, flimsy, unpainted cashiers' huts and a preponderance of unsightly advertising billposters affixed to every available foot of wall or fence area. I have outlined the average in the foregoing—and by virtue of a close association with this phase of motorists' service reserve the right to exploit the exception—our own organization.

R. G. Lydy, Inc., owns and operates twenty parking stations and garages in the loop area. From the time of the inception of the business some years ago definite standards of station maintenance have been closely adhered to.

Plans are now in process to standardize all Lydy structures throughout every property—and in achieving this similarity of layout the best talents are being employed to realize finished appearance as esthetically pleasing as possible. This will be entirely consummated within three to six months, and work was started at this time advisedly to give employment to deserving men. R. G. LYDY.

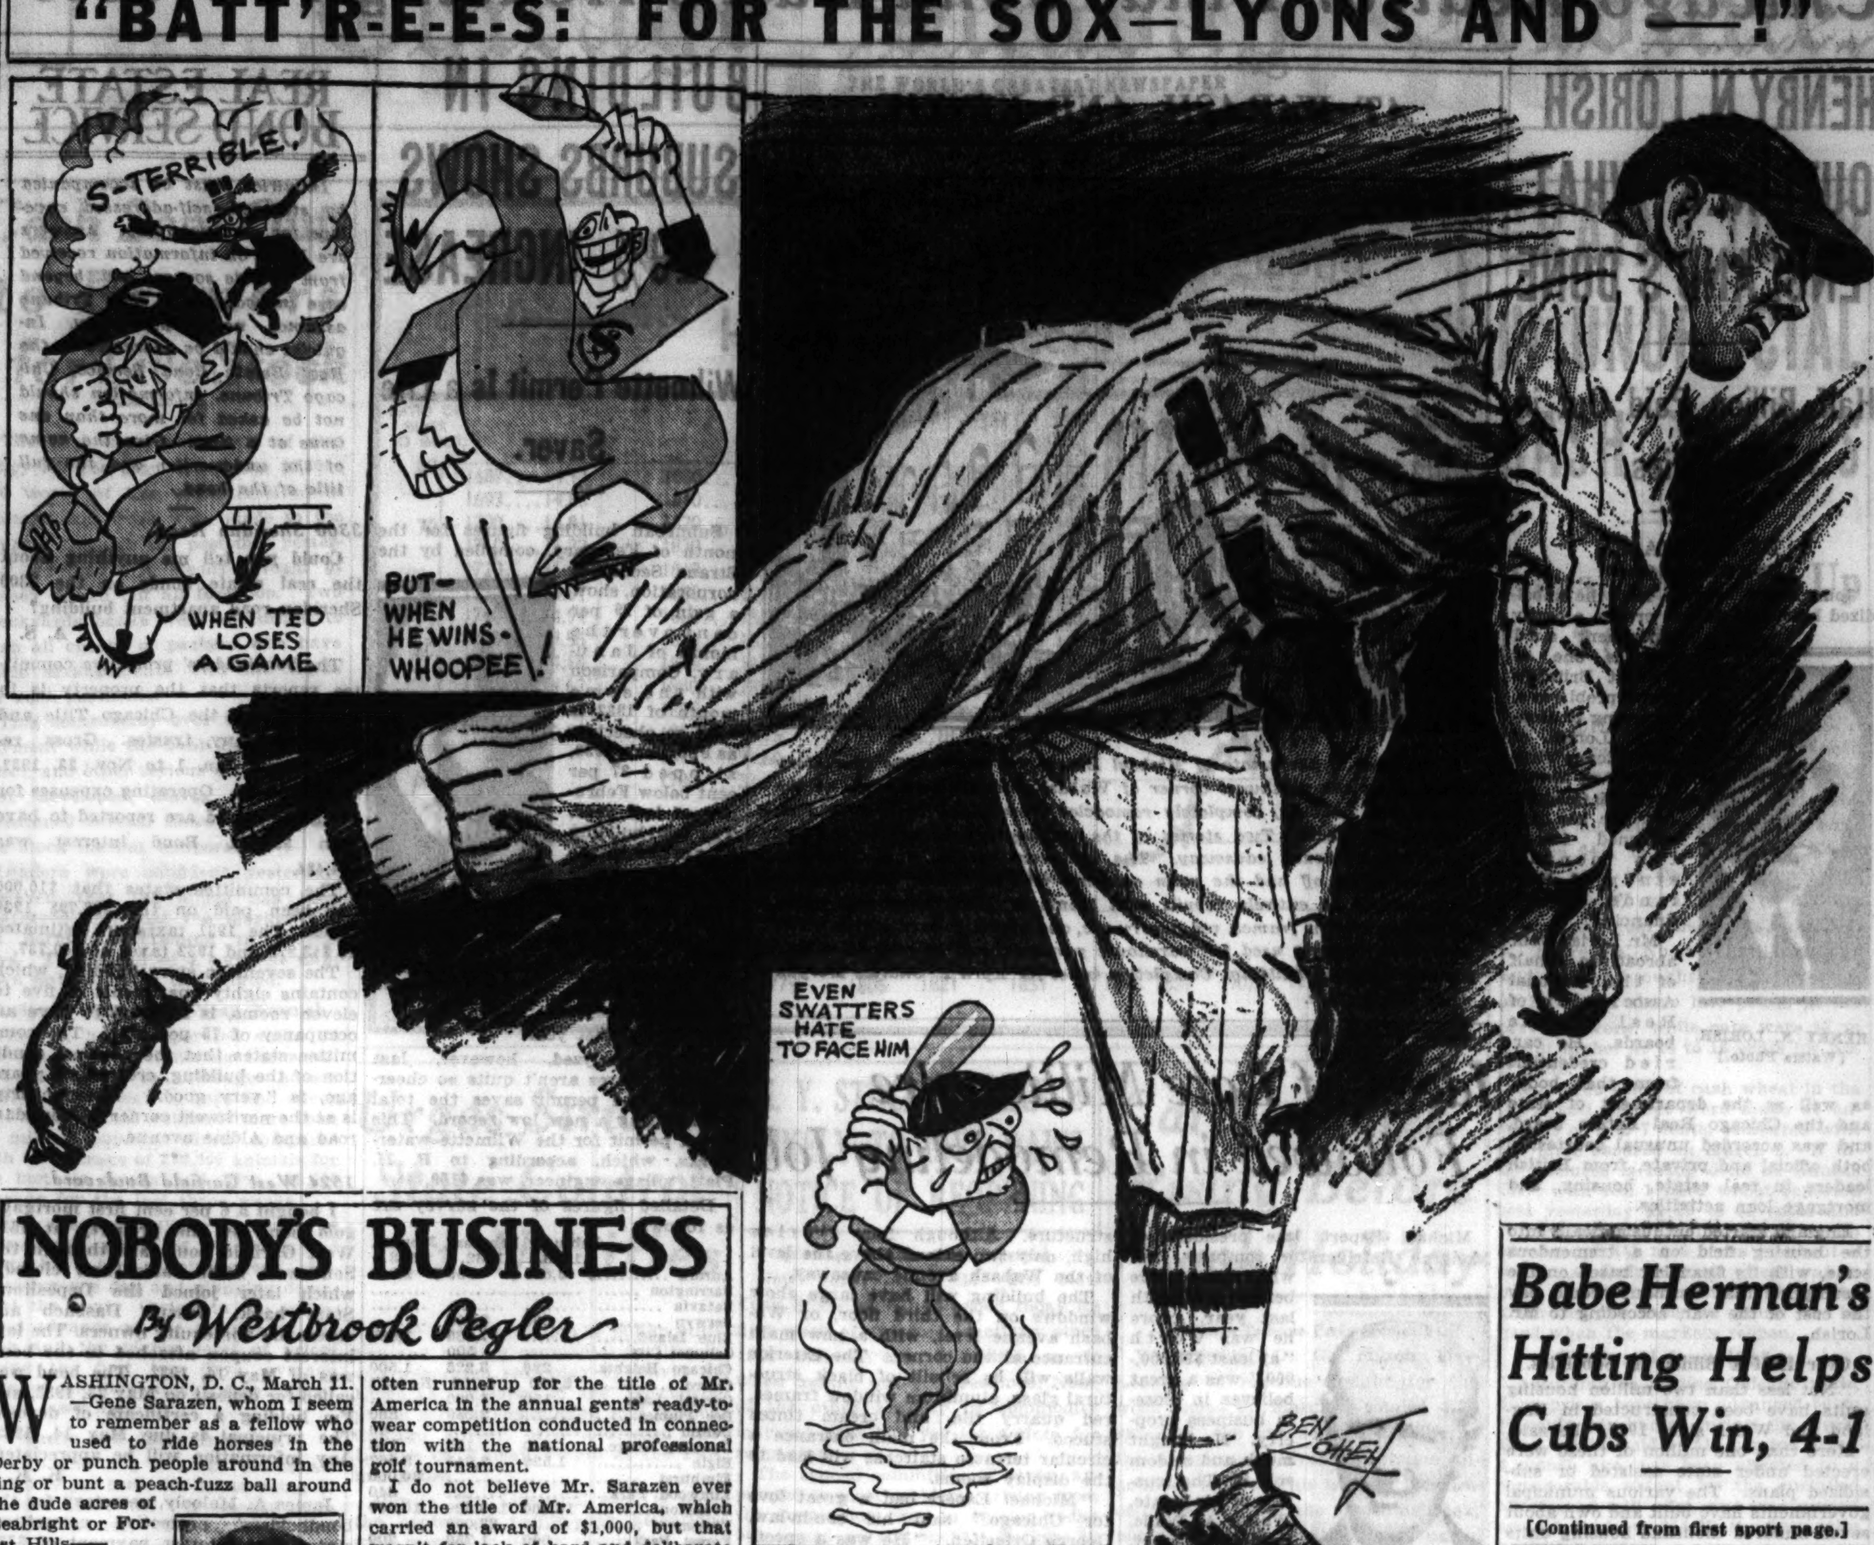
"BATT'R-E-E-S: FOR THE SOX—LYONS AND —!"



S-TERRIBLE!
WHEN TED LOSES A GAME
BUT—WHEN HE WINS—WHOOPEE!
EVEN SWATTERS HATE TO FACE HIM
BEN COHEN

With some good fielders to back him up and a few heavy hitters to drive in runs for him, Ted Lyons is looking forward to his best season with the White Sox this year. Ben Cohen, Tribune artist, catches Ted in action and also sketches a few sidelights of the Texan.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By Westbrook Pegler

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—Gene Sarazen, whom I seem to remember as a fellow who used to ride horses in the Derby or punch people around in the ring or bunt a peach-fuzz ball around the dude acres of Seabright or Forest Hills——

GENE SARAZEN.

Somewhere, I am sure, I used to hear tell of this Sarazen back in the days of the dollar tip for bellhops and the $25,000 golf tournaments.

Golf tournaments! That's what! Sarazen the golfer.

I knew he had something to do with the sport business back in the gorgeous and goofy era.

So this Sarazen has been uttering some remarks to the effect that our American sportsmen are too attentive to dress. They can't merely go out and nudge a ball around informally and with their nerves and social ambitions well relaxed, but must match or blend the hues of their ties and shirts and sox and take extraordinary care with the cut and crease of their bloomers and always with an "ah-there-baby" regard for their pictorial effect on any females thereabouts.

Hey, Mr. Sarazen! Where's Your Memory?

All of which, I say, is quite correct, only I wish to hoist up and ask just who Mr. Sarazen thinks he is to be pulling remarks of this nature at a time when our stylish haberdashers are pulling citizens off the streets trying to sell them a pair of garters on time—especially in view of what I happen to know about this Sarazen.

What I say is that if the American sportsmen wish to hurl away a few shillings on beautiful plumage nowadays they should be let to do so without any deterrent gibes from a golfing pro who has never been noted for the modesty of his own dress, because for all that anybody knows the spending for this sort of wear may start the upturn which we have been hearing so much about and seeing so little of these last fours years come September. What I also wish to say is that this Sarazen went along for years as one of the gaudiest sartorial spectacles in the entire sporting ensemble, and, teamed with his roommate and partner, Johnny Farrell, was often runnerup for the title of Mr. America in the annual gents' ready-to-wear competition conducted in connection with the national professional golf tournament.

I do not believe Mr. Sarazen ever won the title of Mr. America, which carried an award of $1,000, but that wasn't for lack of hard and deliberate trying. He achieved rare beauty at times with his lovely effects in pants and his tasseled socks, but his friend Farrell, being tall and skinny and rather dreamy around the eyes, like a crooning tenor, used to win the championship year after year and the thousand dollar checks.

The pair of them, together, however, were known as the Dolly sisters of the golf business, and if Sarazen had been less squatty and hadn't been built quite so close to the ground and on the general architectural pattern of a freight handler, he might have been elected America's sweetheart once or twice, himself.

Says he that Walter Hagen hasn't been playing as good a game since he quit wearing golf rompers and took to wearing slacks in fashion's thrall. And what I say is that Hagen has been crept up on by his anniversaries and hasn't been playing as good a game as he used to play for that and several other very good, sufficient and familiar reasons.

Moreover, I will say that when Hagen was the champion of all the golfers there was nobody, except possibly Sarazen and Farrell, more sensitive to color harmonies in ties and sweaters and all such than Walter Hagen. He was one of the gorgeous dudes of the fairways when he was at his best and he shot some astonishing golf regardless.

Fishing for Trout in Paris Clothes.

True, quite true, I will allow, that in many of our sports the apparel was most of the game. I remember a moment a year ago when a celebrated American bon vivant dropped in at a rough and ready, come and get it sort of fishing shack at a secluded lake in the mountains to annoy the supercilious trouts of which the local guides insisted there was great abundance.

Our bon vivant was a thing of beauty in a fishing costume which I swear to you must have been designed and tailored for him by Peggy Hoyt or Hattie Carnegie. His shirt and tie were of the same suave material as his jacket and panties, and I have to confess that when we were peeling down at night to turn in on the chicken wire cots I peered through my fingers to see whether he had lace cuffs on his—shall I call them underthings?

But the kerosene light was dim and I couldn't say.

This Went On and On, Maybe Longer.

However, he did stand about $800 on the hoof in his fishing duds and Mr. Leon Gordon, a man who can just take a look at you and draw your picture better than Andy Gump, looked up from his charred steak at supper—we had no fish for supper, of course—and remarked to him, "You should have worn your Empress Eugenie hat, dear.

Well, so where are we?

Well so here we are, insisting firmly, but not with brawling opposition, that Mr. Sarazen speaks tosh when he argues that-a-way and ought to be ashamed of himself not only because he comes to court with his hands unclean, but for the patriotic reason that, for goodness sake, if the golfers can be induced to spend some funds on cloth of gold costumes with chinchilla trimmings nobody has any business to be pulling the sneer at them and driving those shillings back under the loose brick on the hearth.

Mr. Sarazen, be pleased to hush your mouth and shoot your golf and leave all such things to the advertising department.

See Chance for Ted Lyons to Win 22 Games for Sox

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pasadena, Cal., March 11.—This might turn out to be the year that Ted Lyons, the White Sox ace, has been hoping to encounter before being forced to close the book on his big league career. Professional baseball for the lad who jumped from Baylor university campus to the Chicago club has been one long depression. He never has known the pleasure of pitching for a team that wasn't hopelessly weak, but it hasn't disheartened him.

Lyons has won despite his surroundings. But because he never has enjoyed support such as accorded pitchers on contending teams he has not been able to reveal himself at his true value. However, barring the unforeseen, the ex-collegian will this season be surrounded by a team capable both at bat and in the field, and the experts already are speculating on how many victories Ted may achieve.

Feared by Rival Hitters.

The guesses are running as high as 22 games, the same figure he reached a half dozen years ago with a bad ball team.

There must be something to the claim raised by some that if Lyons were pitching for a hitting team such as the Yankees or Athletics of 1932 he would be almost unbeatable. Good hitters on teams he works against will tell you that he is the toughest man they have to face.

Lyons knows how to pitch with a minimum of effort, has an assortment of stuff with which he continually outguesses the batters, and on top of it is a master at fielding his position. There never was a good pitcher who couldn't field. It is part of what makes the great ones great. And don't overlook Lyons as a hitter.

Wins Ten for Helpless Team.

Just take a glance at what Lyons did last year with a ball team that was practically helpless both at bat and on defense. He pitched about one full game before the race was almost half over, and he lost that by a low score in twelve innings. It was late in June before he recovered from a sore arm, and he then went merrily along to finish the year with 10 victories and 15 defeats.

More than a few of those reverses would have ended successfully if he had had the help of hitters such as he expects to have this season.

Twice last season the lowly Boston team whipped him in games where a run or two would have reversed the verdict. One of these trimmings was by a score of 2 to 1. The winning pitcher was Ed Durham, now enrolled with the White Sox. The other was a 14 inning affair which ended 4 to 3. Twice the Yanks set back Lyons in low score battles that they could not have taken if Ted had been assisted by some real hitters like Al Simmons, Jimmy Dykes, Mule Haas, and Lew Fonseca.

Joins Sox in 1923.

It is going on ten years now since Lyons first showed himself in a Sox uniform, but he isn't showing any signs of slipping. He reported to the Chicago club in St. Louis July 2, 1923. That afternoon he saw his first major league game and he also took part in it, much to his surprise.

That day the Browns took a 6 to 0 lead and when the game appeared hopeless Eddie Collins, who was managing during the temporary absence of Bill Gleason, decided to give the Baylor collegian a chance. After Lyons got into the affair the Sox scored three runs and in the ninth threatened again by filling the bases.

In this situation Lyons picked up a handful of bats and began swinging them to get ready for his turn. It didn't occur to him that a kid pitcher would hardly be permitted to swing in a crisis.

Collins saw him with the bats and yelled, "Hey, where you going?"

"It's my turn to bat next," was Lyons' reply. Collins then explained that a pinch hitter would have to serve, so Lyons dropped the bats and sat down on the bench. He was a bit disappointed, but didn't complain.

You wouldn't think it, but Lyons is a tough loser. When he drops a close one he goes into the clubhouse and speaks to nobody but himself. He usually blames himself for not hitting in the needed runs. But the next day he comes back as if nothing ever had happened to disturb his disposition. And when he wins he almost tears the clubhouse apart.

ARMY POLO TEAMS CAPTURE INDOOR CHAMPIONSHIPS

The undefeated Sixth Corps area and 124th field artillery polo teams last night clinched the senior and junior championships of the Metropolitan Indoor Polo league at the 124th field artillery armory. Led by Capt. C. A. Wilkinson, the Six Corps area trio defeated the Milwaukee Badgers, 16 to 9½, for the senior title. The 124th Field Artillery triumphed over the South Shore Remount, 12½ to 7, to capture the junior title.

Babe Herman's Hitting Helps Cubs Win, 4-1

said the slightest tremor tonight will cause him to jump the club.

Manager Terry assured all his Giants that if there is another quake they will not have to do any solo refugee acts.

"I am not going to ask my men to go through another night of such terror," Manager Bill said before today's contest. "One more big jolt and I propose to wire New York for permission to take the squad to Phoenix to complete training!"

Pitchers Hubbell and Bush strictly were in command during the first three innings of this afternoon's test. In that span the Cub batsmen made one hit off Carl, a single by Hartnett with two out in the second. The Giant hitting during the first three innings also came in the second inning, when Terry and Ryan made singles, both made useless by a double play between the two efforts.

Cuyler Triples, Scores.

Cuyler opened the fourth with a triple off the wall at the center field flagpole, the most distant spot inside the acreage. Ki scored on F. Herman's liner to Moore. Stephenson grounded to Critz. H. Taylor went all the way to second on Vergez's two base error. Hartnett walked, but activity ceased when Jurges forced Hartnett.

The score became one all with two out in the fifth when Richards knocked a homer over the wall in left center. Fitzsimmons followed with a double to left, but Critz was out, Hendrick to Bush.

After Cuyler had been thrown out to start the sixth Babe Herman stepped up and broke the tie with a vengeance. He knocked a homer far over the right field bleachers. Stephenson and Hendrick were easy outs.

You've been told how Koenig followed his ninth inning precepts for the last two Cub runs.

The series will continue tomorrow.

DECIDE C. Y. O. TITLES

The C. Y. O. basketball league finals will be held this afternoon at the 131st regiment armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue. Four titles are at stake in the grammar school, girls', boys' lightweight and heavyweight divisions.

St. Joseph's and St. Bernard's heavies, both undefeated, clash for the heavyweight championship. Pacetti, St. Bernard forward, and Jerry and Joe Meier, St. Joseph's former De Paul academy stars, are the boys who will lead the attack.

The lightweight game brings together St. Sylvester, beaten only once, and Sacred Heart, defending titleholders. The Sacred Heart boys have won twelve straight league games. St. Sylvester, however, was the most formidable offense in the league, an offense that has averaged 35 points in the elimination tourney.

The girls' title game will be between Sacred Heart and St. Agatha. Sacred Heart's team has won 14 league games without a defeat and St. Agatha holds the high scoring record of the tournament, a 45 to 6 win over Des Plaines.

Jack Elder, athletic director of the C. Y. O., announces that the lightweight and heavyweight winners will travel to St. Louis March 24 to meet the Catholic champions there. The girls' champions also will be awarded a trip.

NOTRE DAME WINS OVER MINNESOTA FOR 12TH IN ROW

Minneapolis, Minn., March 11.—(AP)—Notre Dame won its 12th successive basketball victory tonight by defeating Minnesota, 31 to 27, in a rough and tumble contest which handed the Gophers their 15th setback in 20 engagements.

Minnesota was ahead at the half, 22 to 15, but fell before an insistent attack by Notre Dame which also drew up a tighter defense for the closing period. It was Notre Dame's 16th victory in 22 games.

CLARK ADVANCES IN PING-PONG TITLE TOURNEY

Play Championship Match Today.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Coleman Clark continued his staunch defense of the national ping-pong championship last night by smashing his way into the semi-final round of the tournament being held at the Palmer house. Three other players—Paul Pearson, William Condy and James Jacobson—survive from the field of 130 which began play Friday night.

The tournament, which is being sponsored by the Interfraternity club of Chicago, will be concluded this afternoon when national championships will be decided for men's singles, men's doubles and women's singles.

Clark Goes Through.

Clark reached the semi-finals by defeating Yoshio Fushimi of Chicago, 21-13, 21-11, 21-17, in a match marked by fast driving and protracted rallies.

Pearson came from behind to eliminate Edwin Lewis of Chicago, 21-15, 16-11, 14-21, 21-15, 21-15. Jacobson, who hails from New York, defeated Frank Work of Chicago, 21-17, 22-20, 13-21, 21-14, and Condy whipped Joseph Ward of Chicago, 15-21, 21-16, 21-17, 21-16.

Chicago Girls in Final.

Jesse Purves of Des Plaines, and Flossie Basler of Chicago will play for the women's championship. In her semi-final match Miss Purves proved herself as steady as Miss Schnur of Glencoe, and just a bit faster, winning by a score of 13-21, 21-18, 22-20, 17-21, 21-18. Throughout the contest the girls were seldom separated by more than two or three points. In a match which was decided largely by speed, Miss Basler defeated Mrs. Ethel Baer Schneider of St. Louis, 21-19, 21-11, 21-16.

Two Chicago youngsters, Paul Pearson and Edwin Lewis, eliminated the veteran New York team of W. Chester Wells Jr. and Herbert W. Allen in the quarter-finals of the men's doubles, the score being 21-10, 21-19. In the same round the Tietjen brothers of St. Louis were unable to get their strokes working smoothly against the fast attack of Yoshio Fushimi and Frank Work of Chicago, the local boys winning by a score of 21-17, 23-20.

Chicagoans Eliminated.

In the other two quarter-final matches, which were held during the afternoon, James Jacobson and George T. Bacon Jr. of New York defeated Max Rushakoff and Wilbur Larson of Chicago, 21-12, 14-21, 21-17, while William Condy and Carlton Prouty of Chicago were eliminating Robert Clark and D. W. McEwan of Chicago, 21-16, 14-21, 21-13.

FINAL RUSH ON TO FILE INCOME TAX RETURNS

Reduction of Exemptions Swells Crowd.

The rush for the filing of income tax returns and paying the first quarterly installments, before the deadline at midnight Wednesday, began at the federal building yesterday. The line extended all the way round the circular corridor of the fifth floor and special express elevator service was provided to handle the crowd.

Gregory T. Van Meter, collector of internal revenue, said that payments in cash were unusually high this year. The largest individual quartely payment received up to yesterday was $102,000, and the largest quarterly payment for a corporation was $134,000, Mr. Van Meter said.

More Obliged to File.

The number filing returns is running higher this year because of the change in the law, reducing the amounts allowed for exemptions. Many men and women in the salary class thus are obliged to file for the first time. Only $1,000 is allowed as a personal exemption for a single person and $2,500 for a married person, as against $1,500 and $3,500, respectively, under the former provisions. The rate on the first $4,000 of net income is 4 per cent, as compared with 1½ per cent last year, and the 25 per cent credit for earned income is no longer allowed. This means that the average man must pay approximately four times as much this year as he paid last year.

Collector Van Meter said he was surprised that so few had requested extensions for the payment of the first quarterly installment. There has been no increase in such requests over previous years, he said. Persons getting extensions are required, except in rare cases, to post security, such as government bonds or a surety bond.

Number of Taxpayers Increased.

No figures were available yesterday on the total number of returns so far filed and collections received, but the number of taxpayers was running several thousand ahead of the number for this time last year. Approximately 150,000 returns have been filed in recent years.

There was also a rush in the postal savings department at the Federal building yesterday. On Friday $175,115 was deposited and $71,862 was taken out. Many people were receiving or sending money by postal orders. A total of $78,794 was sent out of the city Friday and $311,000 was received here.

WHALING SHIP SAVES FAMOUS EXPLORER FROM ANTARCTIC ICE

OSLO, Norway, March 11.—(AP)—Capt. Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, who started an expedition to the antartic in January, was rescued from the ice by a Norwegian whaler after losing all the expedition's equipment and sixty sledge dogs in a violent storm, a telegram received by his relatives here disclosed today.

The party was exploring in the vicinity of Princes Ragnhild land, which Capt. Larsen discovered in 1930, but the storm drove them from the shore and the explorers were drifting to sea on an ice floe when the whaler saved them.

Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, who is a captain in the Norwegian navy, was accompanied on his trip by Hallvard Debold and Olav Kjellbotn. Debold, who formerly was a Norwegian commissioner in East Greenland, is a well known explorer and arctic trapper, while Kjellbotn, one of Norway's best skiers, is a veteran of the arctic. Capt. Riiser-Larsen accompanied Roald Amundsen and Umberto Nobile on their expeditions to the north pole.

EXPENSE AND RED TAPE SEEN CUT BY NEW DEBTOR LAW

Bankruptcies Staved Off Under Plan.

Dissolution of many bondholders' committees was foreseen yesterday, with the eliminating of organizers of the committees and their attorneys, as a result of an amendment to the federal bankruptcy laws passed by congress on March 3 and signed as one of the last acts of President Hoover.

The new law is said to authorize federal courts to take jurisdiction from state courts in the receiverships and trusteeships of buildings now in foreclosure, providing the mortgagor [who holds title to the property] is an individual and not a corporation, and providing a majority of the bondholders consent. The bondholders will benefit, it was explained, through being enabled to deal directly with the owner instead of having to sell at whatever price the bondholders' committee decides, and in the elimination of much of the expense.

Explain Provisions of Law.

Attorney Michael Gesas, professor of bankruptcy law at John Marshall Law school, and Attorney Benjamin F. Goldstein, special counsel for the city in the $25,000,000 telephone rate case, explained some of the provisions of the law yesterday. They said the law was passed to enable mortgagors to protect themselves against bondholders, bondholders' committees, receivers, and extortionate fees, to prevent property from being taken from them through foreclosure, to provide machinery through which mortgagees could be forced to disclose how much was charged the mortgagor, and to prevent the mortgagees from collecting more than the legal rate of interest.

"Under this new act an individual mortgagor can file a petition with the federal court stating that he cannot meet the interest or the principal already matured and asking that an extension be granted to him under such terms as he proposes in his petition, and as the courts will approve," said the Gesas-Goldstein opinion.

Method of Procedure.

"The court then can compel the production of a list of all bondholders and call a meeting of them. If the petitioner presents 'a plan that includes an equitable and feasible method of liquidation for secured creditors, whose claims are to be affected, and also the means of financial rehabilitation for the debtor' the court may then act.

"Under the law the court may approve the terms of the extension [of time to pay the debt] and may also provide for the operation of the property by a custodian or receiver, or permit the owner to stay in possession."

The title of the new law is "Provisions for the Relief of Debtors" and applies to one "who desires to effect a composition [compromise] or an extension of time to pay his debts."

WALKER RETAINS MIAMI COUNSEL FOR WIFE'S SUIT

Miami, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—Appearance papers for James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, in the divorce action brought by his wife, Janet Allen Walker, were filed in Circuit court here today.

Attached to the papers was a copy of a cablegram from Walker in Cannes, France, to Benjamin Cohen, local attorney, which read:

"You are authorized to make immediate appearance, file answer and represent me at hearing generally in case brought by my wife."

Mrs. Walker, a winter resident of Miami Beach, filed the divorce suit earlier this week, charging desertion.

Undecided, Walker Asserts.

CANNES, France, March 11.—(AP)—Former Mayor Walker of New York said today he had not reached any decision about whether to contest the suit for divorce started in the United States by Mrs. Janet Walker. Any decision must come from his attorneys in the United States, he said.

Chicago Realtor Finds John Bull's Housing Projects Are Costly

HENRY N. LORISH OUTLINES WHAT ENGLAND'S DONE

Half Billion Paid Out in Subsidies.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

John Bull's venture into the subsidized housing field has proven a costly experiment and now is one of Great Britain's grave problems, according to Henry N. Lorish, of the Chicago realty firm of Swan, Lorish & Caspers, Inc. He has just returned from two months' study of England's home financing.

Mr. Lorish went abroad on behalf of the National Association of Real Estate boards. He carried credentials from that body, as well as the department of state and the Chicago Real Estate board, and was accorded unusual courtesies, both official and private, from British leaders in real estate, housing, and mortgage loan activities.

England started enthusiastically into the housing field on a tremendous scale, with its financing based on the assumption that Germany would pay the cost of the war, according to Mr. Lorish.

Over Half a Billion in Subsidies.

"Not less than two million housing units have been constructed in England and Wales since 1919," he said. "More than one million of these were erected under state assisted or subsidized plans. The various municipal governments have built and own about seven hundred thousand housing units and have invested in these properties a total of over $2,500,000,000. The national government has, to date, paid out $550,000,000 in operating subsidies and is committed to a program that doesn't end until 1984."

Mr. Lorish said that as England gradually realized that Germany could not or would not pay the war debt, the successive housing acts passed by parliament became more and more conservative.

"The most recent bill terminates further subsidies on any house or plan, except certain slum clearances, after the date of its passage. However, for the housing already built the national government and municipalities are pledged to the tune of billions of dollars during the next half century."

Tenant Pays Taxes.

Mr. Lorish points out that to understand the housing situation in Great Britain one must know about their taxes. They have two major forms; one a government income tax similar to our own, but with a much higher rate; the other a municipal levy whereby every tenant must pay a tax to his city or town in accordance with the size and class of home he occupies. There is no tax on vacant houses or flats. There is no tax assessed on the value of the land and building, as we have it, because the landlord pays on income only.

"In other words, in England everybody pays either income taxes or 'rates' as the tenant tax is called.

"Under the various successive housing acts the cities and towns are required to raise all capital for building, which was done by bond issues, and pay the interest.

"The rentals charged under the various subsidized plans varied roughly from 45 to 80 per cent of the normal prevailing rent. At the present time the difference between subsidized and normal rents is growing less and less, due to lower building costs and lower interest rates.

Government Pays Most.

"The national government agreed to pay the entire operating loss, or subsidy, with the exception of a small amount to be provided locally from 'rates.' It also was specified that if the repairs exceeded 15 per cent of the rent, the amount in excess should be borne by the municipal government.

"A further act was passed later in the year providing lavish subsidies for private builders. These extravagant laws sent up building costs and the government was obligated to a heavy deficit on each house. The annual contribution of the national treasury under this 1919 housing act is about $34,000,000, and in addition the municipal governments bear about $5,000,000 annually. This liability runs until 1984."

"Under the most recent bill, which by this time has probably become a law, the government will grant no further subsidies with respect to housing erected after the date of its passage. Slum clearance plans, under the act of 1930, are excepted.

Offers a New Plan.

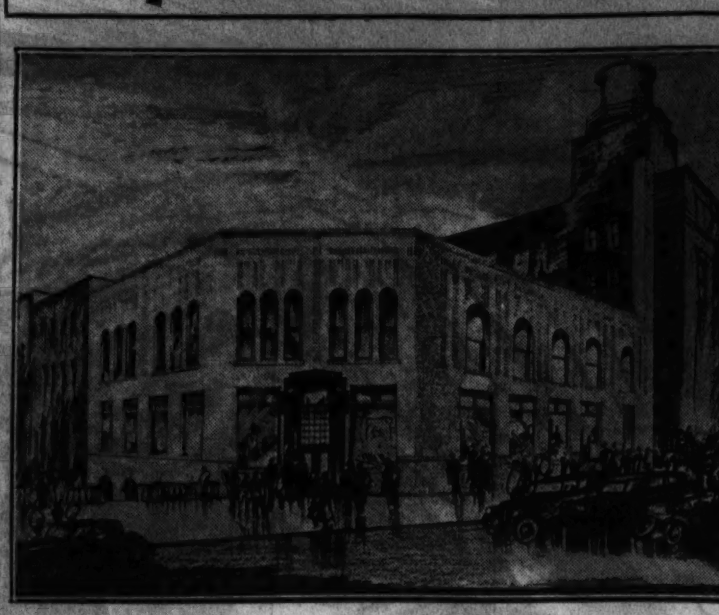
"However, this bill offers a new plan under which it is believed the private builder and investor again will become active and erect housing to rent to the working classes.

"Small working class houses or flats can't be built for sale to the occupants. They have to be built to rent, and it's thought that the removal of subsidized competition will encourage the investment of capital in this class of business. Only the type of housing for which there is a definite economic demand, and that happens to be homes for the poorer working classes, can be approved under this act.

"Buildings will be financed by building societies to the extent of 90 per cent of the cost, the loan to be amortized over a period of thirty years. The interest will be 4½ per cent in London and 4 per cent in the provinces.

"About 261,000 individuals are housed in the properties owned by the London county council. The deficiency or loss in operations for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1932, amounted to about $3,800,000, of which more than half was borne by the national government."

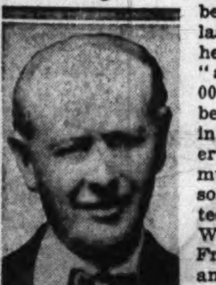
AT WABASH AND KINZIE



Trustees of the estate of Michael Espert are having the four story structure at the northwest corner of Wabash and Kinzie, known as the Lipton Tea building, completely remodeled from plans by Fox & Fox, Chicago architects. Two stories of the building are below the level of the Wabash avenue causeway. The southeast corner of the building is being sliced off and the main entrance will be there. The exterior walls are to be entirely rebuilt with fronts of black structural glass, aluminum window frames, red quarry tile, and cream colored stucco. The structure, formerly used for warehouse purposes, will be remodeled into a modern display building. Completion is set for April 1. Charles Morgan made this picture.

Ideas of Late Millionaire Followed in Remodeling Job

Michael Espert, late president of Monarch Refrigerator company, and who some time before his death last year, swore he was worth "at least $25,000,000," was a great believer in close-in business property. He bought much and seldom sold it. The trustees of his estate, Walter A. Wade, Frederick Espert, and George Ortseifen, are following out his ideas by remodeling the four story Lipton Tea building at the northwest corner of North Wabash avenue and East Kinzie street, into a modern display structure.



MICHAEL ESPERT.

Plans have been completed by Fox & Fox and work is under way on a complete rejuvenation of the old structure. Although four stories high, only two extend above the level of the Wabash avenue causeway.

The building will have large show windows on the third floor, or Wabash avenue level, with a new main entrance at the corner. The exterior walls will be rebuilt of black structural glass, aluminum window frames, red quarry tile, and cream tinted stucco. From the main entrance a circular terrazzo staircase will lead to the display rooms.

"Michael Espert had a great love for Chicago," said his son-in-law, George Ortseifen. "He was a speculator in the future of the city and always felt, and I believe still would, if he were alive today, that not a piece of property should be sold. The executors of his estate are, we believe, carrying out his wishes in remodeling the old Lipton Tea building."

Although Mr. Espert at one time claimed to be worth $25,000,000, the inventory filed in Probate court six months after his death showed his estate then amounted to $2,524,305. Two million of this was in Cook county real estate.

BALKS PLANS FOR PENNY MORTGAGE SALE ON FARM

Scotts Bluff, Neb., March 11.—(AP)—A "law and order" league took the farm holiday movement in hand today and balked plans for another "penny" foreclosure sale by buying cattle at real bids.

Nearly 5,000 farmers and business men gathered at a sale barn, with the "law and order" advocates outnumbering farm holiday enthusiasts by a wide margin. The holiday group had intended to buy in the chattels of Peter A. Swanson at prices far below their value, as has been done by similar groups in many states.

One seven cent bid was offered on the first piece of farm equipment put on sale. The piece sold finally for $75. Other equipment sold for prices ranging from $1 to nearly $100. Draught animals brought more than $100 pere team.

There was no violence, although arguments were heard when the holiday group retired to nearby vacant lots for speechmaking. A large number of the holiday proponents were from surrounding counties and eastern Wyoming.

At a recent meeting of nearly 1,000 farmers and business men the law and order organization was completed.

It sent a resolution to Gov. Charles W. Bryan telling him of the action taken and asking him to authorize the organization of similar leagues in every county in the state.

Closed Bank Reopens as a Palm Garden Restaurant

The problem of how closed bank properties can be used has been solved in the case of the defunct Forest Park State bank. Edward J. Scott reports having negotiated a lease for the entire first floor of the bank building at 701 Madison street, in Forest Park to William P. Bruns of Villa Park, who has remodeled the property into a resturant known as Bruns Palm Garden. The formal opening will be on March 16.

Realty Firms Warned to Carry Burglary Insurance

As a result of the robbery of the office of Arthur Kruggel and loss of $2,500 in cash, Cook county realtors have been warned by the Chicago Real Estate board to carry burglary and holdup insurance if they are carrying large amounts of cash in their office vaults.

B. F. Dickman Named for Mayor of St. Louis

St. Louis, Mo., March 11.—(AP)—Bernard F. Dickman won the Democratic nomination for mayor of St. Louis in yesterday's primary from his nearest opponent, Jerome F. Duggan, by a vote of 100,889 to 19,867.

WM. R. HILL WILL MOVE BOOKSHOP 3 DOORS WEST

William R. Hill, one of Chicago's oldest and best known book dealers, who has been connected with the book business since 1883, has leased the store at 925 East 47th street for a term of years. He will shortly move his book business, which is now at 4700 Ingleside avenue, at the southwest corner of Ingleside and 47th, to his new quarters, which are three doors to the west. Mr. Hill, who lives at 4455 Ellis avenue, has been in the Kenwood area for sixteen years. He has had his present corner store for five years and prior to that for eleven years was in the block east. Mr. Hill was born in England.

NORTH WESTERN PLANS LA SALLE STREET OFFICE

The Chicago and North Western railway, which has had its city ticket office and travel bureau at the northwest corner of Clark and Adams for many years, with the exception of the period it occupied space at the Central railroad ticket offices in the Insurance exchange, will move to the first floor corner in the new Field building, at La Salle and Adams about April 15.

According to Robert Carpenter, manager of Chicago's largest office structure, the North Western decided to move because the new location would place it in the heart of the financial district, where much of the city ticket office's business originates.

This will be the second large railroad to open a La Salle street ticket office within the last few months. The Pennsylvania leased the corner store in the Borland block, at the southeast corner of La Salle and Monroe, some time ago.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

Contracts awarded in Chicago for the week of March 3 to 9, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled twenty-one, with a combined cost of $294,000. As in former weeks most of this is at A Century of Progress exposition, the total awards at the fair being $198,000.

BUILDING IN SUBURBS SHOWS 29% INCREASE

Wilmette Permit Is a Life Saver.

Suburban building figures for the month of February, compiled by the Straus Securities corporation, show a gain of 29 per cent over the month of January. Comparison with the same month of 1932 is not so cheering, as February, 1933, slipped 27 per cent below February of last year. The total building permits in the Chicago suburbs for February, 1933, were $305,221. This compares with $235,799 in January of this year and with $418,261 for February of last year.

When analyzed, however, last month's figures aren't quite so cheering, for one permit saves the total from hitting a new low record. This was a permit for the Wilmette waterworks, which, according to B. H. Platt, village engineer, was $139,746.

Charles S. Crow, building commissioner of Homewood, and who in point of service is dean of all the building commissioners in the Chicago region, is optimistic for 1933.

Dean Is Optimistic.

"Homewood's building for the last year has been the lowest we've seen in the years I've been building commissioner here," he said. "Homewood felt the full force of the depression, but we have faith in this year of 1933 and feel confident there'll be a general revival of trade and that building will be increased many times over the last year or the year previous.

"Being past my 80th year, I've been through other periods of depression almost as destructive as this, when our factories closed, our banks failed, and our businesses went to the wall. There was suffering and misery throughout the country, but we recovered and became more prosperous than we had ever been before.

"This year, we can well believe, will see us on the road to prosperity, perhaps such a prosperity as our country has never known."

Activity in Evanston.

Comments by other building commissioners hardly indicate expectations of a great amount of activity. New private garages, small alteration jobs, repairs, painting, and decorating seem to make up the building expectations of most of the communities.

Exceptions to the rule are A. J. Nichol, building inspector of Evanston, who reports prospects for three new homes, and Harry C. Shales, city auditor of Crystal Lake, who says he's receiving inquiries concerning proposed construction.

Furniture Dealers Rent Corner on Tower Court

Grow & Cuttle, Inc., importers and dealers in furniture, antiques, and accessories, have leased the corner store in the 820 North Michigan avenue building, at the southwest corner of Pearson street and Tower court. The 1,800 square feet of space was leased on a guaranty and percentage basis through Edward S. Anderson of Ross & Browne. The lessees have wholesale showrooms in the Furniture Mart, which will be maintained.

Could you tell me anything about the real estate bonds on the 3300 Sheridan road apartment building?
A. S.

The bondholders' protective committee reports that the property is in the hands of the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee. Gross receipts from Jan. 1 to Nov. 23, 1932, were $144,767. Operating expenses for the same period are reported to have been $96,182. Bond interest was $64,484.

The committee states that $10,000 has been paid on the $38,798 1930 taxes. The 1931 taxes are estimated at $43,278 and 1932 taxes at $40,737.

The seventeen story building, which contains eighty apartments of five to eleven rooms, is reported to have an occupancy of 75 per cent. The committee states that the physical condition of the building, erected six years ago, is "very good." The property is at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Aldine avenue.

1524 West Garfield Boulevard.

I bought a 6 per cent first mortgage gold bond on the property at 1524 West Garfield boulevard through the Southwest State bank [now closed], which later joined the Depositors' State bank. Joseph Dasbach and others are the equity owners. The last interest coupon attached to the bond was of May 14, 1932. The bond was called for deposit on May 23, 1932, and I'm holding a certificate of deposit. The principal is due May 14, 1933. Any information will be appreciated.
K. K.

James A. Malooly, secretary for the bondholders' protective committee states that interest payment of $720 due May 24, 1932, defaulted.

"Shortly after the default a foreclosure suit was filed and C. D. Eulette was appointed receiver," said Mr. Malooly. "Statements received by us from Mr. Eulette from June, 1932, to January, 1933, show gross receipts of $1,640, with expenses of $1,440, which includes a $450 payment on account of 1930 taxes. So, the amount in the hands of the receiver as of Jan. 31, 1933, was $200. There is one vacancy.

"A recent tax search discloses the 1929 taxes paid in full and, as mentioned, a $450 payment on account of the 1930 taxes.

"Practically all of the bonds have been deposited and we have been negotiating with the owner with reference to acquiring the title and the junior mortgage for an interest in a liquidation trust but have not been successful in completing the plan. At this time it looks as if it will be necessary to complete the foreclosure."

The bond issue originally was for $25,000, since reduced to $24,000. George D. Hopkins, secretary of Wilson & Co., is chairman of the bondholders' protective committee. The members are: John S. Jurik, John R. O'Connor, Frank L. Webb [receiver for the Depositors' State bank], and Mr. Malooly.

REALTOR THINKS SOME ONE'S GOT MILLION IN CASH

One of the loop's best known realty men yesterday stated that he had seen such definite signs that wealth at last is showing an inclination to turn to real estate that he believes he can dispose of one of the prominent down town corners for one million dollars cash. With that in mind he last night inserted in today's TRIBUNE: "State street corner in loop can be bought for one million dollars cash, which is much less than its normal value. Property of this character is seldom available."

Levenworth, who formerly operated a brokerage business in Downers Grove and who has specialized in Du Page county property for the last eight years, has been appointed manager of the new Lisle office of Arthur T. McIntosh & Co. This was recently opened on Ogden avenue, just east of the new concrete bridge over state highway 53.

CLOSE 4 MORE LEASES IN ONE ELEVEN BUILDING

Makes Total of Nine in Three Months.

Four more leases were negotiated yesterday for space in the fifteen story One Eleven building, at 111 North Canal street and 427 West Randolph street, which is operated by Butler Brothers. This makes a total of nine important leases closed during the last three months for space in this structure. All were negotiated by Anne Davis, agent for the building, and Arthur Westphal, operating manager of Butler Brothers.

The Royal Typewriter company has leased 11,000 square feet of space on the second floor of the One Eleven building and will move at once from its present Chicago headquarters, 17 South Wabash avenue, to its new quarters.

The lessee will have a main stairway entrance into their space directly from the Randolph street lobby. In addition to the company's salesrooms, the Royal Typewriter company will maintain its employment service in the new location. A. W. Barlow is western sales manager. E. C. Faustman is president.

Printing Company Lease.

Another of the leases was to the Post Printing company which rented the west section of the twelfth floor for a five year term, at an undisclosed rental. Space will be used for offices, salesrooms, and pressroom. The concern specializes in fine printing, having as customers many of the larger investment houses on La Salle street, according to Mr. Westphal.

The lessee is now at 374 West Monroe street and will move immediately to its now location. John O. Rittermal is president and J. Earl Rittermal is secretary of the company.

The third of the leases was by the Armstrong Cork company's insulation division which is to be moved from 120 West Illinois street. The term is for five years and the space it will occupy adjoins that now used by the cork division of the Armstrong company which has been in the One Eleven building for a number of years.

Porter Company Lease.

The fourth transaction was by the Breck D. Porter company, now at 1313 West Randolph street, which has leased the northwest section of the eighth floor for a five year term. This will be used for offices, salesroom, and plant for printing and engraving. The lessee's loop retail salesrooms are in the Pittsfield building. Occupancy in the One Eleven building is scheduled for on or before April 1. Breck D. Porter is president of the leasing concern.

GLENVIEW BUYS TEN ACRE TRACT FOR TOWN PARK

A 10 acre tract in the town of Glenview has been purchased by the Glenview park district from Joseph E. Maynard, according to the county records. The revenue stamps indicate $18,000 paid. Wyatt & Coons were brokers.

The property, which is four blocks west of the center of town, is bounded on the east by Spruce street and on the west by Forest avenue. It will be improved with tennis courts, a baseball diamond, and other recreational fixtures.

Two streets now being cut through the property are to be vacated. Edwin F. Rugen is president of the park board. The members are: Carl Ladendorf, Louis Cole, Frank Biederer, and George K. Fisher.

HOME OWNERS' FRIEND

Inquiries should be addressed to Home Owners' Friend and must be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. State all necessary facts. Answers of general interest may be published. Answers are based on data believed to be correct, but beyond care in securing it, The Tribune assumes no responsibility.

Contracts—from Both Sides.

Several inquiries have been received by this department regarding contracts both from buyers and sellers. One person sold a home on a contract five years ago, on which the buyer paid half. Nothing has been paid for six months. He states he wouldn't like to take the house back, but in case he does, he asks how long will it take.

Another writes in that he purchased a house on a contract and is now not able to keep up payments, and is able only to keep up the interest. He wants to know what his legal rights are.

A third home buyer asks if it will take eighteen months to two years to dispossess him for failure to make payments on his contract.

The forcible detainer act authorizes the seller to file a suit for possession when the buyer fails to make payments and also refuses to get out when a demand is made in writing that he vacate. The law requires, however, that thirty days' notice be given.

Although in a mortgage foreclosure the mortgagor, or borrower, is sometimes allowed to continue occupying the house during the fifteen months' redemption period, there's no such delay on contract cases.

The foregoing, of course, relates only to possession. To clear the title the original seller may have to file a bill in equity if the contract has been recorded, and the court, before entering a decree, may order the refund of an equitable portion of the purchase money.

If the contract has not been recorded, the original seller may resell clear of the buyer's equity. If the buyer within a reasonable time and before court proceedings, tenders the amount due, he can in most cases reinstate the contract.

VAST TRACTS OF FARM LANDS SOLD FOR TAXES

Leniency Aids Other Property Owners.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

The results of the huge tax burden nposed on farmers at a time when arm prices are at a minimum are aparent in the rural communities where elinquency in payment of taxes is a erious problem.

Many farmers are losing title to heir lands because of their failure to ay taxes and were it not for the eniency in enforcing the law in many tates the acreage reverting to pubc ownership would be far heavier han it is now.

This department recently asked the ax commissioners of the various tates what conditions were in their wn states with respect to farm lands everting to public ownership for nonayment of taxes and with respect to x delinquency on farm property. eplies from a number of states were rinted last week. The others follow:

NEBRASKA.

William H. Smith, state tax comissioner, says no record is kept. One uthority estimates that tax denquency in the predominantly agriultural counties increased thirteen old from 1927 to 1931.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

E. C. Hirst advises that tax denquency is very low in this state. e believes that less than 10 per cent taxes for the fiscal year ending an. 31, 1932, remain unpaid. Delinuency may be higher for the fiscal ar ending Jan. 31, 1933.

NEW MEXICO.

J. D. Mell, special tax attorney for x commission, says New Mexico has ot found it necessary to deprive any tizen of his property for nonpayent of taxes, although there is conderable delinquency.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Reports progressively increasing nount of property sold for taxes each ear. In 1928 the counties advertised elinquent taxes on real estate in the nount of $4,256,000, $5,060,000 in 1929, nd $7,499,000 in 1931. The number of ieces of real estate advertised was 01,326 in 1928, 113,262 in 1929, and 52,346 in 1931.

NORTH DAKOTA.

F. A. Vogel, tax commissioner, says at 31 of the state's 53 counties report follows: Real estate for which tax eeds may be issued totals 396,921 cres. Lands which have passed to e county on tax deed and upon hich no tax was levied in 1932 total 6,026 acres, making a total of 632,7 acres. Total accumulated delinuency on all real estate, but not inuding taxes assessed for 1932 total ,289,929. A bill effective Jan. 20, 33, provides for the suspension of suance of tax deeds until March 1, 35.

OKLAHOMA.

Keeps no general state record on nd reverting to the various counties r nonpayment of taxes. However elvin Cornish, state tax commisoner, estimates that from 10 to 25 r cent of the land of the state is afcted. Taking the 70,057 gross square ile area of the state, the delinquent creage would run from 4,483,648 to ,209,120 acres. Mr. Cornish states at measures are being taken to help nd owners.

PENNSYLVANIA.

E. A. Ziegler, secretary of the Pennlvania mineral and forest land tax mmission, estimates that up to 1932 overing 1930 taxes] delinquency as easured by tax sales has not been rious for farm lands. "Probably t over 1 per cent, or 120,000 acres farm lands were sold at the last 32 tax sale and less than ½ of one r cent, or 50,000 acres, will revert the counties," he says. "Forest nds have had a tax sale rate much gher."

OREGON.

One authority estimates a 50 per nt delinquency on taxes in a conderable number of counties.

RHODE ISLAND.

Frank F. Davis, secretary departent of state taxation, says farm denquency represents a very small reage. He doubts such delinquency ceeds 500 acres.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

L. E. Corey, director of taxation, ys he has no record of present farm x delinquency. However, his predessor, B. W. Baer, late in December, 32, estimated that between 5,500,000 d 7,350,000 acres of agricultural nd were to be auctioned, with few yers accepted. He estimated that total of 36,806,024 acres were asssed in 1931 for taxes payable in 32 on which delinquency was from to 30 per cent. He also estimated at 20 per cent of the state's total ricultural acreage would be removed om the tax lists after the counties ok title. Another authority estiates that the state now owns over 000,000 acres of land acquired rough interest and tax delinquency d another 1,000,000 acres, not all rm land, which it is acquiring rough tax disaster.

UTAH.

R. E. Hammond, state tax commisoner, says during the last two years ere has been an unusually large tax linquency. The net gross last year ter allowing for redemptions was 11 r cent. Gross this year is about per cent and he expects the net delinquency to be about 15 per cent on l property in the state. Based on e gross square mile average, a 15 r cent tax delinquency would involve 8,159,040 acres.

WISCONSIN.

Prof. B. H. Hibbard estimates that ot less than 2,500,000 acres of land cently become public-county propty, another 1,000,000 acres is movg toward national ownerships, and 000,000 acres are delinquent.

Nevada, New Jersey, South Carolina, nnessee, Vermont and Washington mpile no records. Records in New ork are kept by the counties.

Cash Sent Out to Farmers for Live Stock

The first large shipments of currency for the payment of the $2,500,000 worth of live stock received at Chicago last week were made to the country through the postoffice yesterday morning. A steady stream of money flowed out all forenoon. Two stockyards banks were authorized to cash all checks of packers who have made arrangements with the banks for such payments.

This controversy over the basis of payment while the bank holiday is in effect, and other serious complications that developed during the week, threatened several times to close the live stock market temporarily.

Leaders were confident yesterday, however, that the storm has been weathered and that the market will see normal functioning in several days. The danger of a complete shut down now is small, they stated.

Packers' Operations Near Normal.

Packing houses operated about 80 per cent of normal during the week. The slaughter by Chicago houses totaled 153,000 cattle, hogs and sheep that made a total weight of more than 40 million pounds, which compared with an average of 195,000 animals for the last six weeks and with 185,000 average for the last three weeks.

Since the bank holiday was declared a week ago, prices of live stock and meats have been tossing about, skyrocketing one day and plunging downward the next. Owing to the sensational advance at the opening of the week and the higher level of prices during the first two days, average costs of all live stock were higher than a week ago.

Cattle and Hogs Advance.

Cattle and hog average prices advanced 10 per cent, the latter being 37 per cent above the low weekly average this winter. The average hog price at $3.85 was within 30 cents of the highest since last September. Cattle cost the packers an average of $5.30 per hundred weight, which was the highest weekly cost this year. Lambs averaged $5.60, the highest level in three weeks, but only 5 per cent above the winter's low point.

Members of the trade are taking a decidedly optimistic view of the immediate future for the live stock markets. This feeling seems to be general in many of the feeding areas tributary to the Chicago market. Consequently, a lighter movement of stock is anticipated for the next few days. Hardly enough arrived to make a market yesterday.

The movement to all market centers and direct to the packers is also reported light for the first of next week. At the close of the week big packers absorbed the few lots of hogs on the market at strong to 10 cents higher prices, paying $3.90 as the top for 240 to 283 pound butchers. No choice light animals were offered, but were quotable at $4.

RONG ALI GOES WRONG, AND SO DO SOUTH SEAS

PAPEETE, Tahiti, March 11.—The failure of Rong Ali & Co., Ltd., on Feb. 6, and consequent liquidation of Banque Chin Foo, has affected industry and business throughout the southwestern Pacific.

For many years the company, which applied for voluntary liquidation, held the leading place among the Chinese merchants of French Oceania as buyers of copra, shell and vanilla and owners of many interisland vessels and trading stations.

Suspension of the Sen Hop company, another large Chinese buyer of copra and island products, and several smaller Chinese traders followed the difficulties of Rong Ali & Co. and the Banque Chin Foo. Reports of the receiver of Rong Ali & Co. indicated they probably would continue business under the court with eventual reconstitution of solvency.

MOTOR OUTPUT IS 88,541 UNITS FOR FEBRUARY

New York, March 11.—(AP)—Automobile production in February totaled 88,541 cars and trucks, a decrease of 19 per cent compared with the corresponding month a year ago, and a drop of 22 per cent from January this year.

These figures comprise reports from members of the National Automobile chamber of commerce, which includes all the important producers with the exception of Ford. January production was 113,862 units. The chamber's statistics cover output in the United States and Canada.

Lack of Cash Keeps N. Y. Persons from Bankruptcy

Utica, N. Y., March 11.—By an odd twist, lack of cash is keeping some people out of bankruptcy. Nellie J. Marks, deputy clerk in federal court here, says that her office is holding up eight petitions in bankruptcy which were accompanied by checks instead of currency. The government is not accepting checks at present, the petitioners have been informed. The fee accompanying such petitions is $30—in cash.

Clarendon Beach Hotel Co. Named in Bankruptcy Suit

Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were instituted yesterday in the United States District court against the Clarendon Beach Hotel company, operators of a hotel of that name at 831 Wilson avenue. The petition was filed by Attorney John F. Shea on behalf of three creditors with combined claims of $1,000.

Urges Strict State Control of Utilities

Rigid state regulation of public utilities and holding companies in Illinois was advocated yesterday by David E. Lilienthal, member of the Wisconsin public service commission and former Chicago lawyer, who addressed the League of Women Voters at the Palmer house.

Illinois, Mr. Lilienthal said, is now the center of nation-wide attention with respect to utility regulation, and utility executives, public officials and investors throughout the country are asking: "What is Illinois going to do?"

"The view is widely held," he said, "that the catastrophe which has been visited on the country, and particularly Chicago, through the shocking collapse of the Insull system is a responsibility of the public agencies of the state of Illinois."

Suggests Four Reforms.

Mr. Lilienthal made four proposals for legislation to control the utilities, which, he said, are public businesses and should be controlled for the best interests of the public which they serve. These proposals are:

1. A broad grant to the state commerce commission of jurisdiction over all transactions between any operating utility company and any affiliated company or interest, including not only holding companies but any other companies having common directors.

2. That utilities be prohibited from lending funds to related companies, except under strict control by the commission.

3. That the state commission require, except in unusual cases, competitive bidding by investment bankers on senior securities issued by a public utility, so that the utility will receive the highest possible price for the protection of the rate payer.

4. That public utilities be forbidden to pay dividends on common stock at the expense of adequate provision for depreciation and other reserves, or where such dividends endanger the capital structure.

No Recent Rate Cuts.

Mr. Lilienthal observed that utility rates have not declined since 1929, although the incomes of individuals and corporations, as well as commodity prices, have fallen drastically. He cited many examples of the siphoning of utility companies by holding companies, with resultant impaired reserves on the part of the former, serving to keep the rates up. In one instance, he said, a group of operating companies found it necessary in a single year to write off against the surplus $75,000,000 because of investments through subsidiaries.

"Business and government must demonstrate to a skeptical public," said Mr. Lilienthal, "that in the future they will function for the general public welfare. Confidence of consumers and investors in the utilities can be regained only by a return to the fundamental that public utilities are public businesses."

Lumbermen's Mutual Will Pay Claims with Cash

Claims on the Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty company of Chicago and associated fire mutuals will be paid in cash upon receipt of proof, the president, James S. Kemper, announced yesterday. The companies had already arranged under the United States treasury release provision to pay compensation to those injured in industry, Mr. Kemper's statement said, and this would doubtless apply to earthquake sufferers.

N. Y. STOCK EXCHANGE LIKELY TO GIVE DAY'S NOTICE OF REOPENING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 11.—The New York Stock exchange ended today its first week of enforced inactivity since 1914 without any indication as to when trading would be resumed. None of the other security or commodity markets here has yet set a date for reopening.

The special committee of seven, appointed to meet problems arising from the suspension, was in session today but issued no statement. Brokers in Wall street do not expect the exchange to reopen before normal banking operations are restored in this city. Those who have inquired at the exchange have been told that "ample notice" would be given. This is generally interpreted to mean that warning will be issued a day before the exchange reopens.

CHICAGO REOPENING PLANS.

Plans for reopening the Chicago Stock exchange were discussed yesterday by the board of governors, but no date was set. It was the consensus that it would be desirable for the Chicago and New York exchanges and the Chicago Board of Trade to resume business simultaneously. However, it also was the general opinion that the reopening of the markets should be delayed a day or two after the reopening of the banks in order to give the latter an opportunity to arrange for free credit facilities.

ENGLISH ROADS SLASH FARES TO COMBAT BUSES

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, March 11.—A drastic and unprecendented cut in fares as a means of regaining the large custom lost to motor coach companies has been fixed by the four leading railroads.

The new fares, to operate throughout the summer from May 1 to Sept. 30, represent a redutcion of one-third on present return tickets and for the first time in many years the public is offered comprehensive travel at one penny per mile. These "summer tickets" will be available for return journey on any train and any day within a calendar month.

The companies, furthermore, are planning thousands of cheap day excursions, linking industrial towns and seaside resorts in the hope the scheme will contribute to trade revival. Last year, 64,500,000 passengers used the British railway between the dates named.

J. Oliver Johnson, Seed Merchants, Hire 100 Men

One hundred men were added to the pay rolls of J. Oliver Johnson, Inc., Chicago lawn grass seed merchants, during the last week, and still further employment is anticipated as the seasonal upswing in seed lines becomes more pronounced, J. Oliver Johnson, president, said yesterday. Both sales and plant forces have been increased in Chicago. Men will soon be added in the company's New York, Detroit, and Belmont, Mass., offices.

First Official Spot Cotton Price 1¼ Cents Over Last Closing

New York, March 11.—(AP)—The first official price for spot cotton since the closing of the exchanges was reported today from Norfolk, with middling quoted at 7.50 cents a pound against 6.26 cents last week. Reopening of the exchange there was the most important development of the day, although the market is strictly for spot dealings. The sales totaled 331 bales.

Reports reaching the spot cotton trade indicated a hardening of the price basis in the south. Holders were asking, in some cases, 7 cents for cotton basis middling ⅞ inch staple, but many others were holding for prices ranging up to 8 cents, these quotations being equivalent to about 7½ to 8½ cents at the ports.

Ask 7½ to 8 Cents.

In the easern belt spot holders were also said to be firmer, some in the interior asking 7½ cents or the equivalent of 8 cents delivered in eastern mills on the basis of middling ⅞ths.

After a week of rising prices and feverish activity in some directions, the New York commodity markets lapsed into comparative dullness today, with quotations generally off from the previous day. The reduced interest in the markets was in accord with the usual Saturday quiet.

Some Food Products Easier.

Moderate price recessions occurred in some of the foods, including eggs, butter, and live poultry. Sugar and cocoa were about unchanged.

Business in metals was light and Friday's quotations for copper and most of the other nonferrous items held over. Spot silver was quoted ½ cent lower at 29¼ cents an ounce. Quicksilver rounded out a week of advancing prices with another rise of $1 a flask to $53-$55.

Car Loadings Rising Before Bank Holiday

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—Loading of revenue freight for the week ended on March 4 totaled 477,827 cars, the car service division of the American Railway association announced today. This was an increase of 18,748 cars over the preceding week, but a reduction of 81,652 cars under the same week in 1932 and 245,388 cars under the same week in 1931. The current figures cover the week before the national banking holiday started.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week of March 4 totaled 160,256 cars, an increase of 9,628 cars above the preceding week, but 36,360 cars under the corresponding week in 1932 and 106,039 cars under the same week in 1931.

Less Than Carlots Lower.

Loading of less than carload lot merchandise totaled 162,052 cars, an increase of 18,662 cars above the preceding week, but 29,452 cars below the corresponding week last year and 58,415 cars under the same week two years ago.

Grain and grain products loading for the week totaled 27,861 cars, 458 cars below the preceding week, 3,510 cars below the corresponding week last year and 13,692 cars below the same week in 1931. In the western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended on March 4 totaled 17,121 cars, a decrease of 2,113 cars below the same week last year.

Coal Loadings Decline.

Coal loading amounted to 92,166 cars, a decrease of 9,475 cars below the preceding week, 3,201 cars below the corresponding week in 1932, and 36,957 cars below the same week in 1931.

Live stock loading amounted to 14,025 cars, a decrease of 397 cars below the preceding week, 2,927 cars below the same week last year and 4,144 cars below the same week two years ago. In the western districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended on March 4 totaled 11,057 cars, a decrease of 2,182 cars compared with the same week last year.

TRADE INDICES SHOW DECLINES IN LAST WEEK

New York, March 11.—(AP)—Statistics appearing during the last week on freight car loadings, electric power production, and steel ingot output showed a declining tendency, according to Moody's Index figures for these factors.

These indices are corrected for seasonal variation—that is, if each change in the actual reported loadings of production amounted to the usual change for the period, the index itself would be unchanged. The indices follows:

Milwaukee Road Recalls 850 Men to Its Car Shops

Milwaukee, Wis., March 11.—(AP)—K. F. Nydstrom, superintendent of the Milwaukee railroad, announced today that about 850 men will return to work in the passenger car shops of the road Monday. He said 300 are employés who have not had regular employment for many months, and that the 550 others have been on a three weeks' layoff. He said the shops will go on an increased production basis. They were closed in February.

GRAINS JUMP IN UNOFFICIAL CASH TRADES

Wheat and Corn Up 2 to 7 Cents.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Cash grain prices have advanced sharply during the last week, based on unofficial reports of sales in the various markets. Shippers might have secured 24¾ to 25½ cents for No. 3 yellow corn at Chicago Saturday, it was believed, or about 2 to 3 cents above the actual sales made on March 3. At Peoria, No. 3 yellow corn was said to have brought 21¾ to 22 cents, or 2¼ cents above late prices in the previous week, while oats were ½ to 1 cent higher at 14 to 16 cents for No. 2 white.

Scattered sales of cash wheat in the Cincinnati market were made at advances of 5 to 7 cents, compared with the price secured on March 3. A little business is being done at Kansas City, with No. 1 hard wheat reported sold yesterday at 50 to 51 cents and No. 2 hard at 51 cents, indicating an advance of 3½ to 6 cents in about a week. At Duluth, cash wheat was in good demand, with mills taking the grain on the basis of prices to be fixed when the markets reopen.

Flour and Bran Higher.

According to leading Chicago mills, flour prices here have advanced 50 to 75 cents per barrel during the week. Bran, which sold at $10 per ton about a month ago, has been affected to a considerable extent by the curtailed offering of mill offal, and was quoted around $14.50 to $14.75, the best price in over a year.

At a special meeting of directors of the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday it was ruled that weekly indemnities on grain which would normally have expired March 11 were null and void and that all commissions and brokerage should be canceled and the money refunded. It was further ruled that unless the holder of indemnities to expire March 4 had exercised his privilege on March 3, the seller should refund to the buyer all consideration paid for the indemnities.

At a meeting of Chicago bankers and directors of the Board of Trade the banking and grain marketing situation was discussed in regard to the possibility of reopening of grain trading. No decision was reached.

Price of Seats Doubles.

Demand for Board of Trade memberships, which is regarded as an accurate reflection of the prospect for business in grains, have practically doubled the price in about two weeks. A sale was reported yesterday at $7,500 net to the buyer, compared with $3,800 recently, and was $1,500 above the last previous sale.

Winnipeg wheat prices were again on the upgrade early yesterday, advancing 1 cent above Friday's finish to a new high for the week at 53¾ cents for May in Canadian funds, the best price witnessed since Oct. 25, 1932. Buying by houses with Chicago and eastern connections, and also to remove hedges against export sales via Vancouver, were a factor. Toward the last there was profit taking and week-end evening up, and the close was unchanged to ⅛ cent higher for the day. May finished at 52¼ to 52⅜ cents; July at 53½ cents and October at 55⅛ cents. At the extreme top there was an advance of 4¾ to 5⅜ cents from the close on March 3. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅜d higher.

Trading in other grains at Winnipeg was fair. Prices were higher early, but they reacted with wheat later. Oats closed ⅛ to ¼ cent lower. Rye gained ⅛ to ⅜ cent and flax seed was up ¼ cent, while barley was ⅛ cent lower to ¼ cent higher.

J. R. THOMPSON CO. POSTPONES DIVIDEND ACTION

The John R. Thompson company reported yesterday that because of the bank holiday, the board of directors postponed action on the dividend. The meeting was adjourned until next Tuesday.

Indiana Declares Holiday on Insurance Policy Loans

Indianapolis, March 11.—(AP)—John C. Kidd, state commissioner of insurance, today declared a moratorium on insurance policy loans and on the cash surrender of policies. Exceptions are made where loans are granted for payment of a premium or other obligation of the policy holder to the company or when extreme need is shown. Then the limit is 20 per cent of the loan value but not to exceed $100.

Kansas Bans Policy Loans.

Topeka, Kas., March 11.—(AP)—A moratorium for an indefinite period on policy loans or cash surrender payments by life insurance companies in Kansas was ordered late today by Charles F. Hobbs, state commissioner of insurance. Exceptions were made in cases of extreme need.

British Trade Last Month Showed Excess of Imports

LONDON, March 11.—(AP)—The following are the board of trade figures for February in pounds: Imports, £49,070,000; exports of British products, £27,290,000; reëxports, £4,480,000; total exports, £32,400,000; excess of imports, £16,670,000.

BANKS OF FRANCE, BRITAIN AND U. S. SUPPORT DOLLAR

PARIS, March 11.—[U. P.]—Three of the great banking systems of the world—the Bank of France, the Bank of England, and the United States federal reserve system—joined today in a move to curb speculation in the dollar.

A spokesman for the Bank of France said the three had decided to deliver dollars to those speculators who have gone short, a move that will prevent further weakening of the American dollar and one that will cost various syndicates and individuals about $1,000,000.

Raids on the dollar have been led by a so-called "Balkan gang," operating for several months in dollar speculation.

In unofficial dealings the dollar today, possibly as a result of this action, regained its full strength. Official dealings will be resumed next week despite inability to deliver due to the gold embargo.

The concerted action of the three banks revealed that the Bank of France and the federal reserve have been in daily telephonic communication.

Meanwhile, there was a good tone on American stocks on European bourses.

On the basis of the last official rate for sterling exchange the London prices of important American stocks show gains when compared with the quotations of these shares on March 3, the day trading was suspended in New York. Some of the leaders:

AVIATION CORP. MAY RELOCATE OFFICES HERE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 11.—Directors of the Aviation corporation are expected to vote on removal of the executive offices of the organization from New York to Chicago at a meeting called for next Wednesday. At that meeting some of the Harriman and Lehman representatives on the board are expected to resign.

This action is anticipated as an anticlimax to the battle for control of Aviation corporation waged last November between E. L. Cord, Chicago airplane and automobile manufacturer, and the old management, headed by La Motte T. Cohu, who has resigned as president of the corporation. Mr. Cord is said to control 1,100,000 shares of the corporation's 2,800,000 shares of stock.

Aviation corporation's operating subsidiary, American Airways, located its headquarters in Chicago during February. The Cord corporation offices also are located there. The annual meeting of stockholders is on April 18.

AUTO FINANCE FIRMS RESUMING USUAL BUSINESS

The National Association of Finance Companies announced yesterday it would advise its 300 members to resume normal operation immediately. C. C. Hanch, general manager, made the announcement after receipt of a telegram from Mason B. Williams, the organization's counsel in Washington, D. C. The telegram said:

"Official interpretation of orders to state banking superintendents makes them official agents of the treasury, and authorizes them to authorize normal functions and operations of finance companies without delay. Suggest repeating this advice to membership."

Hanch said the advice would be relayed at once to member companies, which handle the bulk of automobile financing in the United States.

U. S. WILL SELL 800 MILLIONS 4%–4¼% NOTES

Interest Is Highest Treasury Can Pay.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 11.—Offering the highest interest rates it is empowered to pay, the United States treasury announced tonight that Monday it will endeavor to sell 800 million dollars' worth of its certificates in order to meet maturing obligations and to obtain an additional 105 million dollars.

The certificates will be in two series, one running for five months and carrying 4 per cent interest, and the second running for nine months and carrying 4¼ per cent interest, Secretary Woodin said. The second of these series bears the highest interest rate the government can pay and is equal to the interest paid on war time bond issues.

The certificates will be exempt from all taxation except estate and inheritance taxes. The two series will be issued in the proportion that the subscription for each series bears to the total subscriptions.

High Rate Bait for Bankers.

Desire on the part of banks, to which the treasury usually sells its offerings, to keep their cash during the present emergency, has forced the treasury to offer its extremely high interest. If the rates do not attract buying by the commercial banks, the reserve banks will be called upon to absorb the new issue.

Floating of the certificates must be completed by March 15, the date on which 695 million dollars' worth of other certificates mature and on which the government must make a 59 million dollar interest payment on its outstanding debt. The maturing issues will be accepted as exchange subscriptions for the new certificates.

One of the maturing issues is the anti-hoarding "baby bonds" sold last year. Neither of the maturing issues carry interest rates nearly as high as those on the new offering.

Replenish Cash Balance.

The additional 105 million dollars which the certificates will bring into the treasury over refinancing requirements will go to replenish temporarily the cash balance of the treasury which has shrunk to about 180 million dollars. To this extent the new borrowing will increase the outstanding public debt.

Although he announced earlier in the day that neither of the maturing issues or interest on them would be paid in gold, Secretary Woodin declared that the new issues would be payable in gold. The same assurance was carried in the announcement of the issues which now mature, and the secretary's first announcement has set this promise aside.

When the maturing certificates were sold last year, the treasury announced that both the principal and interest "will be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value." Slamming the door in the face of this promise, Secretary Woodin today told federal reserve banks that they may redeem the maturities but he added, "No gold or gold certificates shall be paid out."

21 Billions Payable in Gold.

The government already has outstanding 21 billion dollars' worth of securities, most of which carried the promise when they were issued that they would be redeemed in gold and that their interest would be paid in gold. As long as the present order remains in effect, these promises will not be kept.

Hoarding of gold and the new penalties against [illegible] have placed the government and all debtors who promised to meet their obligations in gold in a dilemma. To stop the hoarding of gold, the government has stopped all use of it and thus has collided head on with private contracts which call for the redemption of debts in gold.

Whether or not the government by its fiat can now wipe out the gold promises of such contracts, including the contracts under which it sold its own securities, will be subject to legal decision. Believing that such private contracts could not be set aside, Andrew Mellon, when he was secretary of the treasury, used to argue that America could not go off the gold standard.

In order to meet the dilemma, the treasury has been considering the licensing of dealers in gold, from whom debtors could purchase gold in order to meet their contracts. The creditors who received the gold might be forced to return it under anti-hoarding laws, but the contracts would have been discharged. These plans now seem to be hung up on a snag.

MEN

The majority who read this advertisement have no doubt scanned the advertising section of numerous papers hundreds of times, seeking something in their particular line or hoping for a chance that they will get something for nothing.

Men, there is no such thing as "something for nothing" these days, and if we continue to center our thoughts on just doing nothing but the things we are accustomed to, isn't it the truth that we get very little out of life? This is no time for a man to want to do the same old thing when there is no opportunity for him to advance himself. If you are not making $40, $50, $75, or more per week, and you have been in that business any length of time, and diligently and honestly applied yourself, ask yourself whether that job affords you any opportunity. Then, I suggest that you come and talk with me. It costs you nothing to do this.

I have had the pleasure in the last few months of employing dozens of men all through the Chicago District who today are making real money every week.

We are in the finest business in the world, doing business with the finest people. Our company is the largest business of its kind in the world. This company has had these same branches for over 3 years, and when this new product of ours was introduced these men welcomed it with overwhelming joy and enthusiasm, and they are today making more money than ever before in Chicago.

These men are happy and contented not because they have to work hard, but because, while they have work and do work hard, they get well paid—also a number of men in our organization in nearby cities, in Galesburg, Oak Park, Peoria, Rockford, Champaign, Danville, Harvey, Evanston, not to mention our offices in Chicago, Milwaukee, Davenport, as well as in cities throughout the country, with our sales volume steadily gaining over last year.

We have something that is unique in construction, marvelous in performance and was never heard of until recently manufactured and introduced by our company. Our men are making $40 to as high as $125 per week and up, and I want 15 good men, who can furnish good references, to come and talk with me, also talk with our men. Let them tell you about our business—meet them; watch them do their work. See them make money every day, and the kind of money you would be happy to make. Meet the men of this organization. Go to their homes and meet their families, if you care to, and find out for yourself the real truth and opportunity of our business. It costs you nothing.

If you are sincere of purpose, interested in permanent success, willing to work hard, can furnish good references, I welcome you to call between the hours of 9 to 1 Monday morning in Parlor B, Morrison Hotel.

J. ALLEN FUSCA.

LONDON MARKET BEARS UP UNDER EVENTS IN U. S.

Roosevelt's Acts Inspire More Confidence.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 11.—The stock market has stood up well in the face of bewildering conditions from the American banking crisis. Except for one panicky slump in gold mining shares, the behavior was generally favorable and the end of the week saw the business trend everywhere indicating continued and increasing confidence in the American outlook.

Responsible banking opinion strongly applauds President Roosevelt's determination to restore confidence in the present system and to face the necessity for stern measures of reconstruction within that system.

Weigh Trade and Gold.

There were only two reservations to the general satisfaction. It was felt that economic activity might suffer serious curtailment during the period which must elapse before many interior banks are able to reopen. Secondly, there was some anxiety lest prolongation of the ban on gold exports might suggest unwillingness on the part of authorities to use gold reserves boldly to stabilize the dollar on an effective bullion standard.

No one in the "City"—London's financial district—believes the United States will go off the gold standard. The general opinion is that the dollar has been saved and the immediate crisis firmly grasped.

The crisis had little effect on conditions on London's money market apart from the one day suspension in dealings in foreign currencies, due to the fact that the gold standard no longer is operating here. The Bank of England continues to buy large amounts of gold almost daily in connection with operations of the exchange equalization fund and credits resulting from these purchases have brought a glut of money to the market.

Foreign Exchange Market Confused.

There is a different effect on the foreign exchange market. The critical situation confronting it brought a state of confusion and the position is still by no means normal, although it is steadily improving. Opinions regarding the dollar fluctuated considerably, but it is now believed the sterling-dollar rate probably will be pegged between $3.45 and $3.50.

Prohibition on exports of silver from the United States has given a decided filip to the price of the metal in London, while the market has derived further strength from New York reports that the American government intends to increase the silver content of coinage and engage in a campaign for increasing use of silver. Their silver market, therefore, is regarded here as having distinct speculative possibilities.

MONTREAL, Que., March 11.—(AP)—The Canadian dollar improved its position slightly on currency exchanges today. The pound closed here at $4.17 in Canadian dollars, down one cent from yesterday. The quotation on the French franc was 4.72 cents as against 4.73 cents in the same comparison.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Price tension lessened today in primary textile markets due to a belief that banks will soon be open and checking facilities resumed On a report of sharp advances in the costs of printing cloths effective March 20, buying of gray cloths was a little more active. More business was stirring in dress fabrics and coatings. Restoration of trading in silk speculative markets abroad has not yet led to active buying of silks here. Linens have sold more freely on the belief that prices will be higher. Rayon yarns are in demand for April and May delivery with prices firm.

New Law Affects Investors' Income Taxes.

March 15 is the deadline for payment of income taxes. The new income tax law, known as the revenue act of 1932, contains important revisions concerning allowable deductions on losses resulting from sales and exchanges of stocks and bonds.

Stocks and bonds held more than two years, under the new law, are considered capital assets. Losses arising from their sale or exchange in 1932 are allowable as capital losses and are deductible subject to the 12½ per cent limitation. This is the same as in previous years.

The main difference arises where losses have been sustained in 1932 on sale or exchange of stocks or bonds held less than two years. These are not considered capital losses. They can be deducted only from gains realized in 1932 on sale or exchange of stocks and bonds held less than two years.

If there are no such gains, no deduction is allowed. If such speculative gains are not sufficient to offset completely the speculative losses, however, the unclaimed loss may be carried over in 1933 to apply against speculative gains in 1933, with qualifications.

The law covers "sale or exchange" only. It does not apply to securities that have become worthless during 1932. The amount invested in such securities may be deducted in full. Neither does it apply to "paper losses," which are not deductible.

The law mentions "stocks and bonds" only. It does not cover losses sustained through dealing in commodities or real estate. A specific provision excludes government, state and municipal securities from the act.

Gains or losses from short sales of stocks and bonds, and privileges and options to buy or sell stocks or bonds, are considered gains or losses on securities which are not capital assets. They are covered by the provisions applying to such gains or losses.

No loss is allowed in any transaction where the taxpayer has disposed of securities and reacquired substantially the same securities within thirty days before or after their disposal.

The provisions of the act apply to all taxpayers except dealers in securities and incorporated bank and trust companies.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—SUGAR.—Raw was unchanged today but the tone was steady with refiners still showing interest at last paid prices of 2.96c, but only in position to suit. Sales were confirmed of 54,000 bags of Philippines for May arrival at 2.96c but it was doubtful if more could be had at this level as most holders were asking fractionally higher.

Refined was unchanged at 4.10c.

CLASS ONE RAILS REPORT A LOSS OF $153,308,487

Contrasts with Profit of $116,362,079 in '31.

Washington, D. C., March 11.—The class 1 railroads of the country lost $153,308,487 in 1932 as against a profit of $116,362,079 in 1931.

Final figures for the year just made public by the interstate commerce commission showed that in December the class 1 railways had a net income of $1,731,672. The roads showed net income during only three months out of the twelve.

Dividend declarations from income and surplus on common stock during the year were $76,560,281 and on preferred stock $19,031,610. In 1931 dividend declarations were $277,583,603 on common stock and $54,133,406 on preferred.

Two Sections Show Profit.

The commission reported that only two sections of the country showed net income during the year. From Pocahontas carriers—a group of railroads hauling coal from the Pocahontas coal fields in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky—showed a net income of $42,975,871 in 1932 as compared with $52,217,045 in 1931. The central western region railroads showed a net income of $9,599,669 as compared with $71,215,785.

The largest net income was the $26,177,262 reported by the Union Pacific railroad. The entire Union Pacific system, however, had a net income of only $20,859,569, losses of $1,059,449 being reported by the Los Angeles and Salt Lake and of $4,775,856 by the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation company. The Oregon Short line, another Union Pacific line, reported net income of $224,073 and the St. Joseph and Grand Island $293,539.

Other Roads Profit.

Of coal carrying roads the Chesapeake and Ohio railway showed a net profit of $23,527,755; the Norfolk and Western railway $16,984,376, and the Virginian $2,074,399.

The Pennsylvania lines reported net income of $16,573,184, including $13,573,536 by the Pennsylvania railroad and $2,999,648 by the Long Island.

The Southern Pacific system had a deficit of $10,880,284, including $5,779,631 by the Southern Pacific Transportation system; $3,471,325 by the St. Louis Southwestern and the remainder by the Northwestern Pacific.

The Southern Railway system deficit was reported as $14,347,295 of which $10,955,562 was credited to the Southern railway itself; the New York Central lines, $15,399,742, with the New York Central itself losing $18,256,400, but the Chicago River and Indiana and the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie parts of the system showing profits; the Frisco lines, $9,997,467; the Erie Railroad system, $3,694,601; the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, $23,269,678; the Missouri Pacific system, $14,023,923, of which the Missouri Pacific itself lost $10,260,861.

THE GUMPS
SIDNEY SMITH
CHESTER GUMP—
HERE HE IS—BOYS AND GIRLS— A COWBOY AT LAST— HOW DO YOU LIKE HIM IN THAT BIG WESTERN HAT AND THE COWPUNCHER'S KERCHIEF? WHAT A LAUGH THOSE BRONCHO BUSTERS HAD WHEN CHESTER STEPPED OFF THE TRAIN IN HIS STORE CLOTHES—BUT COUSIN CHARLEY TOOK CARE OF THAT IN A HURRY—HE FITTED CHESTER OUT IN A COMPLETE OUT-FIT FROM TALL HAT TO HIGH HEEL BOOTS AND SPURS—
AND LOOK AT THIS PICTURE—IS CHESTER PROUD OF THOSE CHAPS WITH THE REAL GUN POCKET AND STUDDED BELT—JUST LIKE ALL THE REAL COWBOYS WEAR—
AND NOW FOR THE BIG ROUND-UP—THERE GOES CHESTER AND COUSIN CHARLEY OUT TO CORRAL THE PONY—WHAT A THRILL THIS IS GOING TO BE FOR CHESTER—HE HASN'T SEEN THE PONY YET—AND HE CAN HARDLY WAIT—
DO YOU THINK YOU CAN STICK ON HIS BACK?
SURE—I CAN—I WANT TO LEARN TO BE THE BEST RIDER THERE IS OUT HERE—
GYP—THAT'S THE PONY'S NAME—WHEN COUSIN CHARLEY HEARD THAT CHESTER WAS COMING HE BOUGHT THE PRETTIEST LITTLE BLACK PONY FOR HIM—NOT AN ORDINARY MUSTANG LIKE THE COWBOYS HAVE—BUT A REAL BOY'S PONY—JUST CHESTER'S SIZE—WITH A WESTERN SADDLE TO FIT HIM AND A REGULAR LASSO—GYP HAS BEEN RUNNING WILD ALL THIS TIME—IT WILL BE GREAT SPORT FOR CHESTER TO SEE COUSIN CHARLEY CATCH HIM AND PUT THE SADDLE ON—
GEE—ISN'T HE A BEAUTY—
CHESTER'S FIRST GLIMPSE OF GYP—COME ON! SWING THAT LASSO—COUSIN CHARLEY—
A BLACK PONY WITH A WHITE STAR ON HIS FOREHEAD—THAT'S GYP—AND WHAT A TIME THEY HAD CATCHING HIM—ROUND AND ROUND THE CORRAL THEY CHASED HIM—BEFORE COUSIN CHARLEY FINALLY ROPED HIM—AND HOW HE BUCKED WHEN THEY PUT THE SADDLE AND BRIDLE ON HIM—NOW—TAKE ONE OF ME ON HIS BACK—CLICK!
THERE GOES THE CAMERA—CHESTER CAN'T WAIT TILL THE FOLKS BACK HOME HAVE SEEN HIM IN THIS PICTURE—AND NOW FOR THE FIRST TIME HE IS GOING TO GET UP IN THE SADDLE—BETTER HANG ON TIGHT NOW, CHESTER—HE'S PRETTY WILD TODAY—
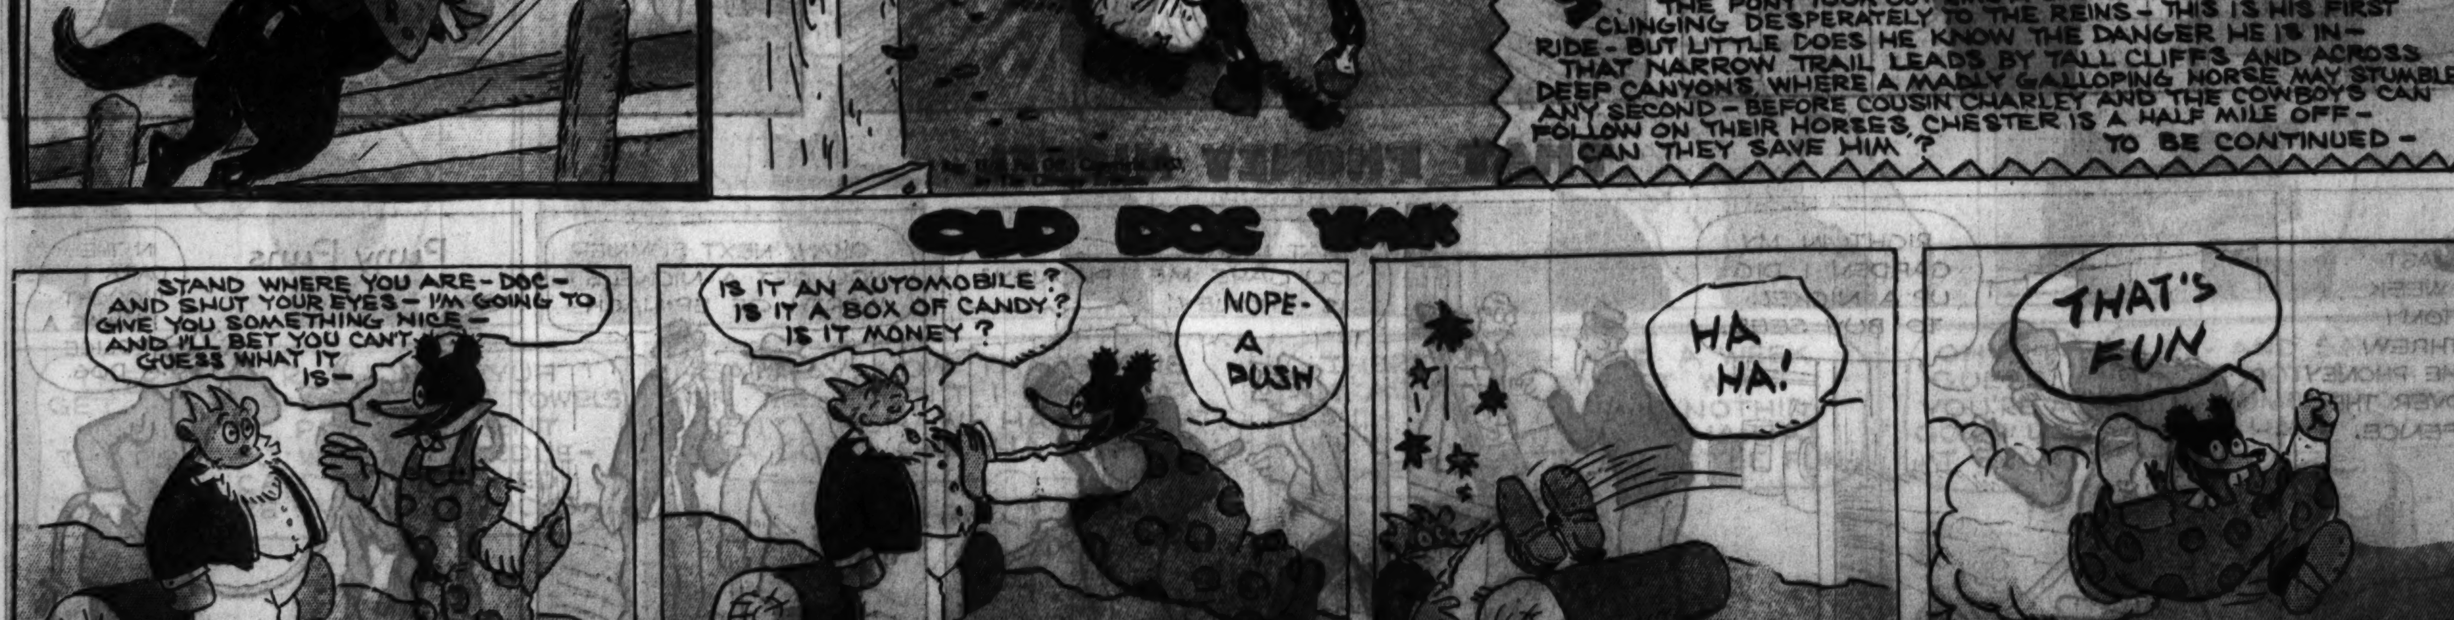
NOW JUST SIT UP THERE AND SMILE—PRETEND YOU'RE BUFFALO BILL FOR A MINUTE—
LET ME HAVE A GUN IN MY HAND—
WHOA!
RIGHT OVER THE FENCE—
HOLD ON CHESTER!
STOP HER SOMEBODY!
WHAT STARTLED HIM? WAS IT THE CLICK OF THE CAMERA?
CATCH HER BOYS!
THAT BOY WILL BE KILLED!
HE'S HEADING FOR THE CLIFF—
HEAD HER OFF COWBOY!
STRAIGHT FOR THE MOUNTAINS—THE PONY TOOK OUT LIKE A SHOT—WITH CHESTER CLINGING DESPERATELY TO THE REINS—THIS IS HIS FIRST RIDE—BUT LITTLE DOES HE KNOW THE DANGER HE IS IN—THAT NARROW TRAIL LEADS BY TALL CLIFFS AND ACROSS DEEP CANYONS, WHERE A MADLY GALLOPING HORSE MAY STUMBLE ANY SECOND—BEFORE COUSIN CHARLEY AND THE COWBOYS CAN FOLLOW ON THEIR HORSES, CHESTER IS A HALF MILE OFF—CAN THEY SAVE HIM? TO BE CONTINUED—



OLD DOC YAK
STAND WHERE YOU ARE—DOC—AND SHUT YOUR EYES—I'M GOING TO GIVE YOU SOMETHING NICE—AND I'LL BET YOU CAN'T GUESS WHAT IT IS—
IS IT AN AUTOMOBILE? IS IT A BOX OF CANDY? IS IT MONEY?
NOPE—A PUSH
HA HA!
THAT'S FUN

Mothers! Here's How Ovaltine Curbs Child's Nervousness

While Adding Weight A Pound A Week Or More

Ovaltine is a scientific food concentrate, approved by more than 20,000 doctors and child specialists largely because of its remarkable power to increase both weight and nerve poise.

So remarkable are the results accredited to Ovaltine that, during the World War, medical authorities made it a standard ration for rebuilding shell-shocked, nerve-shattered soldiers. While recent scientific tests conducted among school children in New York State have demonstrated that nervousness was actually decreased as much as 30% in 2 weeks when Ovaltine was given.

85% of all nervous, under par children in these New York tests responded almost at once. In some cases, nervousness—as measured by the Olson-University of Minnesota checking system—was reduced as much as 18% in a single week.

While these results are of outstanding significance to mothers of nervous children, they are equally important to the mothers of underweight children, too. For child specialists have long observed that underweight and nervousness go hand in hand.

Thus when a child is given Ovaltine he benefits 2 ways. For it breaks up the "vicious circle" that nervousness and underweight always tend to create. And usually adds weight at the rate of a pound a week or more.

Thousands of nervous people, men and women, take Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. Physicians also recommend it for sleeplessness—and as a strengthening food-drink for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged.

You simply mix Ovaltine with milk—either hot or cold—and children love it for its delicious taste. (Note the special free offer of the genuine Little Orphan Annie Mug for serving hot Ovaltine. It adds that "party touch" at mealtime that every child delights in.)

She Feared She Had a Serious Disorder

What She Really Had Was "Acid Stomach," —Now Easily Relieved

According to many authorities, some 80% of the people of today have acid stomach. This because so many foods, comprising the modern diet, are acid forming foods.

It usually makes itself felt in headaches, nausea, "gas," "biliousness," and most frequently in stomach pains that come about thirty minutes after eating. So you can easily tell if you have it.

Now Quickly and Easily Corrected

If you do have acid stomach, don't worry about it. You can correct it in a very simple manner. Just do this. It will alkalize your acid soaked stomach almost immediately. You will feel like another person.

TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

What This Does

That's all you do. But you do it regularly, EVERY DAY, so long as you have any symptoms of distress.

This acts to neutralize the stomach acids that foster your "upset" stomach, that invite headaches and that feeling of lassitude and lost energy.

Try it. Results will amaze you. Your head will be clear. You'll forget you have a stomach.

BUT—be careful that you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy; genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "Phillips" is stamped clearly on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

PARIS DESIGNS COATS AND SUITS FOR RAIN OR SHINE

Swanky Outdoor Togs in Which Slim Fashionables Will Greet Spring Uncertainties

Shoulders Are Cut Too Wide, Sleeves Loose

Rough Homespun Woolens in Swagger Length Tie or Button at the Neck.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS. — (Special.) — Big, swaggering wraps, rough and ready for mean weather, are the swankiest of practical fashions for this spring. They are a fresh, 1933 section in styles that are charged with lavender epoch details like tulle boas, fluttery face veils, feather and flower hats, false hair, oversize sleeves and diaphanous, lacy dresses.

With a good part of the first Paris fashions taking an undue interest in the 1900 period, these swagger clothes for every day and all day have a popularity in the highest and smartest Paris society. They are not designed for rough weather alone, but they are worn to the exclusion of anything else when French skies open their rain faucets, which is about every other day.

The only really new line in coats or capes, the three-quarter length, comes in these clothes. When fashionable women get into their dress-up clothes, in the ethereal days of May, they are going to wear loose jackets and coats that ape the lines of these all-weather styles.

Nothing about these swagger coats is fitted except the buttoned or tied-up neck. The shoulders are just a bit too wide and chic because of this. The sleeves are loose and make a point of folds. Some coats are full length, of course, and when they are they are usually open from the neck down the center front.

In Rough Homespun.

These swanky spring wraps make a point of delivering the roughest, most homespun goods to Paris fashions. The kind of woolens that Englishmen wear in the country are what the Paris dressmakers use to make these practical coats and suits. Checkered Scotch wools make some of the smartest swagger coats in Paris. Striped mannish wools make suits, and there will be plaids from all the clans. Piece dyed tweeds like those called Harris are in, and there are lots of long haired materials with angora, rabbit, and hairs of other timid animals woven into them.

Anything sleek and smooth is downright dowdy for practical clothes this season, be they made of wool, silk, or cotton. The sleek and shiny side of fashion is important, but not for ready-to-weather-the-storm clothes.

Brimmed hats that shed the raindrops are high millinery styles and are worn with the practical coat and suit in rain and sun. Cloches or sailors, with wobbly brims and deepish or very shallow crowns, are the thing the smart Parisienne wears. These are made of straw, felt or material.

New Shoes and Gloves.

The newest sports and practical shoes that go with such clothes are made of suede surfaced peccary. Enzel uses this leather to make moccasins and oxfords and it is absolutely impervious to moisture. Gloves of the same leather go with the shoes. Calfskin, crocodile, and such leathers also are chic to wear with day-by-day outfits. Capacious leather handbags that match the shoes and gloves are considerably worn, or carried, to be exact.

Sun colors are leading out the rainy day parade. The green of new leaves, the blue of clear, twilight skies, and the golden yellow borrowed from the sun are in style. When neutral beiges and such colors make practical clothes,

SKETCHED IN PARIS BY A TRIBUNE STAFF ARTIST.

Child's Personality as Well as Body Affected by Illness

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"GET off at the first floor," said the elevator man, "and turn to your left."

Following his directions, I walked along the corridor past rows of doors until suddenly I found myself opposite a big glass window which opened not on the outdoors but on a large room filled, to my surprise, with babies. Little cradles, I'll have to call them for want of a better name, stood in rows around the room and in each was a tiny, red, quite new baby, each with its string of bright blue beads around its neck. One nurse was bending over a crib, another carried a small bundle against her shoulder, while a third was doing something expertly to a new arrival on a table.

It is at this big glazed-in opening that new fathers, aunts, and grand-parents are allowed to stand while the nurse takes up their special baby and holds it up for them to see. That is as near as they get to the baby in these modern hospital nurseries.

Later I met Miss Margery Treiber, who is super-

"All I have against him," she tells, "is that he told me untruths when we were first married, as he said, to spare my feelings."

Fresh Maple Sirup Enhances Spring Dessert

"Sugaring Off" Has Long Been a Popular Festival of Rural America.

By Mary Meade.

CRISP, blustery nights, bright melting days, March—and maple sugar!

So runs the sweet refrain these days on sugar maple farms through the middle west and back on the ups and downs of New England. For sap is running in the maple trees. Big wooden buckets and metal tubs are out by the wagon load. Pails are being filled, emptied, and filled again. Where modern methods have marched in, whole groves are tapped scientifically and the cold, watery sap hustled away to be carefully boiled to the proper sweetness for sirup or cooked quite away into luscious bars of maple sugar.

But if the little gods of the winter woods favor you and you drive some night about darkfall into the midst of a true old fashioned "sugaring off," then raise a cheer. You've stumbled upon one of the most popular festivals of rural America.

"Sugaring Off" Described.

And some of you have, for here's the way a friend of mine and a Tribune enthusiast told about her first "sugaring off" on a Wisconsin farm.

"Cold? Yes, just a bit below freezing, with a lot of drifts on the ground when we reached the sugar camp, slithering up by a good old farm sleigh. And dark, too, except for a lot of stars and all the firelight. The whole family were there, punching up the fires under the big iron kettle and filling others with the sap they'd collected. All around you could catch glimpses of more buckets hanging from hollow pegs on the trees. Out of all those pegs was dripping maple sap, slowly filling up the buckets.

"We'd come just in time, too. Somebody stirred the boiling sirup, tried it in cold snow water the way we test fudge, and pronounced it done. Everybody teetered on his toes till the sirup was poured off into crocks to harden into sugar. Then came a grand general dash for the kettle and 'maple wax' was the big matter of the moment. The trick was to catch the sirup at just the ball stage and drizzle it over dishes of clean snow, eating it up as fast as it stiffened. Delectable!"

Gift from Sugar Camp.

Well, it's a great idea—for the wide open spaces. City snow has come through a few too many layers of soot to claim much pristine purity, but don't let that dampen your enthusiasm for the gift of the March maple sugar camp. A new crop of maple sugar and sirup is coming to market—already here in some places—and ideas for hailing this most flavorsome of nature's sweets into battalions of dishes clamor to be tried.

First, are you acquainted with maple rolls? Making them is simple. Start with a regular baking powder dough, rolled out to one inch thickness in a rectangular form. On top of the dough spread shaved maple sugar, which has been mixed with softened butter. Use about ¾ cup of the sugar and 5 level tablespoonfuls of butter. Now start at the long side and roll up, jelly roll fashion. Slice across in one inch pieces and bake on a greased baking sheet in a moderately hot oven (365 degrees F.) until brown.

Or coax maple sugar flavor into school going sandwiches for that much wanted touch of sweetness which healthfully appeases the young sweet tooth and acts as a good energy booster. Cream shaved maple sugar with butter and spread between whole wheat slices. Or for a change blend maple sirup with thick peanut butter and spread between white bread slices. This is one of my childhood delectations, and never have I found a spread which so tickled critical palates.

Delicious in Desserts.

Then maple flavor may be lured into a hundred prize winning desserts. Pure maple sirup, boiled by the cook to a good thick stage and poured hot over vanilla ice cream, makes a tantalizing sundae, especially when sprinkled with fresh toasted whole or chopped pecans. Or shaved maple sugar scattered from a generous spoon can work wonders on this same plain ice cream dish.

Then custards. Serve maple sirup hot or cold over baked custard, or better yet, get right into the spirit of the thing and incorporate its goodness inside the custard proper. Add five tablespoons of maple sirup to the ingredients for a plain baked custard and omit the sugar indicated. Proceed as usual, and watch the family vote for bigger and nore frequent maple custards.

Or for your next blanc mange or simple pudding which is longing for a glorifying touch, create this topping:

MAPLE SAUCE.

3 egg yolks
¾ cup maple sirup, scalded
½ cup whipping cream
¼ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup finely ground nut meats

Beat the egg yolks till lemon colored. Heat the maple sirup in a double boiler and pour it slowly into the egg yolks, stirring constantly. Return to the double boiler, add the salt, and cook over boiling water until smooth and thick. Cool and then fold in the cream, whipped stiff, and the nuts.

Next for what somebody has christened:

NEW ENGLAND SHORT CAKE.

1-3 cup shortening
6 teaspoons [2 level tablespoons] baking powder
3 cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 cup shaved maple sugar

Sift the flour, baking powder, and salt together twice and cut in the solid fat until the mixture is mealy. Stir in the milk lightly, using only enough to make a stiff dough. Now cut the dough in half and pat out half to fit an 8 inch layer tin. Grease the tin and place the dough in it. Spread its top with melted butter and then shape the second half and place on top. Bake in a hot oven [400 degrees F.] until risen and crusty brown. To serve, split in half at the butter line and scatter the shaved sugar over the hot lower layer. Return the top biscuit layer and top it all with whipped cream sprinkled with more crushed maple sugar. Cut up wedge fashion and serve sp aking hot.

But that sandwiched short cake affair reminds me of Adirondack pancakes. Ever heard of them? They are simply large, thin pancakes made from a good rich pancake batter and fried a crisp golden brown. These are stacked up—half a dozen to a family dessert—with whipped cream and much shaved maple sugar between them. Then cut through and serve in wedge shaped pieces.

Tantalizing Substitution.

Or simply go adventuring with shaved maple sugar on your own account. Delectable flavors rise up to greet one when this sugar is substituted for white or brown in frostings, frozen desserts, candies, and desserts. In making the substitution, pack it down well in the cup in measuring. When you boil maple sugar or sirup with milk, add ⅛ teaspoon soda for each cup of sirup and ¼ for each cup of sugar in order to counteract the natural acid of the unrefined sugar and avoid possibilities of curdling.

Maple mousse is another something to write eulogies over. Here is a recipe that made a grand slam at a bridge luncheon last week. I wheedled it out of the hostess and present it with her compliments.

MAPLE MOUSSE.

1 cup maple sirup
5 eggs separated
2 cups whipping cream
⅛ teaspoon salt
Ground pecans or pistachio nuts

Bring the maple sirup to a scald in a double boiler and pour it slowly into the beaten egg yolks, stirring constantly. Add salt. Return to the double boiler and cook with steady stirring until it thickens. Cool and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and the cream, which has been whipped stiff. Turn into a freezer tray and freeze for about three hours. Serve in sherbet glasses with ground nuts sprinkled over the top.

Then for a last thought let's have

MAPLE CUP CAKES.

½ cup sifted pastry flour
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup shaved maple sugar
2 eggs
2-3 cup chopped nuts
⅛ teaspoon vanilla or almond flavor

Sift the flour, salt, and baking powder. Cream the beaten eggs and the sugar together until fluffy, then stir in the flour mixture and finally the nuts and flavoring. Turn the batter into greased small cup cake pans. Sprinkle each with a few ground nut meats and bake in a moderately hot oven [365 degrees F.] fortwenty minutes.

Coaster Set Comes in Different Colors

Raffia coasters, about two inches deep, made to fit the standard round glass, come in different colors—no two alike in a dozen. They absorb all moisture, protect the bottom of the glass from breaking, and avoid confusion when refilled. Each drinker knows his own glass by his own colored coaster.

LOVELIEST MAKEUPS SEEN ON FAULTLESS SKIN

But Even with the Mediocre Complexion, the Artistic Application of Powder and Rouge Will Deftly Soften or Highlight the Facial Contours.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

To prepare the skin for the fine tribute that makeup can pay it, faults of complexion must be cleared up. Cosmetics will not cover up blemishes; often they exaggerate them because of the attention called to a painted surface. A nose pitted with blackheads is not blemish hidden by powder. The powder may make the skin look even more pitted. Rouge laid on an acne cheek makes the skin appear even more distressing. The loveliest makeups are those practiced on faultless skins. Faulty coloring, such as sallowness or paleness, may be improved with rouge, but not complexions with outstanding blemishes.

Some women claim to look more naturally made up without a foundation cream base. If the skin is dry, or if it is no longer in the stage of reasonably early youth, a cream of the vanishing type, or a fine film of your regular face cream, is advised. The cream base usually lays a foundation for a neater piece of makeup work. And women who are not adept at applying rouge and lipstick may find this slight preparatory creaming particularly helpful.

Instead of a foundation cream the oily skin is better helped by an application of astringent lotion before rouge and powder are put on.

Thorough Cleansing Important.

It is assumed that before foundation creams are thought of the face has been thoroughly cleansed. Makeup should be applied only to a clean surface. It is further assumed that before retiring every particle of makeup is removed with another thorough face cleansing.

There are three types of rouge—liquid, paste, and compact. The compact rouge is conceded to be the easiest to apply. But because of its very ease in adding color to the cheek it often is the cause of unskilled craftsmanship. Personally I believe it requires a little more of the artistic touch than either of the other two forms. My judgment is established from the many, many flushed and hectic little circles seen on cheeks instead of subtle color laying. But, naturally, the type of rouge is your very own personal preference, and you can restrain yourself from rubbing dry rouge on too solidly and heavily.

The liquid rouge blends in over a cream film base, or even over the naturally oily skinned complexion, with the most natural effect. It must be smoothed on quickly and deftly while still wet; otherwise you'll have a hard edge of color and a rim to the painted area. The liquid rouge is most lasting.

The paste rouge may be used on both lip and cheek, thereby achieving the perfect color matching of these two features. Over a cream base the paste rouge spreads with ease, and it can be worked to fade away artistically into the flesh.

Powder rouges have to be renewed often; nevertheless, they are handy and most easily available for complexion repair away from home.

The most satisfactory arrangement is to make up your face with liquid or paste rouge at home and let the powder rouge attend to the complexion renewal later.

Miss Barbara Stanwyck makes up before her mirror.

The amateur—not necessarily a beginner, for she may be a rouge user of years' standing—rubs her compact rouge in a circle of varying circumference high up on the cheeks, with especial emphasis on the cheek bones. A profile view of this in a clear light shows how inadequately effective it is. The round crimson patch stands out like a signal light.

Begin your face painting with light applications of color, increasing the depth of tone where needed, and blur out delicately all extraneous tint around the edges so that it fades off into the flesh. For practice at rouge placing I think the paste rouge over a cream base the best working material. You can use the knowledge later with your powder or liquid rouge.

If liquid or paste is used put on little dabs in unconnected spots. Then with the finger tips work the rouge so that the center of the area gets the heaviest coloring and the extreme edges are faint. Be careful not to carry heavy color above the cheek bones and high on the temples. If any paint is used on the temples it must be faint. Nor can you place your heaviest coloring low on the cheeks without imparting a look suggestive of years, with the drawn down expression created.

Beautifying the Eyes.

Dry rouge, unlike liquid or paste, should be used after powder has been applied. You may tone the coloring down with a second rubbing with the puff. In selecting dry rouge be careful to avoid tints that resemble brick dust.

While the pink from a wet rouge is still on your finger a neat trick is to tint the flesh directly under the eyebrows. It gives increased depth and brilliance to the eyes. But the coloring must be light, and is recommended for evening wear rather than daytime.

If the face is broad the illusion of less breadth is helped by bringing your heaviest path of rouge near the nose.

If cheek and jaw bones are prominent keep rouge away from them entirely.

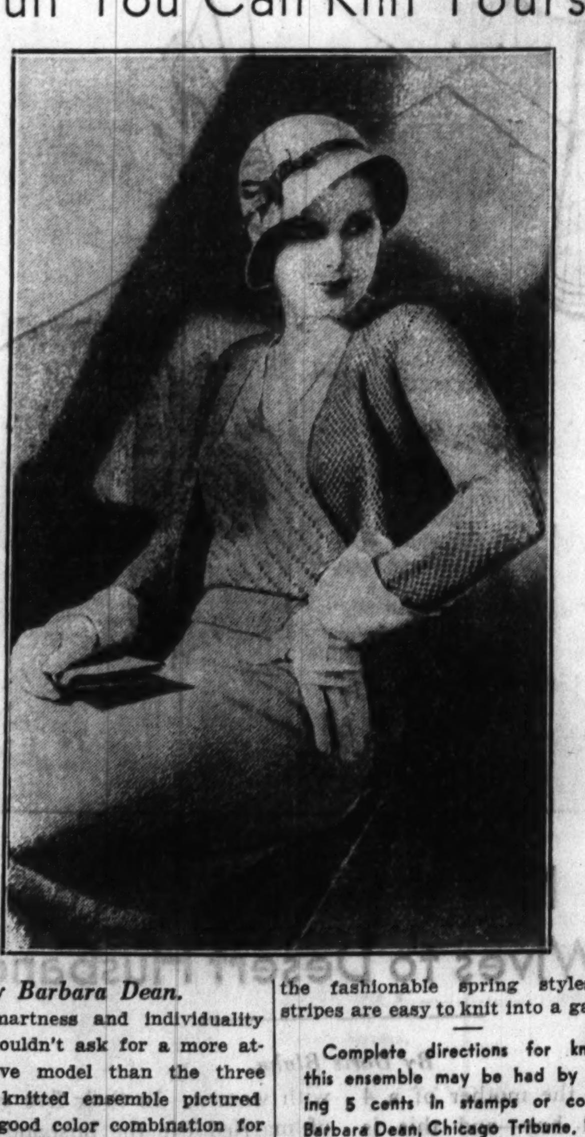
If the face is thin do your heaviest rouging well back on the cheek, blending forward faintly and more faintly.

A deft touch of rouge on the chin will appear to shorten the too long face. With the long, thin face do not draw your rouge from high on the cheek bones straight down to a low spot on or near the jaw lines. Instead rouge under the cheek bones, keeping your lowest point of color well above the jaw line.

With a short face, the chin made light with powder helps to create a more extended length.

A faint dab of rouge under the tip of a long nose may seem to shorten its appearance. But for length for a too short nose powder will have to be made to create the illusion.

Smartness in Lines of New Suit You Can Knit Yourself



By Barbara Dean.

For smartness and individuality one couldn't ask for a more attractive model than the three piece knitted ensemble pictured today. A good color combination for spring, this buff skirt and blouse of rose rust and buff, and the openwork patterned tuxedo jacket. We have had openwork and lacy stitch blouses before, but consider the chic of an openwork jacket. This is something new!

The pattern stitches are not complicated and thirty-four 100 yard balls of boucle, or 17 skeins, make the complete costume. The diagonal stripes of the sweater are what we see in all the fashionable spring styles, and stripes are easy to knit into a garment.

Complete directions for knitting this ensemble may be had by sending 5 cents in stamps or coin to Barbara Dean, Chicago Tribune. Write your name and address clearly; allow seven days for delivery. Or call in person at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

THIS IS NO YEAR TO LEAVE HUBBY

Substitute Mates Scarce, Not Much Interested in Wife Who Has Walked Out of Life Partnership

months. This the woman protests she doesn't mind. It is merely that she doesn't love the man any more. He is a good father and devoted to the boy, she adds in a postscript.

It certainly takes all kinds of women to make the marriage world what it is today. But the queerest are those who come to the conclusion that they no longer love their husbands and are thinking of up and leaving them for no good reason whatsoever.

Not a Propitious Year.

It's no year for changing jobs. It's a bad year to leave husbands. It's no year to be sitting down working up unhappy conclusions about the state of your own existence—your own personal happiness. There is a deal of real woe afoot in the land. One need not sit down and manufacture trouble.

We do not take the woman as seriously as we may sound. The chances are that if she were the real leaving kind she would ask no one's opinion about the move. She'd just go. Besides, she says she's just "considering" leaving her man and going home to mother's. But it's bad "considering." A poor line of thinking.

Too Self-Limited.

We repeat that it is a bad year for leaving husbands. First, because substitute mates aren't so easy to find. Secondly, because the manner in which wives are judged at this moment who walk out at the first hint of financial stingency wouldn't be any recommendation to a successor. Most of all, however, because it's just about time that full grown women got down to facing realities about life and living. Time for them to absorb the idea that life isn't one long, sweet song of bliss—and that if they can't learn to take a little bitter with the sweet they won't know the sweet when they meet it.

Take a woman like this one presented today. With a man who'd be an answer to thousands of other women's prayers—a man sober, faithful, kind, and generous. She couldn't find love with any other man, because she hasn't the foundation for it in her own soul. She couldn't find happiness—because she hasn't the thing in herself that creates happiness.

It's probably true that a number of women on an afternoon or day off, when reviewing the present calm current of their lives, come to the conclusion that they have just stopped loving their mates. The mates' fault, of course, and always. They aren't exciting enough. What the women themselves are putting into the union to keep it at the high pitch of happiness is never questioned. But the most of them get over the spell before any damage is effected. And another day may change the current of their thoughts completely. So the symptoms are not to be taken for a fatal malady.

Form of Kindness.

In these moments of rebellion at a grossly exaggerated cruel fate it's no great trick to drag out the faults of a mate and dilate on them. Our correspondent seems to have been under heavy pressure, however, to pick flaws in her man. Untruths he told when they were first married remain the major charge. The only one, in fact. Constituting, in our opinion, a pretty weak alibi for a contemplated departure. It's the infantile mode of thought, however, that should be rebelled at.

Personality as Well as Body Convalesces

Child's Recovery from Long Illness Attended by Behavior Woes.

visor of nurseries of the New York hospital and who lectures to classes of both graduate and under-graduate nurses. In the few minutes that she was free she had some things to say that I think will be of interest to those parents who have had serious illnesses among their children. Also to trained children's nurses some of the comments should be of value. I didn't at the time take down our conversation word for word, but here is the gist of what Miss Treiber had to say:

Sick Child Is Different.

"In talking to the classes [of nurses] in training I try to keep the psychology of the normal child in mind. But whether you are nursing in a private room or home, or in a ward where there are many children, it is difficult to apply standards of normal behavior to the child who is really ill. The child is in a different psychological state."

Emulate a Leader.

Here Miss Treiber stopped a minute and thought back to some experiences she has had.

"In the children's wards we find ourselves resorting to all sorts of expedients to get the children well. Perhaps the lack of appetite means neglected vegetables at meal times. We may notice that young Jimmy eats his spinach with gusto. So we make him a sort of 'ward leader' and get the children to emulate Jimmy in eating spinach."

We broke off at this point to talk about the mothers who find that their children who have been sick for long are "spoiled" when they get well—that they sometimes present very great behavior difficulties for a long time after the cure is complete. We both agreed that here is another angle to deal with. You have then a child who is physically well but who has quite naturally carried over the behavior of his sickness. At this point Miss Treiber made a most interesting observation.

She said: "I think there has to be a convalescence of the personality as well as of the body."

There, in a nutshell, is a whole story which parents can elaborate for themselves.

Recovery in Behavior.

"There has to be a convalescence of the personality as well as of the body" means a great deal. It means that when a child is well and once again back in the everyday world of family, play, and school if he's old enough, still his personality may not have entirely convalesced. He may have formed different habits of behavior and be, quite unconsciously of course, clinging to them. That's both the good and bad thing about habits—they're like deep, greased grooves which once in, it's hard to get out of. So the child who is physically recovered may need to go through a slower process of recovery in behavior.

Here is where a mother needs to keep her patience and understanding to the fore. She can't use sudden or rough methods.

Once over her own anxiety, she may be prompted to say when her child is demanding or acting "spoiled," "Now, Betty, you're not sick any longer. Stop acting like a baby," or, "I did that when you were sick, but I can't keep on doing it now you're all well again."

After a long illness you can't expect a quick snap back to normal behavior. After all, it is not the child's fault. He must be drawn gradually back to his usual ways, with patience and understanding.

Suggestions of a different and more practical kind are contained in our leaflet, "Caring for and Amusing the Convalescent Child," which will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Double Duty Costumes Rank High in Fashion's Favor

Newest Street Outfits Possess Obliging Wardrobe Versatility

Beguilingly Expensive Looking When Worn as Bought and Have Casual Correctness Which Makes Them Combine Advantageously with Extra Garments.

By Rhea Seeger.

SAVE all your best adjectives for the first appreciative glances you give to double duty clothes . . . the kind of clothes that stop the show. Unusual combinations that keep the average sightseeing spectator breathless with envious admiration, usually a coat and dress ensemble that looks like a million together and is equally expensive appearing when in close contact with separate skirts, suits, or jackets. Or the casually clever one-piece frocks that a knowing clothes collector wears with half a dozen different capes, jackets, or longer coats for top contrast.

This is a year of frugal, shrewd, and sympathizing designers, a year when these same thoughtful designers have really produced some knockout ensembles for the girl who is compelled to think twice before buying that most important street or new spring outfit. Some really brilliant thinking has resulted in spectacularly distinctive street costumes, such as sketched from one Chicago collection.

High and Wide Chest Effect.

For instance, the clever little frock at the upper left, made of thickly crinkled crêpe, is fashioned with intricate sections skillfully cut and sewed together in a divinely slim silhouette. The sleeves are particularly tricky, looping around under the arm to fasten smoothly to the top sections, thereby leaving a slashed effect at the back. The high and wide chest effect is as chic as anything seen this spring. Two dark brown buttons of wood match the huge circular belt buckle which holds the wide belt in place.

This dress is of that new pinky beige, a color that [illegible] infinite opportunity for special ideas in coat or jacket contrast. It is just the simple sort of dress that fits snugly under a swagger coat of deep blue velvet, teams with a knee length coat of grass green corduroy, or can be covered with a semi-fitted coat of black wool. Short jackets slide over the shoulders of this dress with nonchalant swank. You might like a brown and white checked tweed jacket with the checks of generous dimension, or a striped affair of beige and almond green. Any dark colored cape could be swung over these shoulders with perfect ease, even swagger.

A Gray Ensemble.

The next two figures to the right show a charming gray ensemble. On the seated figure is sketched a stunning one-piece dress. The skirt section is of pumice gray wool crêpe and the top is of cornflower blue silk crêpe with a draped neckline that extends well down across the ribs of the wearer. The deep points of the blouse silk extend into the gray wool . . . the sleeves are short with a becoming cap effect.

This dress, as is, could be worn with a matching deep blue wool or silk coat, a swaggering swinging blue cape, or with a bright blue and gray checked jacket, and if you want to be different, wear it with a crimson jacket and a blue and red Ascot neck scarf. Another color that would contrast the blue and gray with eye filling results would be a burnt orange silk or wool tailored affair of simple straight lines.

Correct for Spring.

On the standing figure you will see the complete costume, the fitted, impeccably tailored gray coat worn over the blue and gray dress. This perfect topcoat is lined with a gray that matches the gray wool. Just think what you can do with such an obliging model. It will contrast a red and white printed silk crêpe perfectly; you can wear it over yellow linens or cottons; you can cover a black printed dress with small gray patterns with this gray coat, and it can be worn over smart knitted silks and sweaters and separate skirts. The coat sleeves are moderately puffed and the gray bone buttons modestly trim as well as hold the coat in place.

The ensemble at the extreme right, of black and white checked silk, dramatized with Kelly green wool, is just what you'd expect of some gay soul with a desire to please. The black and white checks are large and sightly and the green coat is good enough to eat, being one of those swagger models with loose lines, good looking sleeves, and a perfect collarline. This is a coat you can wear over white, beige, and gray dresses of one color and just what you need as a contrast for colorful prints. And it would certainly assure a good Irish lilt to some somber black crêpe frock that needs such a distraction. Again, you can wear the printed dress under a swanky white linen topcoat, a gray wool or with a yellow crash short jacket that ends at the hipline.

Return of Beige.

The beige collectors will welcome the return of the beige costume, sketched at the lower left. It's a cape model with a difference. Notice the long sleeved brown and beige printed blouse with long sleeves, the cape that is faced with the same printed silk, and the supersmooth slim, straight skirt, all 1933 details, that fashion the smartest of street costume.

In the lower left and in the upper right corners you will see two dusky dolls, amusing companions that will never bore you. They are new velvet house dolls made with real hair wigs. "Du-du," the jungle gal, has a short skirt of orange velvet dotted with red circles, ivory rings in her ears, on her arms, around her ankles, and a most infectious grin. "Snappy Sammy," the boy friend, has lately wandered in from under the Harlem moon. He is all tricked out with fancy pants, a dashing wide brimmed orange felt hat, and a rib hugging orange coat that is nobody's business. They are comic relief for those weird long legged taffeta frocked dolls of a year or so back that cluttered up feminine retreats with rather fantastic scenic effects.

PARIS DESIGNS NEW COATS FOR RAIN OR SHINE

sun shade scarfs and hats liven them.

Sometimes the swagger coat carries a suggestion of the picture on its sleeves, like the Schiaparelli coat shown at the extreme left. This coat is made of a very rough, green tweed, and the bands along the top of the shoulders are released at the beginning of the sleeves to give them a suggestion of the leg of mutton. The rest of the sleeve, however, is comfortably wide and not fitted like its quaint ancester.

Open Down the Front.

A scarf collar of the coat material is tied close around the neck and has a big bow in front. The loose body of the coat is not buttoned or otherwise fastened, but is open down the front, and there are large patch pockets at the hips. A green felt hat with a near pancake crown and a wriggly brim is worn with this coat. This is the smartest and newest getup for hard and general wear.

Second from the left is a practical coat for conservative women who can't change their style ideas in one swoop. This is a new version of the redingote from Marcel Rochas and gets its swank from the really square collar around the shoulders, a collar that is cut up in the two front corners to suggest revers. The material of this model is golden beige rabbit hair woolen and the six-button double breasted closing is classic. The straight, comfortable sleeves have deep, slashed cuffs, and the huge patch pockets have decorative flaps sewed on. With this coat is worn a bright red fabric hat, tilted low in front and up in back. A bright red bag is carried.

Swagger Suit.

Next on the right is the swagger suit for good and bad weather. Schiaparelli makes the three-quarter length coat and its accompanying skirt of a rich blue pin striped wool, with a shoulder yoke on the coat which is frankly too broad, and a small turnover collar close around the neck, tied with a striped scarf in rough silk of bright colors. The overlarge pockets are an important note. The coat is fastened up the left front with three leather covered cylinders and loops. The straight skirt is stitched around the bottom. The hat is knitted of blue yarn.

At the extreme right is a checkered Scotch wool cape, from the Lelong designing squad. The colors are green and oatmeal beige and the scarf that is twisted around the neck is lined with green. This cape has no collar. A triangular yoke at the neck in front fastens on the left shoulder. There are slits for the hands. Capes like this are the last word in spring chic and are slipped on over practical suits and dresses. A felt cloche, from Rose Descat, made with a shallow crown and supple brim is worn with the cape. It is green. The bag is made of oatmeal colored calfskin and so are the oxfords.

Picture Charts Enclosed with Patterns Guide to Economical Cutting.

By Clotilde.

THE charming two toned dress made by pattern No. 2746 has clever lines that are kind to the heavier woman and make the short woman appear taller. The wrapped treatment is becoming, and the dress isn't at all hard to cut or make.

The waist has a collarless V shaped neckline and long sleeves, gathered into narrow, fitted wristbands. A three piece circular skirt, attached to the waist under a removable belt, completes it. For size 16 the skirt measures at the bottom about two yards.

Be sure to compare your own length and width measures with those of the pattern, for while the bust measure will be right it is possible some of the other length and width measures may need changing a little.

Turn in the top edges of the bottom parts of the waist an even seam's width and baste over the bottom edges of the upper parts. If the seam lines have been clearly traced, place the turned in edges exactly on the seam lines of the upper parts. Stitch twice, once on the edge and the second time ¼ inch above.

The sleeves are put together in the same way. Follow the directions on the chart for putting the skirt together. When cutting the dress out, if you are using material that has a right and wrong side, be sure to place the right and left pattern pieces properly, so you won't find you have cut two pieces for the same side. A dark blue crinkled silk crêpe, combined with a printed silk in blue and white will be smart and attractive. Beige is a color that is becoming to nearly every woman, and it combines well with brown, blue or light tan shades.

The dress made by pattern No. 3180, for the school girl, is exceptionally smart. It's just like dresses made for the grownups, and has a large collar and cuffs of white piqué. The original dress was made of a brown plaided sheer woolen, and the artist's tie was made of a vivid red crêpe de chine, matching the color of the belt.

Gingham and other washable cottons also may be used.

The dress is a one piece affair with an inset inverted plait at the center front to give graceful fullness at the hemline. The fronts are underfaced above the inset plait, and buttonholes and buttons are used. Baste a piece of lining that is perfectly smooth in between the facing and outside on both fronts. This will facilitate the making of the buttonholes and will make a good foundation for sewing the buttons on. Overcast each buttonhole from the wrong side before working—also overcast from the right side. There are patch pockets that will please any girl.

Pattern No. 3289 makes a smart daytime dress, unusual in its lines and right up to the minute in its chic details. You will enjoy putting it together and will find the chart that comes with the pattern a great help.

The smart buttoned neckline and the similar buttoned hip treatment are decidedly novel. The long sleeves are made with upper and lower sections—the upper ones extending to the neckline. A detachable collar finishes the neck. The dress opens under the left arm, and this opening should be perfectly finished. For size 16 the dress at the bottom measures about 1½ yards.

One of the lovely soft woolens in a tiny self check or monotone will be charming, and the collar can be made of a rough silk crêpe or plain woolen. Rough silk crêpe is another smart medium to use for this frock.

Boys Like Sitting Room of Their Own

A SITTING ROOM effect is what many wise mothers plan for the boy's room and this is usually popular with the boy himself, as he likes to have a place where he can take his boy friends and the dog and not be reminded to "keep off that nice white bedspread, now!"

A good, comfortable, wide cot of metal, with mattress covered with a practical dark couch cover is greatly preferred by most boys to the regular bed. Schools and colleges always furnish their dormitories with cots instead of beds.

Sister Susie will enjoy dainty flowered wallpaper in her room, as will mother, and even grandma, who likes dainty things. But spare the boy any effect of feminine frills.

Give him a good practical paper in tan, yellow or light brown tones, or gray if the room has a lot of sunlight. Gray and green are cool colors, however, so avoid them in north or east rooms that receive sunlight. An oatmeal or cartridge paper is always a good choice for the boy's room, or one of those excellent papers that so well imitate Japanese grass cloth.

Let the youngsters tack up as many pictures, pennants, posters, and athletic trophies as his heart desires, and drape tennis nets and boxing gloves and baseball bats all over the place.

Give him a dark, practical rug, a comfortable bed and chair, a bureau or chest of some sort to hold his things, and a good background of clean, cheerful wallpaper, and let him carry out his ideas of artistic decorations—not yours.

THEY HAD THE PANTS

By Walter Prichard Eaton

Eric Spurr, Inside Man for the Firm of Wiggleswood, Wiggleswood, Cobalt and Hemmingwell, Was Rapidly Becoming as Cold, Set and Conservative as They, Until a Pair of Skis and Brightly Colored Trousers Suddenly Intervened.

ERIC SPURR was already the chief inside man for the law firm of Wiggleswood, Wiggleswood, Cobalt & Hemmingwell, a firm which had handled the estates, drafted the wills, and organized the corporations of cold roast Boston since Edward Everett was the president of Harvard. All the partners belonged to the correct clubs, and their wives moved among those of lesser breed (when such mingling was necessary) with noses the least bit elevated, as if they expected momentarily to scent an unpleasant odor. Eric Spurr, of course, was of lesser breed; he had not even been born in Boston. In fact, he had the misfortune to be born in the hinterland west of the Connecticut river, which might just as well have been Texas or Utah, so far as the Back Bay is concerned. But he happened to possess a fine legal mind, and though he was shy, studious and unobtrusive, after a brilliant record at law school he found himself at twenty-five a clerk with this Brahmin firm.

He rose rapidly because of his sure skill in laying out cases, but without ever appearing in court. He was glad of that, he told himself. He had no "presence," and dreaded the very idea of a public appearance. At thirty-six he had his own ample, though plain office, the stenographic staff was at his command, many clients were sent directly to him, he was consulted about nearly all the office business—and he was on a salary. It was a decent salary, to be sure, and enabled him to live in an apartment on Beacon Hill and keep a Filipino servant, but its relation to the actual work he did in comparison to the annual earnings of the partners was a trifle absurd.

It did not strike Eric as absurd, however. When he thought about it at all, he considered the partners as representatives of a naturally privileged class; and, too, he expected some day they would call him in and reward him with a partnership. He copied their dress (to wear a colored collar down State street would have seemed almost blasphemy to Eric), he achieved—with some difficulty—a broad a, he maintained an almost glacial impersonality with the stenographic force, and his few diversions were eminently correct—the Symphony, a subscription to the Theater Guild, occasionally golf at a suburban club. Eric had never been invited to join the Country, nor any social club in Boston. On most evenings he worked on his cases, and if he was lonely he didn't know it.

Returning early from lunch one December Friday, he came upon three of the stenographers eagerly inspecting something just removed from a bundle. He noted that it was bright orange in color, but noted still more that their faces were curiously happy, excited. In fact, for a brief instant he regarded them not as stenographers but as human beings, and quite unconsciously smiled at them.

"Look, Mr. Spurr!" one of them cried impulsively, holding up the orange object, which unfolded itself down from her hands, disclosing a curious but unmistakable pair of pants. "Aren't they grand!"

"I should feel a trifle conspicuous in them," said Eric.

"They're Betty's," said the holder. "Mine are blue, and Anne's are yellow."

"Wha—what——" Eric stammered, losing a shade of his composure.

Anne—Miss Smith to him—was the eldest of the three and the girl he most often called to his office, entirely, of course, because she was most efficient. She dressed neatly and plainly—as, indeed, was required in the office of Wiggleswood, Wiggleswood, Cobalt & Hemmingwell—she was as impersonal as Eric himself, and she almost never made a mistake. Perhaps she made one now when she said, "We are all going on the snow train Sunday, skiing in New Hampshire. Wrap them up, Jo, Mr. Spurr isn't interested in our pants."

"On the contrary——" he began, in an effort to be polite, and then had a rush of mid-Victorianism to the ears and forehead and went hastily to his office. Behind him he heard a silvery titter from the girl called Betty. Funny—it was rather a pleasant sound.

THAT evening, in his Transcript, he saw a story about the snow train, to be run up into New Hampshire on Sunday, for winter sports. Well, a lot of young people could get out in the fresh air. A good thing. Eric did not think of himself as young. Now did he think again of the snow train.

On Monday, at about ten he rang for Miss Smith. She entered with a slight limp and sat down rather carefully on the chair by his desk. She had a strip of court plaster across her nose, which was tilted over her open note book. Eric could hardly fail to observe the plaster, and he eyed it a moment in silence.

"Result of winter sports?" he asked. She nodded, and poised her pencil. "A painful pleasure, I gather."

"Not at all—we had a perfectly elegant time. Betty sprained her wrist, Jo scraped her cheek, I got bumped all over, and we're going again next Sunday. You rang?"

Eric dictated a letter with deliberate precision.

"Get it out at once, please." Then he looked again at the girl's nose.

"Funny," he said—and that he said it surprised him as much as it evidently surprised her—"funny, I never noticed your nose before."

"Perhaps because I keep it out of other people's business," said she, rising.

But she had to wince as she straightened up, and her speech lost all its effect, for he sprang up, too, to help her. Anne shook her head and went quickly from the room.

The remainder of the week he sensed a deliberately intensified impersonality on her part and he did his best—which was pretty good—to match it. But the trouble with taking an intentional attitude toward a person is that you become increasingly aware of a person.

IN midweek Mr. Hemmingwell, who was a director of the railroad, spoke of the snow train to Eric and one of his partners. "A great success," he said. "They tell me we'll have to run three sections next week, and the stores are selling out all their stocks of winter sports goods. Good business, eh? They say the North station is a great sight before train time. Wish I could get up early enough to go have a look. Say, Spurr, you're young, why don't you get out your skis and go on the train next Sunday, and tell me all about it?"

Eric smiled deferentially. "I was never on skis a dozen times in my life, Mr. Hemmingwell," he said. "I'd surely break my neck——"

"Well, we don't want you to do that——"

"Miss Smith and two of the other office girls went last week, I believe. That is why Miss Smith had court plaster on her nose."

"Did she? I didn't notice."

Eric felt rebuked. Also, for a brief instant, he knew a subconscious revolt against a man who didn't notice when a pretty girl had court plaster on her nose. But was she a pretty girl? This was a new idea. Eric hastily inquired what move he should make about a brief for Stone vs. Smedley.

Yes, she was a pretty girl. There were five of them putting on their wraps Saturday, to go home. Their faces glowed with anticipation. They were buzzing together, and with them two young clerks just out of law school, who were displaying new ski harness. The whole office staff apparently was going on the snow train.

"And you ought to come, Mr. Spurr," said the irrepressible Betty. "It would do you good."

"To sprain my wrist?" he asked.

"Sure! What's a sprain? All over in a few days. O, boy! am I going to jump into those old drifts!"

The partners had gone. The atmosphere had changed. It was as if these girls were moths coming out of drab cocoons. Eric shot a glance at Miss Smith. She, too, was laughing. The court plaster was gone. She was bending over a desk, close to one of the young clerks, examining his new harness. "And you'll show me how tomorrow?" she was saying.

Eric went out in silence. The thin snow on State street was sloppy and dirty. There was no Symphony that evening. And when he got home he didn't like the dinner his servant had prepared.

HE woke up early and decided to walk down the hill before breakfast and see the snow train go out. It might please Mr. Hemmingwell. The train left at eight. He got to the North station a bit after seven-thirty, and already the long concourse was alive with people—young people, middle aged people, boys, girls, all chattering, all laughing, all carrying some sort of sports equipment—skates, sleds, toboggans, snowshoes, skis, and all wearing their idea of the proper costume. It was a gay, fantastic spectacle. Eric, in his sober business overcoat, felt suddenly aloof and lonely—an outsider looking in at some great communal festivity. He shrunk into a corner where he could observe without being noticed. The crowds streamed past him. He was amazed at the number of girls in groups of two, three, four.

They all had on ski pants like Betty's—vivid orange, yellow, blue, green, and vivid sweaters and scarfs, and little tight woolen helmets, and their faces shone. He fell to noting their shoes and other equipment, and comparing it with the equipment of a few hard-bitten, glacier-eyed blond Norsemen he saw striding trainward. The Norsemen had leather boots with great projecting soles, and eight-foot-long skis, and two poles. Most of the girls had skis too short—so he judged—and wore arctics over high heels, and had no poles, and no leather-palmed fur mittens. They had put all their investment into pants and sweaters!

As he was tucking away this bit of observation he saw Anne approaching with Betty and Jo and the young clerk, Starbuck. Anne—Miss Smith—had on bright yellow pants. Also, arctics over high heeled shoes. Her skis were short, and she had no poles. This he noted before he turned his face, lest they should see him.

But they were too happy and excited to see anybody. They were making for the train gate, and he just caught a drift of their laughter as they went past.

The train left in three sections. At eight-fifteen the concourse was silent and deserted. Eric went out into the hideous, shambling streets which thread that part of town, and climbed up the hill to his breakfast. He had a dull Sunday.

On Monday he stopped on the way to the office and purchased a book on skiing and ski equipment, which he put, still wrapped, in his drawer. Later he told Mr. Hemmingwell that he had been to the North station, described the crowds, and added, "Even at the reduced fare it must mean a substantial business."

Hemmingwell nodded. "It gets a lot of humble people out into the open air, too," he said.

"Yes, indeed," said Eric.

But that "humble" faintly rankled. That noon he undid his book. Yes, the skis should be almost as long as you can reach upward, and proper boots and harnesses are essential for their manipulation. How odd women are—they will spend their money for showy clothes and neglect what is really needed to accomplish the object. He put the book away presently, though the pictures fascinated him, and later rang for a stenographer.

Betty entered. "Miss Smith is with Mr. Hemmingwell," she said.

"Did you have a good time yesterday?"

"Did we? O, boy, I'll tell the world! You ought to see that new clerk ski, Mr. Spurr. He's just like a bird. He went to Dartmouth or something. He's teaching us. And we got out into the loveliest woods, and ate lunch there, and O, gee, I just hated to come back!"

Eric listened to this outburst of enthusiasm without smiling. It had a quality of genuineness which somehow touched him.

"Have you got ski boots?" he asked.

"Gee, no, I can't afford 'em! I'm going to save up, though."

"Why did you buy the orange pants instead of the right boots!"

Betty looked at him sharply. "That's a funny one," she said. "Now you ask me, why did I? You ask Anne that. She hasn't got boots, either, but she can put things better 'n' I can. Did you want to dictate?"

"Not much," answered Eric, and laughed nervously at his playfulness.

"Gee, he's gone coocoo," Betty reported. "Don't be surprised, Anne, if he asks you why you bought your pants."

"No more than he'll be at what I tell him," Anne replied.

IT was late in the day and the girls were preparing to close their desks when he buzzed for Anne. She flushed, frowned, picked up her pad and entered.

Eric was sitting with his ski book open on his desk and looking oddly pontifical and self-conscious.

"There are, I believe, five girls in this office who go on the snow train," he began. "I have ascertained that none of you has the proper boots and harnesses. This seems to me dangerous, as well as interfering with your sport. As Christmas comes on Friday I should like to—to make a little gift to each of you of these—these I may say essential equipments. I am aware that it may seem odd to—to depart from the usual box of candy, but I—er—feel quite strongly the danger of turned ankles."

Miss Smith's lips parted to say something—but she didn't say it.

"That is very nice of you," she finally managed. "O, what's the us of being silly and unrealistic? Of course, you know that none of us can afford those boots."

Eric looked up quickly at the word "unrealistic." It wasn't quite from the vocabulary of, well, say Betty. He nodded. "You have all been patient with me and my slow dictation. Why not a gift that is useful! Miss Smith, why did you all buy giddy pants instead of the right boots? That isn't realistic."

Again her lips parted, but an evident second thought dictated her words.

"That's where you are quite wrong," she said. "Most men go wrong there. All men, I guess. We don't go to New Hampshire to ski—not really. We go to get out of the office—out of Boston—way out. To do something different, and to be something different. I guess to be ourselves. Boots are just grubby useful. But bright pants are—are a sort of symbol. We think we look like the winter sports pictures from St. Moritz. We know we don't look the way we do in the office, anyhow. We look gay. That helps make us gay. I guess no man can get that. One looked at me and Betty and Jo the first day, and at our silly little skis we got for two dollars a pair, and said, 'Well, babies, anyway you got the pants,' and I said, 'You bet we have, Buddy, don't you like 'em?'——"

"You didn't! An impudent stranger!"

ANNE SMITH laughed. "O, Mr. Spurr, you really ought to come on the snow train, too! You'd learn a lot about people, and—and democracy."

"And pants?" he managed to grin.

"Never mind the pants. Do come."

"About the boots?"

"I—I shall have to ask the other girls——"

Anne went out of the office.

"What did the funny crab want this late?" Jo demanded.

"He wants to give us all ski boots for Christmas," said Anne.

Betty banged the lid of her desk down. "I'm going in to kiss him!" she cried.

"Better let Anne do that," said Jo.

The others looked to Anne for her retort, but she was blushing.

Betty whistled softly and said, "I hope he lets us get 'em at Wardell's."

He did. It was his idea that young Starbuck, the new clerk, should go with them, but they insisted he come, too. He waited till all the partners had gone home, and then accompanied them, mortally certain that everybody in State and Federal streets was staring at him. On five silk clad feet wool socks had to be pulled, and the boots fitted. It was a lark for everybody but Eric. He suffered.

The day before Christmas, when he reëntered his office before going home, he found on his desk a box of good cigars and a card. The card depicted five pairs of ski boots in a row, crudely drawn in ink. Beside the box was an envelope with another card—an etching of a snow scene, and written below, "Merry Christmas from Anne Smith." He smiled at the boots. When he got home he stood the other card on his mantel. It was a pretty picture, he told himself. That evening he lit candles in his windows, like everybody else on Beacon Hill, and listened to the carols sung in the streets. He would have liked to go down and mix with the crowds, and wander through those beautiful old steep streets of Bulfinch's Boston, now twinkling with candles like ten thousand stars, but it wouldn't be much fun alone. He lit one of his gift cigars and opened his book of ski instruction.

On Saturday afternoon Eric equipped himself for skiing with meticulous completeness. When he left the shop the clerk went with him to the door wearing a wide smile. He had bought boots, socks, trousers, parka, wool helmet, gloves, poles, skis, harnesses, even wax. He had checked everything from his book. He had heard the girls say they always met in the first coach of the first section, and at seven-fifteen the next morning he had finished breakfast, and, clad in all his new regalia, and carrying his skis, he went down to the cab he had summoned. He arrived early, as he intended, ascertained the first section, went into the first car, sat down well forward, and unfolded his Sunday paper. He was in a strange state of mind. He wanted to have fun. He wanted to escape from this strange loneliness that had recently got hold of him. He wanted to learn more about these nice, jolly girls that a month ago had been only machines to him. He wanted to see their faces when they discovered him on the train. He wanted to try this sport of skiing, too—well, just a little bit. It didn't fill him with any wild enthusiasm.

But he was also ashamed. What would the elder Mr. Wiggleswood think if he knew his future partner had been off for a day's lark with the office stenographers? What would that estimable and terrifying old lady, Mrs. John Gibson of Beacon street, whose will he had drawn up last week (and what a lot of money the old lady had!) think if she knew her attorney was skylarking this way? She'd likely enough take her business to some other firm. Eric, at the thought, almost got up to leave the train. Then he saw, in a vision, Mrs. Gibson sweeping by Anne Smith, her nose in the air. By what right? He flushed and slumped firmly into his seat again. He was going on the snow train if Mrs. Gibson lost all her money and had to go out as a cook!

And, just then, he heard a shout, "Hey, girls, look who's here!"

Betty's orange pants came plump down into the seat beside him.

Jo and two other girls and one of the clerks came up laughing and inspected him with comic seriousness. Then Starbuck came in.

"Well, old timer! Welcome to our party!" he cried without the faintest trace of diffidence.

Eric grinned sheepishly and covertly looked for Miss Smith. The rest found seats nearby. Finally he could stand it no longer. "Is—isn't Miss Smith coming?" he asked Betty.

That young person, who had appropriated the picture section of his paper, now looked up into his face and grinned. "Did she know you were coming?"

"Certainly not!"

"I guess she'll be here."

Eric was thinking this over when he heard a "Look! Santa Claus!" and turned with the rest to see Anne waving a new pair of ski poles, to the imminent peril of everybody on both sides of her.

Then she saw Eric. She flushed silent for the briefest instant and then laughed a greeting. "See—aren't they grand?" and she put out a boot for his inspection. Then she went on two seats with Starbuck.

THEY didn't let him read his paper much on the way to New Hampshire. Betty chatted like a wren building a nest. When she wasn't talking to him, or calling to the others in their party, she was exchanging wise cracks with a youth across the aisle whom he was certain she had never seen before. But nobody minded. A man and woman in the seat behind began to talk to him. The man was middle aged. So was his wife. They had snowshoes. They found the trip a wonderful break in the monotony of the week.

"It's making us young again," they said. "Is this your first trip?"

Eric nodded.

"You'll come again," they said.

"Did you bring any lunch?" asked Betty.

He shook his head. "A diner on the train, isn't there?"

"O, we don't come back to the train till it leaves. Never mind, we'll each give you a bite of ours."

The train flew on, all tracks cleared. The snow grew deeper. At last it rattled to a siding, and there was a wild scramble of skis and poles and pants and people, piling out into two feet of clean, cold snow that rolled away past a little village and up long slopes to the high, wooded hills.

"All the little Wiggleswoods this way!" called Starbuck. "Ever ski before, old timer?"

"He's not an old timer," chirruped Betty. "He only seems so 'cause you're so young—and fresh."

"That for you, baby," said the man, giving her a sudden shove that sent her sprawling into a drift.

Eric was amazed, and about to be indignant, till he saw her face emerge, shining pink through gobs of snow, and heard her laughter. But he hoped nobody would try that on him!

Nobody did. They helped him put his skis on ("Some good equipment you've got," Starbuck commented), and showed him how to progress. As he had once skated with skill, and in his college days had been a few times on skis, he got along well enough on the level, and kept the pace. But before long they began to climb. This was harder. He had to pause for breath.

"Take it easy, old timer," Starbuck called. "Here, we'll try a slide while you get the old pump calmed down."

He did a neat kick around, hit Betty a slap on the seat of her orange pants, with a "Come on, baby," and went flying down the slope they had just toiled up, with Betty on his heels, and the others just behind.

Bracing himself with his poles, Eric watched them go, their gay clothes like wind blown flowers on the expanse of snow, their shrill, happy cries coming up to him in the cold, clear air. Something in the spectacle thrilled him. He had a catch in the heart that wasn't from overexertion. He thought how once they had seemed to him, at the day's end, like moths coming out of cocoons. No, they weren't moths, they were butterflies!

Back they came up the hill. "O Mr. Spurr, these boots and harnesses make all the difference!" Jo called

"I'll say," from Betty. "Did you see me do a Telemark?"

"Was that what it was?" said Starbuck.

"And I didn't fall down," said Anne.

"You'll all be fallen women before night," Starbuck affirmed. "Come on higher!"

HE began to herring-bone, with big strides, up a steep pitch ahead, the rest after him. Poor Eric attempted it, too, but got nowhere. The others had forgotten him and disappeared over the top. He was reflecting what to do, when he heard a familiar voice.

"See—side step—this way," Anne called down.

Eric followed instructions and got up the pitch. "Thank you." he said with the stiffness of embarrassment. "My clumsiness delays your trip. You go ahead with your friends."

"Don't be silly! You're doing fine for the first time out. It's leveler now."

They pushed on, Anne leading in the others' tracks, turning into a mountain wood road and going what seemed to Eric's unaccustomed muscles like endless miles. When he and Anne at last caught up the rest had a fire of dead stuff burning beside a boulder, their skis were off, and a pot of coffee cooking.

"Buck always carries that old coffee pot in his pack," said Jo.

"Nice Buck," said Betty, sniffing.

They sat Eric on a log, after his skis were off, and everybody gave him a share of lunch. He had a tin mug of hot coffee, too, and by the time that was down he felt pleasantly drowsy, listening to the chatter without taking part in it. It became evident to him presently that they wanted to move on for more sport, and he was a problem. He roused.

"You go ahead," he said. "I'll go back to the train at my own pace."

"O. K., old timer," cried Buck. "Take it easy first day out. Come on, children."

All but Anne buckled on their skis and vanished down the hemlock aisle of the wood road. Eric saw her fifty feet away breaking a few cones off a low limb.

"You must go, too," he called.

She laughed and came back to him "They're going to break their necks on a steep run down the mountain," she said. "I'm not good enough."

Eric looked at her in her bright yellow pants and scarf and woolen helmet, her face glowing, the tiny hemlock cones held idly in her hand. She a girl, was staying behind to look after him!

"I am heartily ashamed," he said. "I shall come on this train until I learn to ski as well as any of you."

"You don't like to do anything that you can't do well, do you?"

"Certainly not! Does anybody?"

"Millions," she answered. "That's one trouble with the world."

"I should like to call you Anne," he said with sudden irrelevance.

"Of course. Why not? I might even call you Eric, if Buck can call you old timer. We're in a different world on snow train Sundays. Everything goes."

There was a long silence, broken only by the soft plops of snow falling from branches, and once the ringing tattoo of a woodpecker.

"Do you live with your family, Anne?" he finally asked.

"No—Eric"—(She managed it with a little laugh, and he felt a pleasant tingle down his spine). "What family I have left live in Maine. I'm a hall-bedroom girl, alone in the great city."

"Really," said he. "Really. What—what do you do—I mean evenings?"

"Well, I generally dine at the Ritz and, of course, I have my seats at the Symphony, and the Vincent club dances——"

Eric was staring at her, and she broke off.

"——What does any stenographer on $25 a week do?" she finished.

"I don't know. That's why I asked."

"No, you don't. That's a fact. And in some cases it's just as well. I sit in the second balcony when there's a good play—which there seldom is in the alleged Hub—and I go see Jo and Betty sometimes in Cambridge, and there are lots of free lectures in Boston, and free books in the library. O, I'm a good girl, Eric!"

"I didn't suppose you weren't," he said almost stiffly.

She laughed and moved nearer to him on the log. "Don't you ever fool, I mean with your mind?"

"I'm afraid not," said he.

"You ought to. It's just as good for your mind to have a change as for your body. There should be snow trains for brains. You ought to be laughing at us for a pair of sillies sitting on a log halfway up a mountain and talking like melancholy owls."

"It is very odd," said Eric, "but until recent weeks it never occurred to me to wonder what any of you do outside the office——"

"I know," said she, quietly.

"——and since I have wondered that, I have begun to—to—well, to be somewhat dissatisfied with my own occupations outside the office. In fact, I find I have no friends, and I am lonely."

HE made this announcement in a judicial tone, as if he were elucidating a legal case, and stared straight in front of him. It wasn't till he felt Anne's eyes on his face that he turned. They looked at each other a long moment.

"Loneliness isn't pleasant, it is?" she finally said, to break the silence. "But we must get back! Think if we missed the train. There would be a scandal in the office!"

Eric flushed red at the thought and sprang to his feet—or tried to spring. He was too stiff to manage it with any agility. They heaped snow on the fire, fastened on their skis, and back tracked, traveling in silence. Out on the open slopes at last Eric faced the descent with a sinking heart, but Anne assured him that by taking the slope at an angle he could go slowly. And she slipped ahead to illustrate. They crossed the pasture successfully, and turned to make another tack. Eric was beginning to like it. This time Anne headed a little straighter down. But she was no expert and failed to read the snow signs ahead.

Suddenly she shot out into space over the brink of a sudden declivity and Eric, behind her, seeing her go, with rare presence of mind fell down. He couldn't get up. Struggling vainly for the technique, he abandoned the attempt, kicked his feet free of the clumsy skis and plunged over the brow. All he saw was a pair of yellow legs waving frantically in the air, a ski on the end of each. Wallowing above his waist in the drift he rushed to the legs, plunged his arms into the snow and tugged Anne's body and head into view. He held her horizontal as he cried, "Are you hurt?"

"Only my feelings," she sputtered. "Help me on to my feet."

She managed at last to get her skis under her, and wiped the snow out of her eyes, dug some of it out of her neck and wrists, and then looked down at Eric, wallowing to his waist below her, and emitted a peal of laughter.

"I—I was terrified!" he said.

"So was I when I went over that jump! It's all right now. Get your skis and come on."

He wallowed back, retrieved his skis, brought them below the bank and put them on. They dug Anne's poles out of the drift, and, covered with snow from head to foot, started on down the hill, gathering speed as they went. Eric, too, gathered confidence. He crouched as he had seen Buck do, he found his boyhood sense of balance returning, and when at last they brought up on the level, not far from the train, his face dripping and his eyes streaming, he turned to Anne with a look of triumph. She, too, had the glow of speed upon her and flashed back a smile. Her face was circled by wet and rebellious hair, her helmet was awry, and it was borne in upon Eric once more that she was extremely good to look upon.

ERIC was very sleepy on the train going back and unspeakably weary.

"Keep away from him, chatterbox!" said Buck to Betty. "We'll send you home in a cab, old timer, and a hot bath'll fix you, and tomorrow you'll be ready to tell the Supreme court where they get off."

And into a cab they put him at the North station and waved him good-by. He tumbled his aching muscles into a tub, ate a large dinner and almost immediately went to bed, wondering whether he had been a good fellow or a fool.

The next morning, to his amazement, he felt, barring a decided stiffness in certain muscles, better than he'd felt for years. A case he expected to study till noon had fallen into surprising order at ten-thirty, and he buzzed.

"Good morning, Anne," said he.

"Good morning, Mr. Spurr. Are you feeling all right?"

"I was till you called me Mr. Spurr."

Some Gotham Needles Still Ply for Charity

Lenten Sewing Circles Meet at Homes of Well Known Families Weekly

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—In these most interesting times society is not permitting anything to interfere with its normal routine. So far as the notables are concerned, this is Lent, and the things germane to the penitent period are in order and must come to pass.

Not all the sewing circles are out of existence. Several have been functioning since Ash Wednesday came in on chill air. Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee, that impressive grande dame, has already thrown open the doors of her home to the wielders of the needle.

Then, too, at the home of Michel C. Bouvier the needles plied in aid of the Mother Katherine Drexel auxiliary on Thursday morning, while at Mrs. Carl Tucker's the cribside committee of the Babies' hospital met to sew on garments for the important young of the institution.

For St. Luke's Hospital.

Tuesday mornings during these forty days will find the homes of Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. Edward E. Loomis, Mrs. Cecil F. Shallcross, and Mrs. Darwin P. Kingsley open for the sewing activities of the clothing committee of St. Luke's hospital service. Thursdays, on the other hand, find the residences of Mrs. Witherbee, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, and Mrs. Robert L. Gerry open for groups sewing for the New York Nursery and Child's hospital.

Speaking of Mrs. Gerry reminds me that the Livingston clan is much in the news today. From overseas comes word that the countess of Dumfries, who is a member of the Livingston clan, being a daughter of the countess of Granard, the erstwhile Beatrice Mills, has given birth to twins. Twins are a tradition in the Livingston family. The countess of Granard, sister of former Secretary of the Treasury Mills, is the twin sister of Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, the former Gladys Mills.

Eldest Will Inherit Title.

Just which of the countess of Dumfries' twin sons is the eldest has not yet been vouchsafed, but it is a matter of great importance, since the eldest will succeed some day to the marquisate of Bute and, under the laws of primogeniture, the eldest, even by a matter of minutes, succeeds to the titles and estates, which in the case of the marquess of Bute are enormous.

Not only are the countess of Granard and Mrs. Phipps twins, but their mother, the late Mrs. Mills, who was born "Teenie" Livingston, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Maturin Livingston, was a twin sister of Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck, the former Elizabeth Livingston. Certainly the Livingstons live up to tradition and the Mendelian theory.

Mills House Open Again.

Now that Ogden Mills is no longer in the cabinet at Washington, town is looking forward to seeing the red brick house on 5th avenue at 59th street become a center of social activity once more. This is the mansion where the late Mrs. Ogden Mills entertained so lavishly. We do hear that the former Dorothy Randolph, now that her husband is out of active politics, will return to the Victorian manor where the countess of Granard and her sister, Mrs. Phipps, danced as debutantes, and start a proper salon. There will be youth there as well, for Mrs. Mills' daughter, Dorothy Fell,

It's a good game, even if awkward to pronounce

Watching badminton matches is cold business, even though the matches are played indoors, for it is a fast game and the players do not like much furnace heat. Mrs. Morris K. Wilson, Mrs. Harve G. Badgerow, Mrs. Alan H. Harris Jr. and Mrs. Perry Dunlap Smith (left to right) were rooting for their Winnetka team at a tournament between Winnetka and Geneva players.

CHICAGO FOLK TAKE IT EASY IN PALM BEACH

PALM BEACH, Fla.—[Special.]—The Breakers Chicago colony had some important additions this week, among them Mrs. William E. Casselberry and Mrs. Edward P. Bailey of Lake Forest, who will pay a visit of some length and are being entertained by their acquaintances in the cottage colony. They attended the concert in the grand loggia at the Breakers on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Lansing B. Warner are late Chicago arrivals at the Breakers, where they joined friends.

At the Poinciana-Breakers beach on Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Castle of Chicago, with their daughter, Miss Carolyn Castle, and her guest, Miss Laura Ann Humphries of Lake Forest. Mr. and Mrs. E. Preston Rowles of Chicago also were there, attending a cabana luncheon given by Mrs. Oscar Miller.

Lucius Pond Ordway of St. Paul is the guest at her villa here of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ordway, the former Bessie Gilman of Lake Forest, who is anticipating the early arrival of her husband from New York and of her young sons for their Easter holidays.

Seen at the Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hughitt of Chicago, who are remaining through the spring season at the villa they have taken on Clarke avenue, are daily visitors at the Poinciana-Breakers beach, enjoying the parade of bathers upon the sands and lunching at Gabrielle's buffet bar.

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Charles H. Randle gave a dinner party at the Villa Marietta in honor of the birthday of her son, Hanson F. Randle of Chicago, who is spending the season there with her.

William B. Langford of Chicago was entered in the men's annual championship of Palm Beach. He is at his winter home in Lake Worth for a long season, and came to the Palm Beach Country club daily for the event, won by William H. Hyde of Ridgeway, Pa.

Mrs. McCall Isham of Chicago was among those attending the Sunday gala at the Sun and Surf club. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. E. Preston Rowles, Mrs. George D. Gaw of Chicago with Mrs. E. P. Machlin of Evanston, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Mudge and Miss Mildred Mudge, all of Chicago.

Visiting His Parents.

Horace Tennes, who flew down from Chicago, where he is a student at Loyola college, will spend three weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Tennes of Clarke avenue, at their villa. His three boats, the Headache, Hootnanny IV., and Hootnanny V., were entered in the annual Lipton yacht races, which took place March 10 and 11 at New Smyrna. He also has entered the Col. Edward Greene annual boat races to be run at Miami on March 18 and 19. He is a member of Loyola's swimming team.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey K. Anderson and their son, Harvey Jr., accompanied by Miss Ruth Hanson of Chicago, are at the Breakers. They have spent the last month at Kingston, Jamaica, and flew to Havana, thence to Miami in the Clipper, before arriving here.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Belden and Joseph C. Belden Jr. of Chicago, who are spending several weeks in Palm Beach, had luncheon together at Sea Spray beach Monday. The Sea Spray Bath club has been joined this season by many Chicago visitors.

Dormant Democrats Awaken to Social Life at Washington with Great Alacrity

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(Special.)—I don't know where all the Republican women have disappeared to. They vanished from the face of Washington the very moment that Franklin D. Roosevelt was inaugurated. All save Dolly Gann. She's still going to parties. Not, however, in that elegant car with the vice presidential seal on its side; the magical license plate 111 on its rear. That car is parked over in front of the Washington hotel, where dwell the Garners.

● Democrats, dormant since the Wilson administration, are touched with the wand of victory, and awaken, refreshed and resolute. Take Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who's led such a quiet life for the last ten years. She's very much in the foreground these Democratic days. Her coloring is palely pretty; her profile is almost as attractive as it was that twilight afternoon when Woodrow Wilson, first and romantically glimpsed it as she sat at a White House piano with his daughter, Eleanor. She's invited everywhere these days.

She's invited everywhere these days.

● Mary Dewson, with both sense and a sense of humor, spent several days here celebrating the Roosevelt victory in which she played such a large part with her work with the women.

"For heaven's sake," she asked recently at luncheon where she was the guest of honor "give me feminine feet in the paper! . . . Puzzled, the reporter wanted to know what she meant.

It seems that at a recent meeting in New York a lady journalist wrote of her: "Miss Dewson seemed to but actually did not have on bedroom slippers."

● Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the new secretary of commerce, wanted to dodge the publicity that came to her with her husband's appointment. So she took to her bed with a cold and declined to see anybody for several days, which only postponed the interviews.

● The Cordell Hulls must have known for some time that he was to be the new secretary of state. For quite some time ago they moved from the rather modest hotel in which they had made their home for years to one of the most quietly elegant in town.

● Mrs. Blair Bannister, sister of Senator Carter Glass, is verv active these days in all manner of enterprises.

● Ike Hoover, the chief usher over at the White House, is having a terribly hard time these days getting accustomed to the friendly informality of Mrs. Roosevelt. Now, what Ike would like would be the suits and trappings of royalty, with the formality of Buckingham palace thrown in for good measure. What he gets is a spontaneous, hospitable hostess who does what she wants to without stopping to see if the Medes and Persians of Washington society have already made a hard and fast rule about it.

● Remember what the distinguished Englishman said of her when he returned to his home: "Arizona has two beauties: There is the Grand canyon, and there is Isabella Greenway." In praise of her Alice Longworth said: "She is one of my few enthusiasms."

Three minutes after Mr. Roosevelt had received the nomination at Chicago I asked her for an opinion. She replied, "The dawn has come."

● We have often wondered just what is the ratio of importance between a senator and a member of the house of representatives. We knew that a senator always ranked a congressman. We knew that on the basis of numerical importance the senator (with a total number of 96) rates about four and one-half times a house member (with an aggregate membership of 435).

But the other day we found exactly how congress rates its two component parts. When the tickets to the inauguration ceremonies were distributed each senator got 10 tickets; every house member was allotted 7, which puts the two houses on a sort of London naval treaty 10-7 basis.

● Mrs. John C. Greenway, the Arizona rancher with the fluffy hair, the lovely eyes, is here. She was Mrs. Roosevelt's bridesmaid; she wants to be the new representative from Arizona, taking the place left vacant by Lewis Douglas, new director of the budget.

She replied, "The dawn has come."

Richard Crane Danish Envoy, It Is Reported

Travelers Returning from Washington Bring This Interesting Rumor.

By Cousin Eve.

WASHINGTON is a hothouse, a forcing plant of hybrid news these days. Cabinet secretaries, ambassadors, and ministers are being made hourly, and everybody is agog.

Returning travelers say Richard T. Crane III. will be next American envoy to Denmark. His last post in Wilsonian days was Prague, where he owned a beautiful medieval castle with a pointed roof, on an old square, and had for week-end guests many Hapsburgs. On retiring he gave the house to the United States as a permanent legation.

Mr. Crane has a southern wife and a tall, black haired daughter, lovely to behold, Bruce Crane.

Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis returns this week for a short stay, and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris is also expected soon to join her husband at the Lake Shore Drive hotel.

An Interesting Village.

Along good roads due west of Chicago lies the tranquil village of Wayne. By motor it is no time at all. A few negative suburbs, the great treeless house of Mark Morton against the horizon, fields gray and stubbly, and lines of distant purple woods. We swish through St. Charles, quite an ornate town with a resplendent country club, and then round a corner by a white, empty farmhouse on a hill. With beige roof and a look of modish simplicity, it awaits the family of Dr. Allan Albert of the Century of Progress.

Then a demure village, a gray, orderly village with a prim white church, pretty houses, trees. Priceless peace is the great asset of Wayne, which has no mayor, no police; only a woman's club. We inspect the church, with its old box pews, and read the writing on its walls, the "thou shalt nots," and are on our way.

The country suddenly becomes English in character; the road lies under arching oaks framed by rolling gray fields fringed with great trees still coppery in spots with dry autumn leaves. We are within the domain of Dunham Woods, the broad estate of 4,000 acres owned for 100 years by the Mark Dunham family. English they were in origin, coming here early in the last century from New York state.

High on a wooded hill at the right an English castle. Its gray-green towers and turrets are quaintly solid and its gardens and natural pine woods are full of charm. The roads, very wide and smooth, run through farming country, by great, distant silos and barns, and through woods still somber in the sharp March dusk.

Raised Draft Horses.

Mark Dunham was a merchant in great draft horses, and on the left lie the red barns and stables where 300 glossy, powerful creatures were quartered. It was a big business even up to thirty years ago, and men came to Dunham Woods at Wayne from all over the world. In the left foreground is a long, low building of red brick. Here were the business offices of the estate, under fine trees.

The Dunham properties were left to three children. A son, Wirth Dunham, died in an accident last year, and two daughters, Countess Adhemari Morelli of Florence, Italy, and Mrs. Charles Cameron West of Manitowoc, Wis., wife of a well known shipbuilder, were the heirs. Countess Morelli has no interest in the Dunham Woods estate, and a year ago Mrs. Charles West took over its management.

Then things began to happen.

HARD TIMES PARTY GIVEN AT PHOENIX

PHOENIX, Ariz.—[Special.]—In keeping with the present day was the hard times party given by Mrs. George Gillespie (Catherine Thorne) recently at Castle Hot Springs. The party was inspired by Mrs. Gillespie's trunkful of evening dresses that she had left at the Springs seven of eight years ago—dresses of the very short skirt vintage. The guests either took advantage of these dresses or wore the conventional western Levi and colored shirt. The Mark Healys and the Joseph T. Bowens Jr. rode over from their ranches to join the party.

A more colorful gathering could hardly be imagined than that of last Sunday at the Arizona Biltmore when the Arizona State Teachers' college presented a program of concert music. The picturesque swimming pool, with its gay cabanas, informal tea parties, and delightful music made one forget that such things as closed banks, depression, etc., existed.

Mrs. James McMillan served tea at her cabana to one of the largest parties in honor of Gov. and Mrs. B. B. Moeur. Mrs. Robert Bartlett also entertained at tea for Col. and Mrs. George Buckingham of Lake Forest, who have returned for their second winter at the Biltmore. Miss Kathleen Bagley had a group of young people with her in honor of Miss Nancy McNulty, her house guest.

Girls Try Calf Roping.

Not to be outdone by the cowboys, the girls are trying their skill at calf roping. It's a trick, especially throwing a calf, and some are not so small, nor do they show any desire to be thrown. A rope is attached to the calf and three girls are given the rope. The calf is then let

A FRIEND IN NEED

Grievous Need Still Exists Among City's Destitute for Clothes, Furniture, and Heating Stoves.

By Sally Joy Brown.

ABOUT this time of the year when cold weather is on the wane many of us who have had the welfare of the poor at heart all winter may be inclined to feel that our work is over. It isn't over, though, and the need for warm clothing, as my laden files would tell you, still exists.

There are many weeks before us in which heavy clothing will be an absolute necessity. The men who have gone without overcoats and heavy underwear and stout shoes for the last few months are still suffering for lack of them. Their families continue to struggle along without sufficient wearing apparel, blankets, and heating stoves.

Such suffering in many cases is needless. Many of us are hoarding discarded wearing apparel and saving articles of furniture which would make the needy comfortable.

Do you belong to this group of hoarders? If you do, I am pleading with you this morning to do something about putting such gifts in circulation. The amount of good you can do and the happiness you can create are immeasurable. Just write me a note telling what you want to dispose of and I shall see that it is placed in the hands of needy and deserving people.

Needs Mechanical Drawing Set.

"I wonder if a reader of your column has a mechanical drawing set to give away. My son needs one for his school work and we cannot afford to buy him one. His father has been out of work several years.

"MRS. C. L."

Lack of the necessary equipment often tends to hinder the student's progress. In this case the need is one that a number of families with children just beyond school age may be able to fill.

Free Music Lessons for Some One.

"I will give a piano lesson once a week to some child whose parents cannot afford to pay. He or she must be a beginner and must reside on the north side. H. M."

So many parents would like to be able to give their children music lessons, but cannot afford them. Here's an opportunity for one of you to realize that ambition. Write me, if you'd like to take advantage of this offer; please do not telephone.

In Need of Pajamas.

"I would appreciate it very much if you would try to get me a pair or two of flannel pajamas, large size. I am a patient in the sanitarium here and have no income. I am in dire need of them. R. R."

Flannel pajamas would prove a great comfort to this man suffering from tuberculosis. If you have a pair in size 40 or 42, not in use, won't you send them to him?

Magazines Offered.

"I subscribe to the 'Cosmopolitan,' 'Woman's Home Companion,' 'Collier's,' and 'Photoplay' magazines and should like to pass them on to a hospital or to a shut-in when I am through with them. I would be glad to send them regularly each month.

"E. M."

If your favorite publication is among those listed, here is your opportunity to secure a second hand subscription to it. If you are an invalid or know an invalid who might like to have them, write me; please do not telephone.

Victims of the Depression.

"We are a family of four grown-ups—my husband, a son, a daughter, and myself. My husband has been unemployed for three years, my son lost his job two years ago, and we are very much in need of bedding such as sheets, pillow slips, and blankets. We also need towels. If I had the material I could make the slips.

"MRS. P. L."

If you have any slightly worn linens which could be repaired for use in this household, Mrs. L. would appreciate having them. Blankets and towels would be helpful, too.

WHERE TO BUY IT

You can find out where to purchase wearing apparel, home furnishings, and other new things described in the women's feature pages of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE—if mentioned as being on sale in Chicago—by calling the well," said she, "not—not the winter woods."

They Had the Pants

"But when I see you now I see yellow legs waving in the air. That suggests Anne."

"Please—I have no legs in business hours."

Eric laughed. It was a hearty and humorous laugh. It was, in fact, so different from his usual moderated indication of conventional mirth that Anne looked up sharply, in interrogation.

"Never mind—take this."

He began to dictate, without his accustomed deliberation, so clear was the case in his mind. He dictated for a solid half hour without a pause.

"Did you get it—all?"

"I hope so," said the breathless Anne.

"Now get out four copies and don't dally!"

This was snapped. Again she looked at him. The man's eyes were actually twinkling! Anne's own responded as she rose. "You are even prettier when your hair is wet," said he.

She colored and left abruptly.

Every night that week, had anybody peeped into Eric's flat, he would have seen that legal machine clad in ski boots strapped on skis, in the middle of the rug, crouching and straightening from the knees, crouching and straightening, over and over, and then doing the kick around (to the grave peril of the furniture), and then with the weight on one foot manipulating the other. An hour a day, with the manual for guide.

THE next Sunday he was on the train before the rest. He had lunch in a new knapsack. It was a gray day, threatening more snow, on top of a heavy fall in mid-week. The train didn't have to run far. They landed in rolling country, with the steeper slopes a mile from the rails and farms and woodlands stretching out into a gray atmosphere where flakes were already forming. Eric fell in behind Buck and imitated his motions, determined to learn all he could. His exercises had limbered his muscles and when, at noon, they found a place for their fire he was almost as fresh as anybody. The snow was now falling steadily, but they got a fire going by the use of dead hemlock twigs, beside a brook that tinkled under ice, and as the snow powdered their heads and shoulders they ate and sang, treating Eric quite as if he were one of them.

"Who's for the big hill?" cried Buck, when they were done.

"I am, for one," said Eric.

"Atta boy!"

Off they went and, though his heart was in his boots, Eric took the hill direct. He got a nasty spill, climbed up, went on, scrambled back, and made the run again without a fall.

"In another week you'll be jumping!" Buck exclaimed with genuine admiration.

Eric flushed with pleasure. "I like to accomplish what I start out to do," he said, turning to see where Anne was.

She and Betty had both spilled. They were coming on again, covered with snow, and shouting with excitement.

"Just time for one more, Anne," said he. "Come on back!"

He led her up the hill and at the top executed a clean kick around. "Give me your hand," he ordered, "and crouch more, and keep your skis closer together."

"Yes, sir," said she, laughing.

Side by side, and hand in hand, they shoved over the edge, and flew down through the falling snow, which stung against their faces. Not a spill! Twice on the descent he had steadied her, she realized. They straightened at the bottom and as she made to withdraw her hand she said, "My goodness, Eric, you've certainly improved in one week!"

"I intended to." He still held her hand. Early darkness was coming, a white darkness. All around figures could be dimly seen making for the train. "You are going to dinner with me at the Ritz tomorrow and to the guild opening."

Anne forgot for an instant to tug her hand. "Lunt and Fontanne!" she cried. "O, but I don't belong in the Ritz," she added.

"Neither do I. That's why we'll go there."

"And Mr. Wiggleswood and Mr. Hemmingwell will be at the theater and what would they think to see you there with the office stenographer?"

"To hell with them and what they think!"

ANNE gave a little cry. He dropped her hand.

"Sorry," he said, "I forgot myself."

"No—no! You've just remembered yourself," said she. "Yes—I'll go. I'll go!"

And she suddenly took his hand, gave it a quick pressure, and almost fled toward the train, which was now blowing its warning whistle. Over the level fields she sped and he had all he could do to keep a pace behind her, and no breath for conversation.

A day later he was looking across a Ritz table at her and, of course, utterly failing to appreciate the feminine magic by which she did not appear out of place in this setting.

"And now," he said, "I should like an explanation of your cryptic remark that I'd 'just remembered myself.'"

Anne shook her head. "I'd give anything to tell you, but I can't."

"Even more cryptic. Why?"

"I just can't. Tell me who the people around us are."

"I don't know any of them. Please——"

Again she shook her head, looking at him almost pleadingly. He changed the subject.

At the theater their seats were across the aisle from those of Mr. and Mrs. Hemmingwell. Hemmingwell nodded, looking sharply at Anne, as if he didn't quite recognize her; Mrs. Hemmingwell inclined her head in what might be construed as a bow to Eric, and then spoke to her husband, who answered something. Then the woman glanced again at Anne. Eric saw it all and flushed. Anne saw it all and watched his face. Then the lights dimmed and Anne, at least, was lost in a gay world of make believe.

"Let's walk, it's frozen," she said after the theater. "I live on the hill, too, you know—the back side, of course."

THEY crossed the common and faced the beautiful Bullfinch statehouse, pink and gold in the flood lights.

"That sight always makes me proud to live in Boston," Eric said.

"Yes, they built it more than a hundred years ago and haven't done anything so good since," she replied. "Why do you stay with that cold roast firm?"

"What—why—wha——" he stammered in astonishment.

"I mean it! O, I don't care how she looks at me, or he either. But here are you, with the best brains in the office, and what do you get for it?"

"A very good salary, I should say."

"Yes, a salary! You do two-thirds of the real work and get a salary, and no name, no reputation——"

"But I expect to be a member of the firm in time, of course," Eric replied a little stiffly, amazed at the turn of the conversation.

They had passed the State House and were almost on the site of the ancient beacon that gave the hill its name. Anne stopped and compelled his eyes.

"Do you really mean that?" she demanded.

"Certainly!" He flushed.

"O, Eric, how can you be so blind! So that's it! That's why you dress as they do, try to talk as they do, are half ashamed when you do anything they wouldn't do! You haven't remembered yourself yet, after all."

"What do you mean?" he demanded, his voice rising and stirring an echo against the dark wall of the State House extension.

"Why, can't you see? Don't you know? They'll take all you have to give, but they'll never open the inner doors to you. Isn't there a young Hemmingwell, and a young Wigglewood, and for all I know two or three young Cobalts? If they can get through law school they'll be taken in. If they can't it will be somebody with the right name. You have as much chance to get into the British peerage! O, it makes me so mad to see you wasting your ability this way when you ought to be getting famous! You ought to head the Bar association and be a judge or—or governor——" (with a gesture at the State House).

Eric was too sobered to laugh at this idea.

She had struck him a staggering blow, for in a flash of dazed insight he realized that what she said was true. Yet even in his bewilderment he wondered why she had struck.

"What—what would you advise?" he said finally, with a weak attempt at sarcasm.

"Come," she said, linking her arm in his and leading him on down the hill. She stopped in front of an ancient house, which bore a plate informing passers that this was once the house of Charles Sumner.

"He was a Brahmin, too," she said. "He lived here. All his kind lived around here. Now I live here, and you live here, on this hill."

"But I don't see——"

"A new order moving in. Why try to board an old ship that doesn't want you? Sail your own boat. In the new city and the new age haven't there got to be new firms? If you don't start the best one somebody else will. Get a good court man for partner, and in five years—no, three—you'll have more business than you can handle——"

"Why do you say all this to me?" Eric cried. "I—I don't know where I'm at—these ideas—I never——"

THEY had come back up the hill to a doorway and she was taking out a key.

"I want to see you do well whatever you do, as much as you," she said. "My Bible taught me it wasn't doing well to bury your talent in a napkin."

"You are a strange girl, Anne—very strange."

She had the door open and had stepped into the dim hallway. He followed. They unconsciously lowered their voices.

"Thank you, Eric, for a lovely evening——"

"How would I finance such a move?"

She had taken off her glove to shake hands, and laid her fingers in his.

"How can I tell that? All I can say is you could get an expert secretary very reasonably."

Her eyes caught his in the dimness, and he saw an almost wistful little smile hover over her mouth. Holding her hand tighter, he suddenly leaned forward and kissed that mouth. Then he straightened up in consternation.

"I—I—" he began in terrified contrition.

He heard the softest laugh and felt her lips on his again for an instant, and then found himself pushed out of the door.

Eric Spurr, inside man for Wigglewood, Wigglewood, Cobalt & Hemmingwell, walked down Pinckney street thinking it was Mount Vernon, came to in Louisberg square, contemplated the mellow, aristocratic old houses fronting that relic of Copley's orchard, made a face at them and started up the hill again. He slipped on the snow, and as he sat down had a vision of a pair of yellow legs waving in the air.

"Pants," he said aloud. "A symbol. Out of the office cocoon, butterflies! A life of their own. It's everybody's right. My right. My God, I love her!"

He got up. In his apartment he looked up the address of a law school classmate, now enjoying some reputation as a pleader, and jotted it carefully down in his pocket diary. Then he waxed his skis before he went to bed.

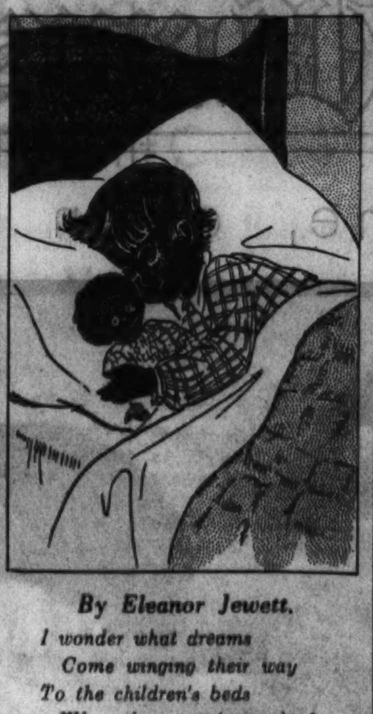
AT NIGHT



By Eleanor Jewett.

I wonder what dreams
Come winging their way
To the children's beds
When they rest from play?

Sometimes a chuckle,
Full, low and sweet,
Will fall from their lips
My ear to greet.

The pleasantest things
They ever can do
In brilliant colors
Go trooping through.

Those heads of golden
And tangled curls,
As they laugh in their sleep—
My little girls!

White Coat for Brick House Gives It Charm

Did you know that the popular vogue of white washing brick houses is an "old Spanish custom?" Spanish padres were the first white settlers in southern California and there we see for the most part exterior walls of white, vividly contrasting with the luxurious semitropical foliage around. A good idea, too, this white washing the walls of your common brick house—if you wish to give it a new and different touch this spring.

SCOTLAND

Be sure you include Scotland in your European trip. The journey is great. The destination wonderful. Every week-day the world's two most famous trains—the Flying Scotsman from King's Cross and the Royal Scot from Euston—make their epic runs between London and Scotland. Luxury trains they are, with a long tradition for comfort and good service—record-breakers both, doing the 400 miles in well under 8 hours!

There is so much to see. Edinburgh and Holyrood — scene of the Mary-Darnley-Rizzio drama — the Scott Country, the Isle of Skye with its memories of Bonnie Prince Charlie, the famous golf resorts on the East Coast, the grandeur of the Highlands. Give yourself plenty of time in Scotland.

With a return ticket to Scotland you now have the choice of travelling back by the East Coast, West Coast or Midland Routes.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Blue eyed and blonde, charming and gay, with no end of imagination, she decided to turn the old brick offices into a riding club and restaurant. When I went out to Wayne in October for a week-end the miracle was done. The entire countryside had been tidied up; old, tottering barns had vanished, and straggling fences were no more. It was a warm, hazy Sunday, and a hunt was meeting in the great square farmyard, with its red surrounding barns.

Every One Goes Hunting.

There were Joy Morton II. of Geneva, Arthur A. Pope, Henry Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindsay, George Woodruff, and a score of others. On a small, shaggy pony Bobby Stafford followed the trail over fields and fences, woods and bogs, learning to hunt at 7. The Wetmores of Wheaton, the William S. Monroes of Wayne, Mrs. Wirth Dunham, the Norrises, and many more in motors rounded up here and there at the barriers, enjoying an occasional spill.

After this a hunt breakfast at the club, which was bubbling over with lively parties. Some from town for the day, others there for the week-end. All winter Dunham Woods club has been a rendezvous for the smart set.

Explain it if one can—why do people living in palatial, gorgeous houses love small, old fashioned, cozy places? Why do they throng to Dunham Woods and bask in the sunshine there? It is kept purposely as plain and simple as a place well can be. In knocking the old offices into a club Mrs. West has used much taste and lots of discretion. Upstairs are many small bedrooms. Fresh wall papers in snappy plaids, tiny patterns; quaint and pretty rag rugs, chintz. Downstairs, again the walls are bright and old fashioned, and the furniture entirely of amusing old pieces from the attic of the great house across the road.

Plenty of Open Fires.

There are crackling fires in every chimney place. There are lovely old English and French prints from the same attic, and large chairs done luxuriously in horse hair. The several dining rooms are paneled in old woods and there is an alluring alcove for a table seating four. Hunting prints adorn these walls, and pewter and copper.

The floors throughout are black and white marble squares. A huge grizzled dog lies at one fireside; some sleepy kittens are outstretched at another. People come and go. A house party of twelve blows in at dusk with much cold air from riding. Chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Douglas of Lake Forest, they are Helen Bell and the Atkin sisters, Margot and Adelaide of Winnetka, several other girls and men.

The dinner is informal, served at various tables. Sports wear is universal. Games are the thing at night: contract, backgammon, and pingpong. But the house party sits cozily on the floor round the fire and plays a game of written questions and answers. Gay shrieks at the results.

Parties from Lake Forest.

Sunday is fair, with golden streaks of light and blue-gray shadows. Thin ice covers the ponds in the meadow. The curling match is impossible. More riding, in groups of two, four.

At noon a party of fourteen comes in from Lake Forest with Mr. and Mrs. J. Hampden Winston. It is a lively lot of people, and Mr. and Mrs. Earle Reynolds are the guests of honor, as they are going away to California forever and a day. But such is life these days: changes and more changes.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Corson Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hoving, and, in short, a whole big tableful, while in a smaller party are Mr. and Mrs. Newton Perry and Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Reid. A glimpse of Vickie Baum Meeker and Susie Cramer tied firmly to a roadster suggested that Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Cramer and Arthur Meeker Jr. were lunching, and they were. The lunching crowd had hardly got itself off to town when tea hounds began to come in, settling themselves round various fires and tables. In short, Chicago society finds the simple life good. Eats is up.

A Story Book Town.

Saturday afternoon we buzzed over to Geneva, most enchanting little town of Illinois. On the way, round the corner from the club, is White Gates, the farmhouse residence of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Monroe. All white, a two storied farmhouse with wings and many windows, it is a perfectly delightful place, full of Chinese treasures.

Geneva is a story book town. Each lovely little house in its wide streets has a personality all its own. Walter Frazier and Howard Raftery, together and separately, have made over so many cottages into enchanting villinos that the whole community has a definite air of elegance. But wait! We were taking tea with Mrs. Raftery Sr. in that widely known house of hers, a sort of compound of small houses full of the world's lovely things.

Over a paved court into a long room where many people were wandering; here and there on other levels were other rooms; vistas of a distant terrace, of pale green walls hung with period mirrors, old paintings, prints. Here a divine English chair, there an agitating table. A fire glowing on the hearth. Chinese rooms, a suite full of chic clothes, another with oriental furs. No beginning and no end to this emporium. Even a bookshop.

An Enchanting Person.

Over all presides Mrs. Raftery. Here is personality plus, an enchanting person, tall, slender, humorous. We sat for tea in a circle. Dorothy Aldis had been out the day before reading from her collections to eighty-four lunchers from the entire countryside. They said that poetess was lovely to look at, and her manner of reading her versified thoughts was unique. Mary Meeker Cramer is to be the next attraction at the emporium, when another gala lunch will be done in her honor. Saw ever so many at Geneva: Mrs. Harry Cook, Mrs. Holbrook Clarke, Mrs. Arthur Pope.

Anne Forsythe, former political secretary of Mrs. Ruth Hanna Simms, is also taking up her abode in Geneva—and going into trade. She has selected a quaint site on the river and will there open a tearoom in June. Howard Raftery is knocking the small estate and cottage into shape for her use.

Mr. Sachs Again.

Last week was a rather good week, too. The first of Lent, one had a choice of a plethora of lectures. I had to choose between "Decorative Unity of Art in the Middle Ages," by Francis H. Taylor, curator of the Worcester Art museum, and Maurice Sachs' second talk at the Arts club on "The Decade of Illusion." I chose the latter. Again a crowded scene.

Sitting next to me was a clever French woman who had started Mr. Sachs on his mad career as a popular lecturer. He had been a picture salesman at Knoedler's in Paris, thus having many contacts with artists of renown, and she it was who suggested that he capitalize those contacts and talk.

The speaker gave us Marcel Proust, André Gide, Jean Cocteau. Everybody opened an attentive ear when he said that Proust's books were very much worse than D. H. Lawrence's and others that were banned in this country. But Proust had established such an alibi that terrific writings like "Cities of the Plain" were sold over the counter while the censors never batted an eyelid.

Of Gide, his puritanical appearance was an amusing sketch; also his extremely rococo ending to letters: "Yours attentively," or if he wished to be very empressé, "Most attentively yours." Proust's teas at dawn with his women friends and his visits to Maurice Sachs' own grandmother, Mme. Strauss, extended in interesting lethargy on her chaise longue, were marvelously projected. Also this exotic lady's trips en ville weekly to buy gloves and chocolate.

Felt quite as if I had been in Paree afterwards. Specially on seeing Mr. and Mrs. John Storrs, also Mr. Wibbels, friend of Mr. Sachs, and Harold F. McCormick laughing heartily at all the jokes. Also Mrs. Ralph James, Mrs. George W. Dulany, Mrs. John Senior, Mrs. Joseph Adams, Mrs. Arthur Bissell, the sisters Shreve Badger and Alfred Shaw in black with much white ruffling. Also Mrs. Gerstenberg, who had a lunch party, and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Cramer and Arthur Meeker Jr.

Pictures of the Riviera.

Another thing of last week was Burton Holmes on Corsica and the French Riviera. He is drawing amazing houses this year, and his pictures are grand, with ever himself en profile in the near foreground.

However, Burton Holmes is good looking [except the beard] and smartly dressed, and his pictures taken aboard the Paris disclosed my neighbor, Louise Dewey, and her liveliest dimples surrounded by a bevy of young men against a background of Atlantic ocean. In a large group, glimpses of Mrs. Dewey's sleek black head, demurely bent. And in a cocktailing party, a former citizen and cotillion leader, John B. Kitchen. John B. Kitchen, one might say, was the Howard Gillette of æons of time ago, and he almost got through life as a bachelor, such a hardy perennial was he. But he did not escape. Mrs. Kitchen was shown in the picture.

Mr. Holmes' high spots of the Riviera, backless pajamas, snaps of great belles, pictures of Antibes and Saint Tropez, the new haunt of high jinks of high fashion, and Monte Carlo with its gambling palaces, were all entrancing.

Two Nice Parties.

The presence of Frederick Bulkley Tuttle in a box portended that his annual supper party to Burton Holmes was set for that evening, and it was. Among the guests who followed Mr. Tuttle down Michigan avenue to his large, mid-Victorian bachelor abode were Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Loesch, Miss Nellie Carpenter, and Miss Emily Larned, where they supped late and merrily.

Another well done party of last week when I met Burton Holmes and also Mr. Tuttle was a Drama league breakfast in the Drake ballroom. An interesting feature of this party was when the entire company of Irish Players marched in, two by two, to the speakers' table, all with merry little twinkles in their eyes. I adored the speech of Arthur Shields, a slender chap whose prose flowed from his lips with a beautiful rhythm like poetry.

The Drama league still distances all competitors at giving its large membership a good time. Mrs. William Wright, Mrs. Welsh Dickinson, Mrs. Louis Boysen, Mrs. Huston Johnson, Mrs. William Yager, Mrs. Frank Loesch, and Mrs. Stephen Browning were among those at breakfast that I chanced to see.

MISS HELENE HOLLANDER.

When Chicago Was Young

Mid-Victorian Days in the Mid-Continent

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, March 11, 1882.

DEAR JULIA: I wonder whether you have had a telephone installed in your house yet. It occurs to me to ask because Will has just had one put in his office. He finds it such a great convenience I am glad he decided to go to the expense. The telephone list is quite a long one now—2,610 subscribers, I am told—so Will is able to speak to many people over the wire instead of writing or sending a messenger when he has business with them. He has talked a little of having one put in our home, but it seems rather an extravagance when Michael is here to run errands and take us out to perform them. I think we shall wait for that.

I was interrupted there by a call from General and Mrs. Philip Sheridan. The general is looking very well, in spite of his more than half century. He has just had a birthday, his fifty-first, which was celebrated by a banquet at the Union League club given by the Loyal Legion. I think it touched him very much. He spoke with great appreciation of the men who had planned it, and I think his call was in acknowledgment of Will's part in it.

Will responded to the toast, "The Days of Yore," and Gen. A. C. McClurg told me when I saw him today in Jansen, McClurg & Co.'s store that Will made quite a hit with his speech. Gen. Sheridan told me, too, that I should be proud of my husband's eloquence.

Sandy and Martha went last night to hear Oscar Wilde again. Will derided them for their choice of speakers, but now that Martha is to be a bride in June the subject of homemaking is of prime importance to her and she couldn't be persuaded to remain away. The subject of the lecture was "Exterior and Interior Decoration," and Martha took a tiny notebook with her to jot down the pearls of wisdom which might fall from the speaker's lips.

He said, first of all, he would advise a red brick house, since it was warm in color and delightful to look at. He approved of the Queen Anne type of architecture. ("Queen Anne front and Mary Anne back," Will quoted at that). He would not have any castiron ornaments on the railing, nor an iron knocker, but thought a brass knocker was in good taste.

He would not hang pictures in the hall, except in a very stately mansion, for the hall is usually only a place of passage. An oak chest for cloaks and a tasteful hatrack, with some chairs, would complete the furnishing. He said there should be no stuffed birds in the hall. He was emphatic about this.

Ceilings should never be papered. It gave the feeling of living in a paper box. Candles were better than gas for lighting, but if one must use gas, then have side brackets rather than a chandelier. Isn't that strange—not to have a chandelier?

I must not write more tonight.

Yours lovingly,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Telephones in Chicago in 1882 numbered 2,610; today there are 820,139.

Mrs. F. P. Burgett, mother of Mrs William E. R. Smith of Evanston, who recently celebrated her 88th birthday, sends us a chatty letter telling of her early life in Illinois. She writes: "It has been my fortune to see a number of noted people. I saw Abraham Lincoln twice — once addressing a large crowd in Knox county, in 1859; once in debate with Stephen A. Douglas. Gov. Yates of civil war fame was another I saw. Gen. John A. Logan, when on a political canvass after the civil war, was entertained at my father's home. I laugh even yet over the naive remark of a small brother of mine at the breakfast table. A fine beefsteak was served, and Gen. Logan was helped twice, when a small voice piped up: 'Ma, that man is going to eat all the meat.'

"Ma was mortified and Gen. Logan laughed."

is one of the most popular of the younger set and a jolly good looking girl, too.

It has been a long time since the Countess Alexandro Mercati has been a visitor in town, but April will see the former Mrs. Newbold Leroy Edgar in our midst. It was in December of '26 that the former Marie Manice married Count Mercati, whose name came into prominence when Michael Arlen, the one time rage as an author, met and married Mercati's daughter, the Countess Atalanta Mercati. Since her marriage Marie has lived abroad, mostly in Paris, with a residence in the Quai d'Orsay.

Count Mercati's first wife was also an American, Harriet Wright of Cleveland, who, following her divorce from the count, married Baron Emmerich von Pflugl. Besides Mrs. Arlen there is a son, Count Leonardo Mercati, who for a time was engaged to Louise Iselin.

Certainly Gotham will be glad to see Countess Mercati.

Then there is the job of throwing and tying him. Betty Offield is at the corral every day to practice. At the last rodeo she, with the Misses Eleanor and Frances Buck, actually succeeded in hanging on and throwing and tying the calf. No time was kept.

Daughters of Sweden Plan Benefit Concert

Funds Derived to Be Used to Maintain Scholarship, Aid Augustana Hospital.

By Ruth DeYoung.

ANOTHER young woman, scholastically ambitious but financially handicapped, will be given an opportunity for study at the University of Chicago as the result of the concert Goeta Ljunberg, prima donna soprano of the Royal opera, Stockholm, and the New York Metropolitan opera, is to sing at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Orchestra hall.

The American Daughters of Sweden are sponsoring the concert and a good share of the proceeds will go to the support of the scholarship fund maintained to promote the study of Swedish and to give a deserving young woman, one of whose parents are of Swedish descent, a chance for college training.

Miss Dorothy Charlotte Olson is this year's honor student at the University of Chicago. In 1931 Miss Ethel Swanson won the award and the year before Miss Ingrid Ostrom.

Hospital to Benefit.

The remainder of the proceeds from this afternoon's performance will go to help Augustana hospital, which, like many another institution of its kind, has felt the heavy hand of the depression. Augustana hospital is maintained by the Illinois conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Augustana synod. Its purpose is to care for the sick whether or not they are able to pay.

Mrs. Othelia Myhrman, president of the American Daughters of Sweden, will be present at Orchestra hall this afternoon. Mrs. Myhrman has just been appointed chairman of the woman's division for Swedish day, June 19, at A Century of Progress. And during the International Congress of Women to be held in Chicago in July Mrs. Myhrman, with other members of the organization, will be hostesses to Dr. Selma Lagerlof, the Swedish author.

New View of Chicago.

It will be interesting to note Dr. Lagerlof's reactions to Chicago this summer, since her novels, "Jerusalem" and "The Holy City," were inspired by Chicago of the '80s. They had their inception in the story of a colony founded in the Holy Land by a band of religious enthusiasts who migrated there from the old Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church.

The American Daughters of Sweden, one of the largest Swedish organizations in Chicago, was founded to bring together women of this nationality in cultural and civic endeavor. Meetings are held the third Tuesday of each month at the Drake hotel.

Mrs. Rena Elrod, Mrs. John A. Linn, and Mrs. Mary Lawrence are vice presidents; Mrs. Henry O. Nickel, Mrs. Charles P. Wik, and Miss Hildur Soderbeck are the secretaries, and Miss Bessie Burnson is the treasurer. Miss Alma Swane serves the group as historian.

Municipal Art League Valued Asset to City

Through Women's Club Affiliations It Reaches 75,000 Persons Here.

By Eleanor Jewett.

FROM the time of its founding the Municipal Art league has run a straight course, continuing to be an unfaltering advocate of and a consistently constructive agent for the best in Chicago. It has built up through the years a brilliant and representative collection of paintings. It has repeatedly concerned itself with projects which were for Chicago's betterment. In spite of the eruptive years, which are its immediate background, the Municipal Art league can point with pride to its steadfast stand for a maintenance of taste and standards that know no lowering.

A greater number of women's clubs are associated with the Municipal Art league. It can reach through its affiliations something like 75,000 women. Through its lectures, talks, and other social activities the league keeps its members informed of the most important developments in Chicago art. This winter there have been a number of teas held in the homes or studios of various artists and there has been a greater energy expended in bringing the membership into intimate and personal contact with the men and women who are painting our pictures.

Demands Beauty, Intelligence.

The Municipal Art league is frankly a conservative body tuned to traditional art. It stands frankly and openly for the best in sound painting and sculpture. It demands beauty, intelligence, and craft before it will give its approval to no matter what kind of creative work is under discussion. In these times of uncertain values it is a sturdy rock by which to drop anchor.

The Muncipal Art league gives two prizes each year in the Chicago Artists' show at the Art institute. The one this spring was given to Karl A. Buehr for "Portrait of Arthur Cummings Jr." The second prize, which each year is awarded to a Chicago artist not represented in the Municipal Art league collection, has just been given by post card ballot of the league's members to "Babette," by Othmar Hoffler. This painting was decidedly one of the outstanding paintings in the exhibit. It is a beautifully handled composition of a French mother supervising her little girl's bath, a theme that Mary Cassatt has often done justice to, but never more charmingly than has Mr. Hoffler in "Babette."

Cultural Asset to City.

The Renaissance society of the University of Chicago is another thoughtful organization of persons who feel a close kinship and a quickened intellectual interest in art. It does, however, hold far other ideals and standards than the Municipal Art league. It has changed in character to an important extent during the last few years and its leaders now are deeply concerned with the questionable significance of modernism. In the Renaissance society there are those who practice as well as preach, and some of the illuminating exhibits of recent seasons have been from the brush of its painter members.

Sincerity should be recognized wherever met, and the Renaissance society is sincere. In the exhibition gallery, 205 Wieboldt hall, 1050 East 59th street, many pertinent and brilliant exhibits are held. Lectures and music are splendidly organized and supported and it may easily be said, without possibility of contradiction, that the Renaissance society is a cultural asset to Chicago art life.

The UPHILL ROAD By Rupert Hughes

The Story So Far:

At the behest of her father Dicey Wayne flies from Paris to London to see Oliver Treadgold and advise him to return to America, where his mother is ill. Dicey and Oliver, quarrelsome friends since childhood, disagree over his decision to stay in England and settle down as a country gentleman. She snubs Lord Mulgrave in London. On her way to America she learns that her father's chain of banks has failed.

INSTALLMENT II.

Overwhelmed.

AFTER making sure that Dicey's ship was really on its way west Treadgold had decided to call on Mulgrave at his flat and apologize for her. He bought a number of English weeklies to fortify him against the long journey home to London, for he was thinking of London now as home, and it fattened his pride to picture himself an English squire scattering seeds of kindness in the form of guineas. He breathed deep with joy at the thought that he need not fret about money as everybody else was doing. He said a silent prayer of thanks to his father putting a fortune in the care of Guilford Wayne, who had deposited, and would deposit, a noble revenue to his account every month. He had opened an account in a London bank and he decided that he would transfer the bulk of his money to his new home. He did not know how much money he had in England. He was nearly as careless as Dicey about keeping his check book written up to date. What did it matter?

He opened one of the illustrated weeklies and lost himself in the pages devoted to the offerings of establishments whose owners could no longer live up to their pasts. The pictures excited him, the text made him hungry:

County seat to be sold; 1,200 acres. The early XVIII. century residence faces south and is seated in a grandly timbered park . . . about 25 bedrooms and dressing rooms, 8 bathrooms, and offices . . . Ample stabling, home farm bailiff's house . . . four tennis courts; rose, shrub, and wild gardens . . . Trout fishing, shooting, hunting, golf.

Another one boasted:

Exceptional residential estate of about 2,000 acres; Elizabethan residence of historical interest . . . Excellent shooting. Exceptionally high birds . . . Trout fishing.

And yet how petty that was against this:

Splendid sporting estate of about 1,600 acres. XVIII. century house. Approached by winding carriage drive through grandly timbered undulating park land . . . large lounge hall, drawing room, dining room, billiard room, library, schoolroom, gunroom, housekeeper's room, servants' hall, and complete domestic offices. Above are some 20 bed and dressing rooms and three bathrooms . . . Garage for eight to ten cars . . . stables of six stalls and two loose boxes, coach house and groom's room, coachman's cottage, gardener's cottage. . . . The woods, which afford splendid shooting, are capable of holding a large head of game and are intersected by magnificent broad shooting rides and are noted for their high birds.

If he lived there he would be an exceptionally high bird himself. Yet there was another whose "lovely timbered grounds include wide spreading lawns, a wooded islet, water garden, swimming pool, hard and grass tennis courts, miniature gallops, etc." Should he be grandiose, or gentle and serene?

Reaching London he had the luck to find Lord Mulgrave at home, and his apologies for Dicey were accepted with such good grace that he asked Mulgrave's help in the agony of selection among so many Edens. Mulgrave was a trifle ill at ease until, by the happiest of chances, Treadgold pointed out one bargain in beauty and dignity that he placed among the most captivating. It turned out to be Mulgrave's own estate advertised under the name of the agents.

"Hullo!" said Mulgrave. "Fancy your fancying my ancestral cottage!"

"Yours? Why the devil didn't you tell me you had a castle to rent?"

"O, it didn't seem quite the thing to unload our troubles on you. And I'm afraid our place is not very large, only sixteen bedrooms. It has several bathrooms, however; central heating, company's water, electric light, and a telephone. The view isn't half bad, really. Shooting, fishing, tennis. But the taxes have grown so abso-bloody-lutely murderous that it's quite beyond us to keep it up. I'm quite in the mood to make you a present of the damned thing before we starve to death."

"Are the birds high?"

"Exceptionally."

"Then I'll take it. How much do you want for it?"

"Would you mind taking that up with the agents?"

"Could I have a look at it?"

"You could."

"Tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow."

IT was the white peacock that won him over, the white peacock on the lawn and the sooty slavey in the kitchen. While Lady Aurelia was showing him the castle with its numberless rooms she included a visit to the high kitchen. As they peered into the servant's hall she heard the scullery maid whisper to the cook that the strynge gentleman was cruel handsome. "E's 'andsim, anyw'y. No daht abah it! He's crewil 'andsim!"

Treadgold probably overheard her, too; or else he was carried away by her fidelity to the slaveys he had seen on the stage. This one was just the type, exactly the toothless, hissing young hag with the smutty face. She might have been written by Dickens, Treadgold said to himself, and he resolved to keep her if ever he took the place. For no evident reason he pressed half a sovereign in her hand as he walked past her, with an effect almost fatal when she slowly realized that it was gold, not copper, burning in her palm.

But it was the white peacock that finished the conquest the sooty slavey began—not to mention, of course, the charm of Lady Aurelia, who might have been one of Sir Peter Lely's beauties come to life.

The only suspicious thing about Mulgrave Towers was its incredible cheapness. The asking price for the leasehold was so low that Treadgold thought he ought to volunteer a higher offer. But he was afraid that Lady Aurelia and her brother might think he was trying to slip them a tip or something.

He was longing to possess this castle and its roomy green domain. He was thinking how majestically beautiful Lady Aurelia was, how venerable in her youthfulness, like the ivy, bright and graceful and young on its ancient stems, as old as spring and as new. The ancientness of the perennial freshness hereabout was a quality America could never vouchsafe. He thrust a hand wrist deep, elbow deep, into the ivy that clothed the walls with a thick pelt. He revered the noble hedges of yew—he supposed they were yew. On the silver charger of water at the end of a softly sloping lawn a few swans let their white gondolas drift, sleepily as if the afternoon light were moonlight.

And then the white peacock! He had never seen nor heard of one before. As he emerged from the feudal dusk of the castle to the sky and the sunlight and the pools of shade under the old, old trees the white peacock seemed to salute him, mounting haughtily with precise, crisp steps a slant of stones from the broken portico of a ruined chapel. At the top he turned and, lifting the huge folded fan of his tail, whipped it wide into a full moon of snowy lace on a lattice of quill; a burst of frozen fireworks in white, white plumage, unbelievably exquisite and impossible; frost, fire, feathers, ostentation, simplicity, magnificence, meekness.

THE white peacock made up Treadgold's mind for him, exploiting his beauty in every angle like a pantomimic danger, while the afternoon ended at a tea table spread under a pavilion of leafy boughs.

Finally Lady Aurelia and Lord Mulgrave rode back to London with Treadgold through the slow retreat of twilight. As his car rolled into the long straightaway between the lofty oaks his last glances swept the place with envy. It was the home he would have chosen, had now chosen, from all the world; the swans, the yew, the ivied walls. The white peacock on the toppled chapel flung out his white fan again and croaked what Treadgold interpreted as au revoir! He waved his hand and called back, au revoir! There was no wiser prophet to whisper to him:

"Fill your eyes with these beauties, man. You'll never see them again!"

He dropped his guests at their lodgings and went on to his hotel.

The next day he paid Mulgrave's agents a hundred pounds to hold the castle while the intricate papers were being drawn up. Then he went about London buying personal comforts and luxuries to enhance the somewhat obsolete modernities of Mulgrave Towers, or Treadgold Towers, as he began to call them. He ordered at his tailor's a whole trousseau of things for a country gentleman. As he was beating his wits to think of things to buy to complete his comfort he saw a placard advertising a current dog show and it made him homesick.

"Let's go to that dog show," Treadgold exclaimed. "I might find something I'd like."

"I fancy you'll find our place a trifle overdogged as it is," Mulgrave protested, sick of Treadgold's spendthrift drunkenness.

"But I'd like one of my very own. Come along and give me your advice."

"I don't know one dog from another. But my sister's keen on canines."

"Let's take her along if she's free."

It needed no urging to lure Aurelia to a dog show and she met them at the entrance to the exhibit. The great hall had the sound of a sea swept cavern; it was one uproar of kennel emotions. It seemed that every imaginable sort of dog was proclaiming every conceivable passion, rage, love, jealousy, pride, shame. Treadgold wanted to buy dozens of pets—from the huge old English sheep dogs, whose eyes were lost in the hay stacks of their own wool, to the tiniest Pomeranian flower, which might almost be worn for a buttonhole bouquet.

Suddenly he decided to buy no dog at all today. Tomorrow, perhaps. Tomorrow was always the better day for doing things. Life was a crowded bill of fare thrusting at him unnumbered delicacies. He could afford any or all of them, but choice was an anguish of exertion. He was far too young for such senility, yet nothing interested or excited him for long any more. Though he looked everywhere for some new temptation, his jaded palate was dyspeptic with overfeeding. His eyes were miserably weary for such young eyes. He could not know that he would soon find plenty of excitement in a dazzling abrupt change to an existence whose motto would be "root, hog, or die."

As he was leaving the dog show his attention was caught by a breed he had never seen before. Its unknownness and its oddity were its sole attraction, for it was neither grand nor exquisite. He checked his companions with a "What on earth is that?" Lord Mulgrave screwed his monocle into his screwed-up face and answered in phrases that rather pleased him, for he was as eager to learn American slang as Treadgold to unlearn it:

"You can search me, but gosh, they're cute, ain't they, what?"

"Quite too adorable," said Lady Aurelia.

They drew nearer to a small colony whose cards described them as "Welsh Corgis." Their owner slumped in his chair, dozed while all his dogs but one kept their eyes glued on him as if he were their god. One Corgi, of a deep sable color, leaned as far out as his leash would let him, his long nose tremulously savoring Oliver Treadgold, his eyes beseeching a word, a caress, perhaps a flake of biscuit, but, above all, adoption.

TREADGOLD whirred the leaves of the catalog to the number of the exhibit to learn what a Corgi might be. He read bits aloud to Mulgrave and his sister:

"These fascinating treasures come from the wildest, remotest regions of Wales. They are referred to in the laws of 1000 A. D. . . . probably known before Roman times . . . one Welsh name for them is Ci Llathen (however you pronounce it) or 'the yard-long dog.' They are multum in parvo, much dog in a small space . . . very low on the ground . . . big ears . . . alert and gentle eyes . . . white shirt, white feet, white tail-tip . . . keep themselves clean as cats . . . wisest of one-man dogs . . . Welsh farmers use them for driving cattle and mountain ponies, whose heels they nip, then crouch low to escape the kick . . . fearless watchmen, polite to everybody, but utterly devoted to one master. . . . Welsh legends are filled with stories of their bravery, wit and loyalty. The Corgi is the watchful helper of people in lonely places."

As if he knew that his biography was being read, the sable coated Corgi still yearned out toward Treadgold:

"That's me! I'm yours. You're mine! Don't leave me!"

Treadgold closed the catalogue and read the dog's sable eyes, their color in strangely perfect tone with his coat. There was a hint of dachshund in his design, but something Welsh in his stocky compactness, his frankly yeoman solidity. Treadgold loved the aristocracy, but he loved the peasantry, too. It was the middle class soul he hated; perhaps because he had one and was fighting against it. For, snob that he was, he had no real self-esteem—as yet.

LADY AURELIA had realized at once that his outspoken disloyalty to his own country was really a sense of inferiority in himself, his own self had not found itself. Lady Aurelia felt sorry for him. She may have scented a romance in the offing. How it would solve all her mother's and her own desperate problems if she should marry a Yankee plutocrat, especially as young and cruel handsome a one as this!

But the American was thinking now only of the Welsh dog whose velvet ears he was stroking. He was already planning to have a flock of sheep on his estate and let the Corgi herd them, but the owner woke with a lurch and a quick resentment of the stranger's familiarity, perhaps a trace of jealousy at his dog's flirtation with a foreigner.

He gentled very slowly before Treadgold's impulsive attack:

"Is this dog for sale?"

"What isn't?"

"How much?"

"That's another matter."

"All right. I'll pay it. Can I take him with me?"

"But the dog show isn't over."

"But the prizes in this class have been awarded. I see that my dog didn't get one."

"Your dog?"

"My dog! But I've got to take him now. It's the last day of the show. What's to prevent?"

"Well——"

The breeder put forward an outrageous price as a starting point for descent. Treadgold would not stoop to haggle. He did not need to. At least he thought he did not. He said:

"Taken! How much for the leash? What do I feed him?"

There was some delay about providing a pedigree, writing down the diet and getting permission for the dog's release, but at last the long, low rakish sable yardstick went from his bench into Treadgold's arms and accepted them as his home. His nationality was whatever Treadgold's might be.

His name was spelled "Glewllwyd Gavaelfawr." The American would not even attempt its pronunciation. All he knew of Wales was the old English nursery slander:

"Paddy was a Welshman, Paddy was a thief."

So thenceforth his friend was called "Paddy." He took Paddy to his big English car and Paddy selected the front seat alongside him as his own. Lord Mulgrave and his sister sat in the back and Paddy endured their praises and their caresses patiently, but with an eye on his master to make sure that he did not mind. He was plainly relieved when the guests were dropped at their lodgings in town, and the two Treadgolds could be alone together. When the dog was not worshiping the man he was casting disdainful glances at everything they passed.

Treadgold's rooms at the Savoy were on the main floor, overlooking the Thames, and he wrapped the dog in his overcoat to make sure that nobody would try to prevent his entrance. He would have left the hotel, or offered to buy it, rather than leave his friend outside, but no one interfered with such a well paying guest.

Though Paddy was not used to palatial splendors, he accepted brocades and velvets as a matter of course, assuming, of course, that they belonged to his divinity. There were a few embarrassing and easily imagined incidents before he learned the rules; one of them came when Treadgold ordered in tea for himself with a special dish for the Corgi. Paddy made no objection to the waiter's entrance with the table, since contributions were welcome to his thrifty Welsh soul, but when, after tea, the waiter came back and, picking up the table, started out with it, Paddy's teeth went instanter to the man's Achilles tendon. Treadgold whooped with laughter to see Paddy bite, then squat at once to evade the backward kick. The squealing waiter's forgiveness was quickly purchased. Money can poultice almost any wound.

RULES and regulations of every sort melted before Treadgold's money, the universal solvent. Rules and regulations are for the inconvenience and discipline of the poor and pull-less. Treadgold knew this and soared over them as lightly and delightedly as he took walls and fences on his hunter when he rode to the hounds. It would not be long now before he was off his high horse and very much afoot, then he would have to obey in all meekness those insulting legends! "Keep out! This means you!"

But yet awhile, while he had it, he flung his money far and wide and, like Cyrano de Bergerac, took artistic pleasure in the grace of the gesture, never realizing that his magic purse had already lost its refilling powers. He would soon be repenting every easy gesture as a criminal, irretrievable wickedness—every one except the purchase price of that dog's dogged love.

In the evening—the very evening when Dicey in mid-ocean was learning she was a pauper—when it came time to dress and go out to a dinner with certain high hats who could be useful to him, Treadgold sent a telegram alleging a sudden illness. He was sick of people. He smoked a bulldog pipe and pretended to read, but he was really reading his new companion's soul—or whatever you want to call whatever it is that gives a dog his character, his power, his fascination.

PADDY sat on a broad window seat and studied the dark park below and the dim road, the heavy wall, then the mysterious river, the black boats and barges twinned with their shadows, the beaded lights dangling and dancing in the dun water, and, beyond the Thames, the bulked gloom of the city over there on Surrey side.

Paddy assumed that as much of London as he could see, and doubtless all that he could not see, was his master's private property and that the big house in which they dwelt was the master's cottage. So he kept a suspicious eye on the mysterious hired men and women moving about in the gardens and on the millstream, and he was convinced that he ought to be out inspecting them. He was not at all satisfied with some of the indolent goings on below there and he scented conspiracy in the manner of certain couples that sat very close together on the benches. There was a bit too much whispering and conniving. He growled and looked at his master to indicate that he really ought to patrol the front yard and give those people a good sniffing. He had other reasons of his own, but he had learned that, in the amazing new world where he was, astounding demands were to be made on his powers of self-control and selection. He had an appalling number of things to learn, but he was not going to flunk for lack of trying.

What name he gave his master would be a wonderful thing to know. It was easy enough for Treadgold to call him "Paddy," and he soon learned the word with its variations of "Paddykins," and "Paddywhack"; but his cognomen for Treadgold must have been some unspelled, unspellable, unpronounced and unpronounceable thought-term made up of many elements specifying the man's individual smell (and attendant smells of tobacco, shaving soap, starch, toothpaste flavor, hand soap, clothes odors), texture, color, sound, walk rhythm, gesture habits, moods, voice—and dogs know what other complex constituents. Whether the little beast had a religion or not, he had a profound conviction that some power had intrusted to him the protection of this man and had ordained obedience to him.

When finally Treadgold took pity on Paddy he had only to pick up his overcoat to have Paddy dive into it, accept its swaddling and play dead inside its smothering disguise until he was unrolled outside and spilled on the ground. There he indulged in an ecstatic festival dance, protested grovelling affection, then pretended violent hostility, performed a whole repertoire of acrobats and childish stunts almost startling from a person of such dignity in repose.

The restless master found strange soul ease in the dog's love and in his dramatics and spent one of the pleasantest evenings of his life with this four footed flop eared guardian angel whose existence he had not suspected a few hours before. It did not bore him to wait for Paddy's investigation of strange autographs and the registration of his own, and it gave Treadgold untroubled contentment to sit on a bench in the dark, fondling that sable coat and warming his heart at that warm heart. Completely satisfied with life, he smuggled Paddy back into his rooms and asked no more for the time than to be the one-dog man of that one-man dog.

The next morning he was so captivated by his Corgi that he neglected even to unfold the morning paper on his breakfast table. He delayed a further shopping expedition he had planned. Then he decided that he might as well have a go at his neglected check book. He had been doling out money so handsomely that he might have overdrawn. He did not want to give his English bankers a bad impression. Paddy looked over his shoulder as he brought the withdrawals down to date and with difficulty subtracted them. He was pleased to find that he still had a little balance left but not much—for him. He must cable to the Wayne bank to forward him—say, two thousand pounds. He dropped into a club to word his cablegram with proper care.

He loved the mournful bravery of the English and the deep, dim twilight of their clubs. Though it was noon outside, there was gloaming in the Garrick and a twilight hush filled the room where those who were not reading or dozing were talking together in the smothered tones of a funeral party. Among the idlers he noted Mulgrave, lost in the voluminous pages of the Times. Mulgrave had come in while Noll was composing his cablegram and had not seen fit to interrupt him even with a greeting. That was what he loved about the English. They let one alone.

HE watched Mulgrave admiringly until, in folding the paper, he emerged from its tall screen, caught Treadgold's eye and burbled:

"Hullo!"

"Hullo!"

"I see by the Times here that there's quite a bit of a storm at sea. That would catch your lady friend, Dicey, wouldn't it? And toss her about no end, eh?"

"Dicey's no lady and she's no friend of mine. And, if there's a storm she probably started it."

"I had rather a whiff of sulphur when you met at the Savoy."

"You ought to have caught us at the pier. Did we fight? She nearly threw the damned ship at me."

"O, I say! Very likely with both of you on it! It wouldn't be probable!"

"But I wasn't on it. Dicey wouldn't let me go aboard."

"O, in that case she might have managed! But it would have taken a bit of throwing at that. Odd name, Dicey!"

"Comes from Euridice—or however you pronounce it. None of us ever knew. Never tried to find out. Just let it go at Dicey. Lord but I'm glad she's gone to America. Now I've got an ocean between me and both of my tormentors."

"Both? Have you another?"

"Didn't I tell you about Alberta? Alberta Skipway? Why, she's the real reason for my living abroad. It isn't Anglomania as Dicey suspected. It's Albertaphobia. Dicey wants to break my head. Alberta wanted to marry me. And she'd have had me, too, if I hadn't flitted."

"Did you—er-ah—betray her or anything?"

"Betray Alberta? She tried to betray me. Mully, did you ever know one of those girls that goes along the street like a hot stove walking? One of those girls with eyes like torches? She'll die if you don't kiss her and she'll burst into flames if you do?"

"If I've met the type I haven't recognized her."

"You wouldn't. Well, Alberta Skipway was one of those. She took a fancy to me. For a year or two she hounded me with invitations. She's a pretty thing, sweet—too damned sweet. Dancing with her was going on a honeymoon. Everything she'd talk about was love and marriage. Her father was—is still—stinking rich—literally, because he makes such dirty money."

"All money's dirty."

"Yes, but some is dirtier than others. Skipway's was peculiarly unclean. But there was so much of it, it was accepted, like a mountain, as part of the scenery. But I didn't want any of it. I've got enough of my own. I tried to steer Alberta into the arms of nice young fellows who needed her money. But she was determined to have me or nobody. I tried to quarrel with her. Impossible. Very different from Dicey. I've never been able to do anything but quarrel with Dicey. Alberta was so pitiful, so sweet—I don't think I ever spent such uncomfortable hours in my life as I spent with Alberta. It's the strangest, damnedest sensation to be with a girl that loves you and wants you and makes you feel like a cad because you can't return the compliment. I suppose women get a lot of that when unattractive men love them, but it's no fun for a man. I finally gave up and ran, put an ocean between Alberta and me."

"And now, think of it!—she's in America and Dicey's on her way there. And I'm here for keeps, thanks to Dicey's father. Dear old boy! He's the grand old man for your money. Year after year other fortunes have folded, banks have buckled, great houses have tail spinned. But we've been untouched as I told you. Why? Because we've had everything in the hands of Wayne—old Wayne, Inc., we call him. Safe and sound as Gibraltar. No earthquake can touch Wayne, Inc."

"Wayne, Inc.? Isn't that—I rather fancy I saw that name just half a moment ago."

Mulgrave began to rummage the Times. As soon as he turned up what he sought he regretted it.

"Ah, here we are! Humph! Well, God bless my soul! It's nothing—after all—yet, er—perhaps you'd better read it. Have a bracer first?"

Treadgold put out his hand, took the paper, glanced at it carelessly. It was as if, from a distance, he watched the rock of Gibraltar suddenly, silently split, crumble, dissolve in the sea noiselessly as a lump of sugar in a cup of coffee. Gibraltar's absence from the horizon could have changed the whole look of the world for him no more than what he read of the vanishing of Wayne, Inc. With that liberality of space which European newspapers reserve for American disasters, hurricane, fires, crimes, and financial atrocities, the cabled news told in far greater detail the same disastrous news that Dicey had received by wireless in midsea.

NOLL—anybody could call him "Noll" now that he had lost all his money—read the paragraph twice to verify his first dismay. Then the thought broke so loudly that it shook his lips and he cried it aloud:

"But, great God in heaven! Every cent I have on earth is in that company! And my mother's. And Nate's. I'm a pauper, a bleeding——"

"Easy on the foul language, there's men about. You bloody Amiricans have no sense of decency."

Mulgrave was trying to pretend anger to conceal his most embarrassing sense of pity. Noll did not hear him. He was maundering.

"One thing's certain: I've got to go back and see if I can't save a little something, do something for my mother at least. I'll have to go to work!"

Against this last horror Mulgrave proffered what consolation he could:

"I shouldn't fret about work. As I understand it, there's no work to be had over there any more."

"Good God a'mighty! Worse and more of it. I owe a lot of bills. I was going to cable for a lot of money. And now there's no place to cable to."

He whispered a sacred name with no thought of prayer. Mulgrave said:

"I shall pay you back the hundred pounds you gave me as an advance on the lease of the castle, of course. I fancy you'll not be needing the castle now, what? If that hundred pounds doesn't pull you out, and if you must be popping, I'll wangle you what you need somehow."

"That's mighty white of you, old man, but I couldn't think of it. I know any number of Americans who would have done that, but I couldn't face them. It's one thing to tap a friend when you have something coming in, but I'm stony broke from now on. I'm like the fellow sentenced to the pen—for life—just from now on. I'm a pauper just from now on. I couldn't take anything from you."

"Don't be a sillier ass than you have to be; I'll be more than glad to ship you home if necessary—if you know what I mean. In fact, there's no end of Amiricans I'd be glad to send home with you."

Noll mopped his brows and shuddered, not so much at his own penury as at a sudden nightmare vision of the vast multitude of Americans he had read about who were waiting in idleness and dismay, nibbling at the crumbs as the only slightly less penurious Americans could spare. Seven million wasn't it—or was it more? His mother was not gaudy in her expenditures, but massive. His brother was a reckless spendthrift.

NOLL had been quietly luxurious, lavish only in his charities, his tips and his gifts, in the flowers he sent, the felicitous graces of his hospitality. Now he could give no more gifts, entertain no more fair ladies and famous men; he could strew no more orchids; he could not even tip the servants and others whose smiles were attached to their palms because their comforts depended on their tips. He could no longer be charitable. This was the last blow; he could toss no more coins. He must seek charity, wait on himself, carry his own luggage, and walk with it.

Mulgrave was so devastated by the spectacle of his friend's desolation that he actually resorted to good counsel, hortatory advice, even to poetry. He leaned forward and gripped Noll's forearm:

"Buck up, my boy. As you Americans say, take it large! Rise to it, if you know what I mean. After all it's all a sort of test, if you know what I mean. A test of the stuff you're made of. What was it that Russian fellow said—Pushkin, wasn't it?"

"I wouldn't know," Noll muttered. "I haven't kept up with the bolsheviks."

"O, this feller was long before our day, one of the old ones. I heard a speaker say once at a banquet something about being a test of a man's mettle or something to be hard hit, and he said that Pushkin—or whoever it was—said it better. Now—let me see if I have it—'The hammer that breaks glass makes steel.' I can hear him now, and standing there and hammering out the words: 'The hammer that breaks GLASS makes STEEL!'"

Small Improvements Increase the Comfort of Your Home

You Can Help Self, Workers by These Jobs

Homemade Ping-Pong Table, Umbrella Rack, Service Desk Prove Practical.

By Louise Bargelt.

DID you ever play a certain little game which is composed of a large number of questions? These questions you must answer honestly and frankly. If you do, then when you turn to the answers when you have finished you will be rewarded, or dismayed, to find just what sort of person you really are!

Now, this same game can be played with your house. You can put it to just such a rigid test and discover how far it measures, or does not measure, up to a 75 or an 80 per cent efficiency test. And as in your character test so in your house test you may be surprised to find that, while in major requirements it is quite "all there," it is a bit lacking in some of the smaller things of life.

Perhaps, for instance, there isn't any really adequate play space in the house. The children may have a room or rooms of their own, but when were children's rooms anything but fully filled rooms, with no space abounding to romp and play games in!

If one can salvage some spot in a basement or an attic therein lies space for a lot of things, space for indoor tennis or ping pong, croquet, tenpins, scenic gold, and so on.

Home Made Game Table.

With ping pong played everywhere and everywhere the vogue it is nice to know, too, that any of us can make or have made a ping pong table of our own. Some sawhorses and some wallboard atop them, a ping pong net and some balls and rackets, and that is all there is to that! Of course, if you have a large table that is fine, but if you haven't a piece of wallboard 4 by 8 feet, mounted on a 2 by frame will also serve. For a pattern take that of a regular court, mark it off and have the nets of curtain nets, the upper and lower edges bound with tape. have lengths of wire bent so that they grip the table and tie the net edges to them.

By segregating a part of the basement for recreation purposes deck shuffleboard can also be played, the numbered court chalked on the concrete, and a sets of disks and pushers completes the outfit.

Tables for odds and ends are always handy around a basement playroom. An old barrel, nicely painted, with a smooth, rounded top makes such a table. Built-in shelves on a side wall will serve as an excellent storage place to house the balls and racquets, the checker boards and checkers, backgammon games, and the like.

Paint Brightens Floor.

As for the floor, just give it a fresh coat of paint if you don't want to go to the expense right now of laying a new basement flooring. [If the floor is quite soiled or if by chance there are any stubborn oil stains on it, scrub it well with a strong, hot solution of washing powder and then with a hose rinse it thoroughly.] The concrete must be dried thoroughly before the painting is done. If your floor happens to be very young still, not a year old, give it two coats, letting the first coat dry before the second is applied. Furthermore, to neutralize the lime in the concrete before you apply any paint at all, wash it in water and zinc sulphate—one part of zinc sulphate to three parts of water.

A light over such a table in the basement is a comfort. But a light over a basement tub is quite necessary! Indeed, having the laundry well and pleasantly lighted makes laundry tasks easier to do.

If you are considering giving your house a few little improvements this spring consider your laundry and its electrical outlets. You want plenty of them, not only as sources of light, but also as sources of heat and power. Sometimes women prefer one ceiling outlet over the trays and another over the clothes washer, and also a convenience outlet for washing machine equipped with porcelain key socket some five or five and one-half feet from floor.

Then, as one sometimes irons while the washer is being used, a convenience outlet for the hand iron or the ironer is advisable. If only one ceiling outlet provides general illumination there should be wall brackets to give plenty of light over work centers. And for safety's sake as well as the comfort of them these lights should be controlled by wall switches.

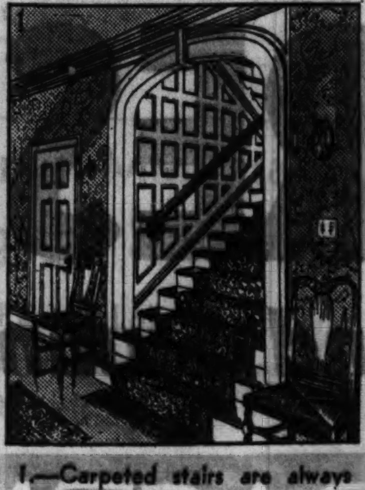
Service Desk Useful.

As for the little planning desk or service desk in the home, we see it appearing with increasing frequency. Sometimes we find it in the kitchen, a handy little utility to make out orders and menus, write checks, and phone for groceries, equipped with plenty of drawer space for bills and recipe books, appointment pads, and the like. Often women like a radio in the kitchen, perhaps on a shelf above the desk, with a loud speaker built in above.

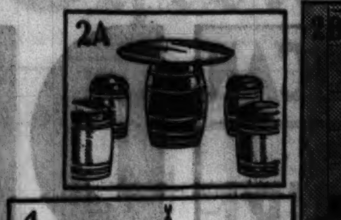
In many of the most modern model kitchens we see this feature incorporated, since so much time, perforce, is spent by the homemaker in the kitchen and music is not only a help to work, but much useful information anent cooking and baking is so frequently broadcast. And with desk, notebook, and pencil handy it is a simple matter to jot down a few notes without seriously interrupting the routine of the meal preparation or risking burned dishes by going into the living room to hear what is being talked about.

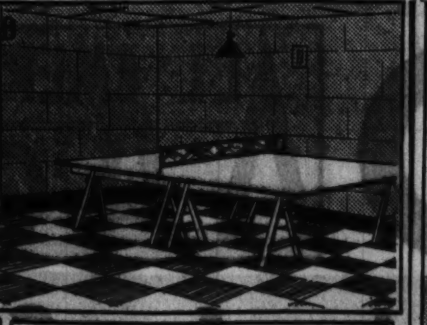
The little desk shown today has been built in at the end of a hall. Hallends are often nonutilized spaces, and if we can install in them some useful bit of furnishing, built in or portable, we have wrested just so much more comfort from our available floor area. Such a desk may be used for any one of a number of services, according to the inclinations of the home mistress. But there are few homes where it would not be found a really useful asset.

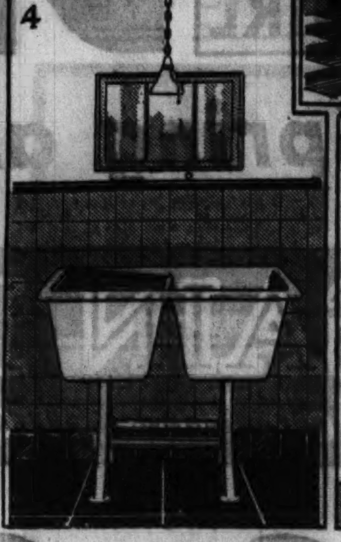
Last, we see a slender umbrella rack installed close to the wall and taking up little space, one way of solving our always difficult umbrella problem. Such a rack could be placed against a wall at the far end of a hall, or in a hall wrap closet or in an outer vestibule. Easy access to it from the front door is one of the essentials in its placing.

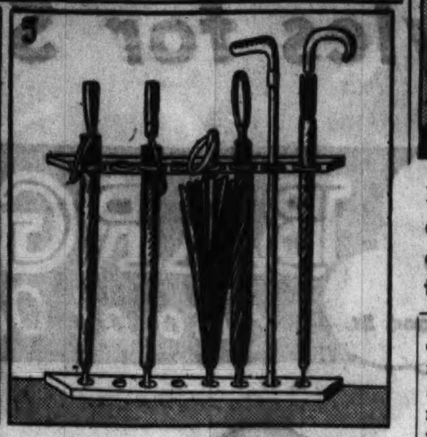


1.—Carpeted stairs are always attractive, and where there are children, a big help in the lessening of noise.









4.—A light over the laundry tubs is an essential in good laundry illumination. Does your laundry need more light?

5.—A slim umbrella rack, installed close to a hall wall or inside a hall closet, helps to solve our umbrella problems.

2a.—Make a little table for the basement playroom from an old barrel, freshly painted, and a polished round board.

2b.—With ping pong played everywhere it's easy making a table from some old saw horses and some fresh, clean wallboard.

Candle, Rose Is Not Ideal Table Vis-a-Vis

At meals taken around a table, the central arrangement of flowers should be either squat or quite tall, never of the height that brings the light on a line with a diner's eyes. These practical considerations can be waived at buffet meals.

Modern Trick Furniture Leads Double Life of Beauty and Practical Usefulness

Pieces That May Be Used for Two Purposes Are Ideal for the Home of Small Proportions.

By Edith Weigle.

FURNITURE nowadays is not only comfortable, good looking and low in cost; it is built in such a practical way that it appeals to every one. One class, especially, is intriguing. It is so-called trick furniture; pieces with a double purpose. We told you a short while ago about the new studio couches and their clever patented devices. And about the love seat that can be turned into a single bed.

The other day we came across a solution to the problem of the living room that has no fireplace. Instead of going to some expense and having a special artificial one designed and built to fill your individual needs, you can now walk into a department or furniture store and buy an extremely good looking one ready made. We saw these make-believe mantels in two State street stores and one Chicago furniture store, priced very reasonably. They were colonial in effect, painted a creamy white and with small raised decorations on the panels.

The one pictured is an example and certainly comes under the head of trick accessories, for it is not only a fireplace; it is a cellarette, as well. In one photograph you see it as it appears in the room; in the other, open to disclose compartments and containers for glasses and bottles.

This portable mantel may be had equipped with eight etched highball glasses, eight etched seltzer glasses and one glass ice tub. The drop front is lined with copper. It is given an antique ivory finish, and the base and facing are black and white marbleized wood.

This mantel is 44½ inches high, the top measures 58½ by 12 inches, and the base 57½ by 22¼, the opening for the logs being 32 inches by 28½ high by 9 inches deep. It's proving popular with bachelors who have small city apartments, and with young married couples.

Brand new are some chic looking dressing tables for the guest room, or for the little dressing room off the entrance hall, for they are made with a center top panel of a colored, mother-of-pearl-like composition that is impervious to spilled perfumes or other liquids and that can be easily cleaned by wiping off with a soapy cloth. This panel matches in color the wood of the dressing table, or contrasts with it.

A green painted style has a green center panel and pretty little painted floral designs on either side. A stunning black model is trimmed with narrow gold lines and is given a center panel of the composition in a yellow-gold shade. Mirrors to match accompany these very feminine little tables. Benches, also.

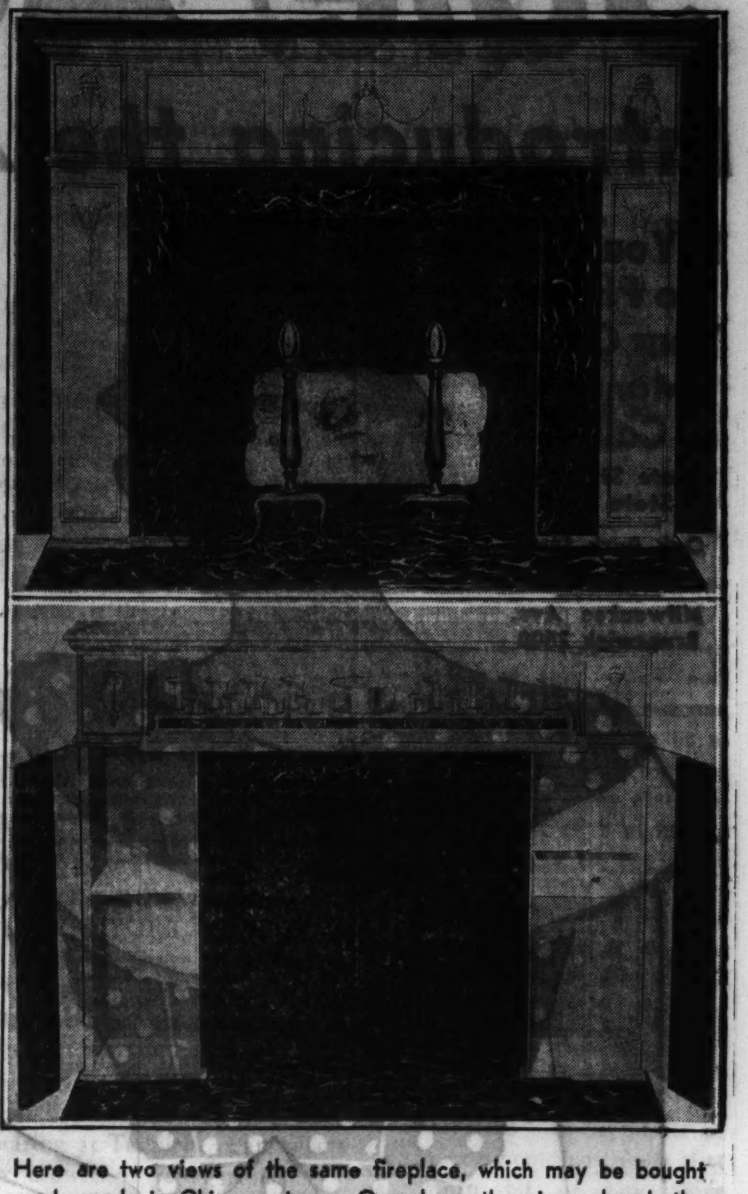
Broad, flat topped maple desks are smart and practical for the masculine study, or the writing corner of a living room. And simply ideal for use with them is a beautifully styled maple comb-back Windsor chair we saw at a Chicago store the other day. Sturdy and artistic, it looks like a regular early American chair, but lo and behold, it revolves. This little trick is sure to make it popular with men and boys.

Favorites with the other sex are the backless chintz covered revolving chairs so convenient for dressing table use. Usually they are given a ruffled edging for trimming.

Cedar chests are too trick for words these days. Gone are the reddish, grained boxes with hinged lids, and in their stead are good looking pieces of furniture; lowboys of mahogany or walnut equipped with a large compartment for blankets, cedar lined, and with one or two lower drawers; ward robe closets of walnut, the interior of finest cedar and filled with sliding trays, drawers, and a place for hanging clothes. Then, there's the type designed for a man, modern in period, and with a center panel that lifts out and up, disclosing a mirror and an open section for hats. Built like a chest of drawers, its cedar interior would never be suspected from its exterior, which is of burled walnut.

We've mentioned the handsome tune-in radio tables, the radio concealed in a mahogany Duncan Phyffe table, or a bedside table, or a pier cabinet, or a satinwood console, but they deserve a place at the top of the list of new trick furniture because they solve the problem of what to do with this instrument in a carefully decorated room. Made by a Grand Rapids firm, these new cabinets are sold at a Chicago store.

Lamps, also, are taking on many trick devices. For instance, there's the old fashioned oil lamp dressed up in such new clothes you'd never recognize it. Did you know that it is now made with a lighting arrangement, a lot like the gas mantle of former days, that produces the same brilliant light from oil that you get from electricity? We would never have believed this unless we had seen it work.



Here are two views of the same fireplace, which may be bought ready made in Chicago stores. One shows the piece closed, the other open to disclose a clever cellarette in the front panels.

Diversities of Types Among Revolutionary Generals Are Depicted in Today's Rotogravure Section

French Noble, Laborer, Pioneer, and Tragic Exile Are Included.

By James O'Donnell Bennett.
(Pictures in rotogravure section.)

ALL types held high command in the American revolution. In more senses than one it was a democratizing war. It made generals out of men from the plough, the forge and the bookstall—like Putnam, Greene, and Knox—and it searched out the qualities of grand seigneurs of the old European régime. It gave exiles immortal glory and it transformed a Jerseyman, who had been an army waggoner, into a great figure in one of the classic fifteen decisive battles of the world.

Those facts are tellingly conveyed by THE TRIBUNE's presentation in this morning's rotogravure section of four illustrious generals of the struggle for independence. For there you see Morgan, one-time day laborer and waggoner; Rochambeau, whom the Jesuits educated and whom his king made a marshal of France; Clark, soldier-pioneer who won an empire with a few hundred men, and Pulaski, brilliant, dashing, tragic figure of a cause to which he gave his life—the Hamlet, in a sense, of the revolution.

We begin the story with—

DANIEL MORGAN

No more solemn sight confronts the pilgrim to the historical memorials of this country than the empty niche of the battle monument on the plain of Saratoga. In three of the niches stand heroic statues of Horatio Gates, Daniel Morgan and Philip Schuyler, the last two of whom contributed decisively to a victory which brought us the life saving alliance with France and which Sir Edward Creasy ranks as one of the "fifteen decisive battles of the world" in his valuable book of that title.

The fourth niche is empty. So it has been since the completion of the monument nearly half a century ago. There, but for his treason, which came three years after the victory, would stand today a statue of Benedict Arnold, who, even more than patient, unselfish Schuyler and Morgan, brave and tireless commander of the deadly riflemen, made Saratoga a decisive event in Creasy's thrilling calendar of 23 centuries—a calendar that takes you from Marathon to Waterloo.

A Wordless Tragedy.

Year in and year out, in sunshine and in storm, the empty niche preaches its awful sermon. Never was an infamy more austerely commemorated. It is a tragedy without words—the tragedy of a great soldier who became the basest of villains. "Better for him," runs a saying on that New York countryside, "if he had been shot in the head instead of the leg on the day of the victory."

Mournfully the pilgrim turns away from the empty niche to find high inspiration in the one that enshrines the figure of stalwart Morgan. And as one gazes, Lowell's lines on Grant come back to mind:

Doer of hopeless tasks which praters
shirk,
One of those still, plain men that do the world's rough work.

His career epitomizes what the new nation was to mean to the plain man—opportunity.

For Daniel Morgan was the rough diamond of the revolution.

At the age of 19 he was a waggoner in the tragic expedition which brave, blundering Braddock led against Fort Duquesne, now Pittsburgh, in the second year of the French and Indian war.

At the age of 45 he was a brigadier general and congressional gold medalist.

In his wild youth he was tippler and gambler in a gang of day laborers. In his old age he was a respected member of congress and a pious Presbyterian.

Hideous Punishment.

Thus was his career all compact of contrasts. Every extreme of fortune that a soldier could experience he experienced. In 1756, during operations which followed Braddock's death, a British officer grossly insulted him and struck him with the flat of his sword. The waggoner knocked him down. Drumhead court-martial and sentence to receive 500 lashes followed. The sentence was executed, "and," said Morgan in his old age to Dr. William Hill, "the flesh on my back hung down in tags."

When the revolution broke out he was 39 years old and had mended his wild ways. Born in New Jersey in 1736, of Welsh stock, he had removed when a lad to Virginia. The colony trusted him and at the news of Lexington and Concord in 1775 made him a captain of riflemen. He fulfilled the trust, marching his company the 600 miles to Boston in three weeks, at the rate of nearly 30 miles a day. In Benedict Arnold's unsuccessful attack upon Quebec in the same year, he penetrated too far into the city and was captured, but by 1777, having been released from his parole, he was back in the war and ready for his great opportunity in both the battles at Saratoga.

"Brave, but Must Die."

In second Saratoga, or Bemis' Heights, which, many persons forget, followed first Saratoga, or Stillwater, by nearly three weeks, he came to a grim decision. Observing that Gen. Simon Fraser and not Burgoyne was the soul of the British troops, he said to his riflemen, "He is a brave man, but he must die." Twelve of Morgan's best marksmen fired and Fraser rode no more from point to point of greatest danger. Throughout the day the fire of Morgan's riflemen—now become, said Gates, "the corps which the army of Gen. Burgoyne are most afraid of"—was so devastating as to inflict upon Burgoyne more than half his losses.

At nightfall Gates said, "Col. Morgan, you have done wonders this day. You have immortalized yourself and honored your country."

"For God's sake, General," responded the rough diamond, "forbear this stuff and give me something to eat and drink, for I am ready to die with hunger."

In 1781 came the battle of the Cowpens in South Carolina, which won Morgan his congressional gold medal. There again his riflemen were the death dealers in what Cornwallis, reporting to London the rout of his brutal cavalry leader, Tarleton, called, "the unfortunate affair." Such, for him, it was, for it delivered one of a series of staggering blows that within nine months were to drive him into Yorktown and force him to the surrender that ended the war.

GEORGE ROGERS CLARK

So recently as last July George Rogers Clark, dead these 115 years, was news matter in Chicago. There was then afoot a plan to change the name of Clark street, long ago christened in his honor and sole memento of him in our city, and to call it throughout its length Broadway. Happily this effort to commemorate in the heart of the real America the shoddiness of a thoroughfare which, in its upper reaches at least, has become a synonym for the cheap and nasty in merchandising and in amusements was squelched.

And it was squelched merely by printing in this newspaper a record of the services of a man who in his lifetime was called "the protecting father of all the early settlements in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, and southwestern Pennsylvania." That meant that he was the ægis of an empire. By his daring campaigns under bitter conditions he saved the northwest to the new republic and fought his way into the 18th century annals of the region we now call Chicagoland.

Virginia Honors Him.

At the great eastern gateway of the University of Virginia in the city of Charlottesville rises that masterpiece of the American sculptor Robert Aitken, the memorial to Clark which the venerated Paul Goodloe McIntire presented, together with many other rich gifts, to his alma mater. It shows Clark on horseback and surrounded by vivid figures of soldiers with whom he fought the war of independence on the western frontier and of Indians whom, partly by menace and partly by infinite tact, he won away from those British commanders who, to the Earl of Chatham's horror, had given them license to burn, pillage and scalp from the Ohio to the Mississippi.

Swiftly, persistently, and over a wide area, Clark made England's unleashing of savage allies upon the western settlements difficult at first and finally impossible. With a force sometimes fewer than two hundred men and never in excess of a thousand he took one strategic point after another and taught the Indians that a power mightier than England was policing the land.

Those achievements Virginia has commemorated not alone in historic Charlottesville but also at a spot three miles outside the city where the Stony Point-Washington highway skirts the farm on which Clark was born one hundred and eighty-one years ago There the Daughters of the American Revolution have erected a bronze tablet thus inscribed:

> NEAR THIS SPOT WAS BORN IN 1752.
> GEORGE ROGERS CLARK,
> HERO OF VINCENNES, WHO, AS A COLONEL IN THE VIRGINIA MILITIA, IN 1777-'79, CONCEIVED, PLANNED, AND ACCOMPLISHED THE CONQUEST OF "THE ILLINOIS COUNTRY."
> ERECTED BY ALBEMARLE CHAPTER, DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, 1925, IN RECOGNITION OF THE INITIATIVE, COURAGE AND BRILLIANT ACHIEVEMENT OF THE GREAT SOLDIER SON OF ALBEMARLE.

Clark — historians now agree that his name is properly spelled without the "e"—was only 25 years old when, in 1778, he began taking key points in our present middle west, thus securing areas which were to be incorporated into the United States by the treaty that ended the revolution.

Helped Whole Nation.

His work had even a larger aspect. For if the British campaigns in Chicagoland had been successful the difficulties of the patriot levies fighting east of the mountains would have been increased to a degree which might have rendered defeat inevitable. But for Clark the British might have subdued the northwest early in the war, and had they subdued it they could have sent their western troops and their Indian allies over the mountains to coöperate with the British commanders operating in the south. Thus Clark performed a double service. He not only saved the northwest. He also helped indirectly to save the original thirteen states from an impact which the armies of Washington might not have been able to withstand.

On July 4, 1778, Clark captured Kaskaskia without shedding a drop of blood. This success was achieved after one of his incredibly swift marches. In six days he forced his way through dense forests and across pathless plains from Fort Massac, ten miles below the present Louisville, Ky., up to Kaskaskia in the present Randolph county of Illinois. During two days of the march his "army" of 175 men was without rations. The moral effect of this capture was great. Instantly British power in our region began to disintegrate.

In the winter of 1779 he marched from the western boundary of Illinois to the western boundary of Indiana—as we of today would designate those boundaries—and captured Vincennes, where now a vast and splendid memorial, erected by the federal government at a cost of a million dollars, is nearing completion.

That victory was won in the face of terrible hardships encountered in crossing icy marshes and streams during a February march of one hundred and eighty miles.

The West's Hannibal.

From early in 1778 until late in 1782—or from his twenty-fifth to his thirtieth year—this man marched and countermarched, fought and administered from Louisville on the south and Kaskaskia on the west to Chillicothe on the east. He was not only a great soldier — John Randolph of Roanoke called him "the Hannibal of the west"—but a great diplomatist, often consolidating his victories and pacifying vast areas not by oppressive measures but by the exercise of tact in handling the populations which he had subdued.

VIMEUR DE ROCHAMBEAU

Old Count Rochambeau strode upon the stage of the revolution in time for the red fire and the grand allegorical tableau of clasped hands and dipping flags that marked the end at Yorktown. He was more a stately than a heroic figure, but because he was the highest ranking French officer in the closing scene his name is remembered. That he felt any consuming ardor for the cause of independence is not true. "I like zeal," he said with one unfavoring eye on the ecstatic Lafayette, "but ardor displeases me."

He came to America in 1780 because Louis XVI. had placed him in command of 6,000 new French levies assigned to fight on our shores his country's war against England. He did his work in a methodical, leisurely way, just as he would have done it had his sovereign commanded him to do it in the wilds of Siberia. For a year he held his troops in Rhode Island, maintaining beautiful discipline and seeing to it that every pound of food they consumed was paid for in gold. His leisureliness—Rochambeau would have called it caution—irked and puzzled Washington who, in those closing months of the war, was saying, "Every day we now lose is comparatively an age."

Caution His Religion.

But caution was Rochambeau's religion and once in looking back on his forty years of service in European wars he wrote to Lafayette:

"Of the 15,000 men, or nearly, who have been killed or wounded under my orders in the most murderous actions, I do not have to reproach myself with having caused a single one of them to be killed for my own account."

And so, in his own way and in his own good time, he safely brought his troops into the great encircling movement by land and sea that locked Cornwallis in Yorktown, and on the night of the storming of the British redoubts he was in the tableau.

He commanded royal troops in the early stages of the French revolution and when the revolution became anarchy he barely escaped the guillotine, partly by his plea that he had stood at the side of Washington in the cause of liberty.

When Rochambeau was nearly 80 years old Napoleon paid him one of those compliments he could phrase so superbly. Surrounded by his generals he received the old man with the words, "Monsieur le Maréchal, here are your pupils."

"They have," Rochambeau replied, "surpassed their master."

Today in the French village of Thoré two elms, two maples, and two redbuds from Mount Vernon shade his grave. The late J. J. Jusserand, long French ambassador to the United States, had them planted. It was like that gentle soul.

CASIMIR PULASKI

The life of Count Pulaski was turbulent, brief, and sad. Commander in chief at the age of 22 in the unsuccessful Polish rising of 1770, he was exiled from his native land by its conquerors. After a few years in the Turkish service he joined Washington in 1777, and so distinguished himself at the battle of Brandywine that congress made him a brigadier general and chief of cavalry.

The lesson on the value of cavalry which he taught our people was his practical contribution to the cause and "Pulaski's Legion" became the model for cavalry organization throughout the army. With it he defended Charleston in 1779, but fell at the unsuccessful attack on Savannah in the same year—a tragic, glamorous and inspiring figure while he lived, and today a bond of union between native Americans and their adopted fellow citizens from Poland.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen
(Nationally Known Stamp Authority)

Mr. Cabeen wil be glad to answer questions concerning stamps. A stamped, self-addressed envelope should be inclosed in case a personal reply is desired.

THE early history of Brazil is commemorated by a series of stamps issued in 1932, the 400th anniversary of the formation of the first Portuguese colony in America. Following the discovery by Columbus of what was thought to be a part of India, the Spanish sovereigns applied to Pope Alexander VI, who was recognized as the arbiter of international disputes, for a decree which would entitle them to share in any lands discovered in the westward search for India. Prior to the time of Columbus, westward exploration had been almost entirely under the auspices of the king of Portugal.

Alexander VI. issued a decree in which all the undiscovered regions of the world were divided between Spain and Portugal at a line fixed by the Treaty of Tordestillas in 1794 at 370 leagues west of the Cape Verde islands, and Spain was given full power to colonize discoveries west of this line while Portugal was limited to lands east of the line.

Portugal Gets Little.

Contrary to all expectations Portugal was very nearly deprived of any part of America, as all of the western hemisphere except a part of the coast of Brazil lay beyond the "line of demarcation."

What later became Brazil was first discovered in 1500 by Vicente Yañez Pinzon, a companion of Columbus on an early voyage, and was reached in 1501 by Pedro Alvarez Cabral. The latter touched the coast on Good Friday and took over the region in the name of the king of Portugal on Easter Sunday.

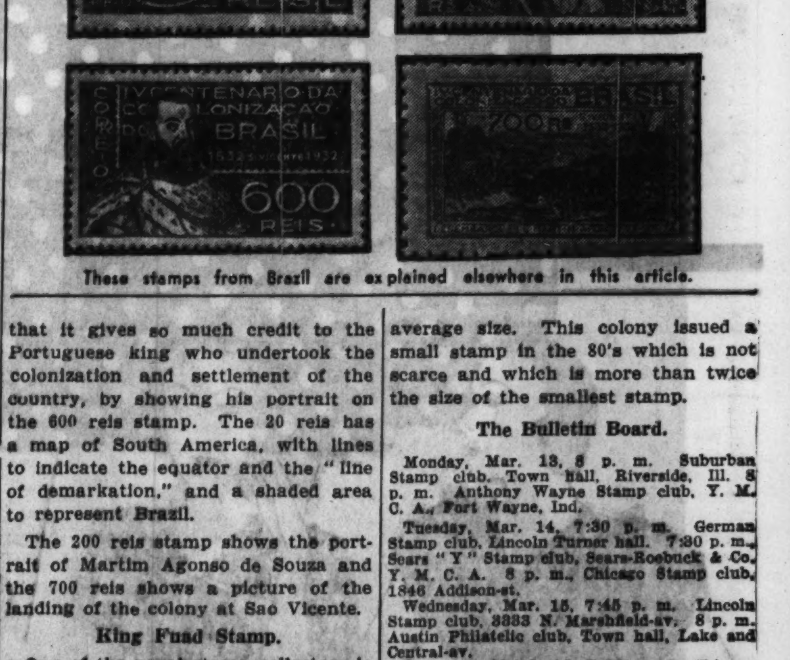
King John III. of Portugal made the first attempt to set up an organized government and a concession was granted to Martim Agonso de Souza who went out personally to select h' grant.

He discovered the Rio de Janeiro [River of January] on the first of that month in 1531 and, sailing up the coast, located his colony on the island called Guaibe. In 1532 the colony was removed to the adjoining island of Sao Vicente from which the first colony derives its name.

Gives Credit to King.

The issue of stamps which commemorates this event is unusual in that it gives so much credit to the Portuguese king who undertook the colonization and settlement of the country, by showing his portrait on the 600 reis stamp. The 20 reis has a map of South America, with lines to indicate the equator and the "line of demarkation," and a shaded area to represent Brazil.

The 200 reis stamp shows the portrait of Martim Agonso de Souza and the 700 reis shows a picture of the landing of the colony at Sao Vicente.



These stamps from Brazil are explained elsewhere in this article.

King Fuad Stamp.

One of the royal stamp collectors is pictured on this stamp from Egypt. Fuad, the king of that historical country is an ardent collector, and the stamps of his country have been been noticably improved since he came to the throne. Among the stamps which interest him are those issued by the Confdrat Stats of Amrica.

Your Questions.

E. P.—The location of the cross on the Red Cross stamps does not affect the value. Since these are bi-colored stamps they are printed in two operations, one for each color, and the chances are that many of the crosses are slightly misplaced, but it is very doubtful if that increases their value.

D. K. Y.—The first stamp issued by South Australia is a valuable stamp but it is by no means the smallest stamp ever issued. In fact it is one of the larger stamps, much above the average size. This colony issued a small stamp in the 80's which is not scarce and which is more than twice the size of the smallest stamp.

Film by W. Somerset Maugham a Satire on English Society

Adapted from Stage Play, It Reveals Low Life in High Places; Gains Its Effects Through Chatter of Characters Rather Than Moralizing.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

After contemplation of Mr. Maugham's ironic window display of her "betters" one suspects that the average virtuous, straight-thinking so-called "middle class" femme will cry with the Pharisee: "Thank God that I am not even as they are . . . !"

"Our Betters," adapted from the play produced unsuccessfully here just after the war with Crystal Herne and Rose Coghlan in the featured roles, is one whose excellencies will be appreciated by the comparative few who value true character analysis and the honest slant at life. To the highly romantic, the sugarly servile, the social climber, and the determinedly blindfolded, Mr. Maugham's uncompromising portrayal of a certain stratum of contemporary society will seem just a series of dirty digs.

Low Life in High Places.

Taken at face value, this picture would undoubtedly be classified as "drawing room comedy." Unmasked, it has more the aspect of tragedy—the tragedy of futility, of false ideals and worthless ambitions, of low life in high places.

Mr. Maugham has planted his characters in English drawing rooms, and, to his everlasting credit, shows off their doings with practically NO moralizing. He reveals perfectly well what he intended to reveal through the chatter and activities of his puppets.

Persons in the Drama.

You have, then, an American girl who, disillusioned as to her husband's faithfulness on her marriage night, turns into a ruthless social climber, and assembles about her:

An American, from whom she accepts money and who acts as host for her in the perpetual absence of her husband, Lord Grayston.

A sex-obsessed duchess and her current gigolo.

A giddy, gossip-mongering man-about-town—and, for balance:

A beautiful and virtuous aristocrat who turns to good deeds as a salve for the constantly imposed wounds of a husband she loves too well.

Lady Grayston's sister, Bessie.

The nice American youth her sister loves, and—a likable young Lord Bleane whom milady intends to be her sister's husband.

Two Sparks of Feeling.

Only two sparks of honest feeling does Pearl Grayston display throughout the picture:

On her wedding night she seems most sincere as she tells

FRIENDS OF MUSIC DECIDE TO CARRY ON

By Edward Moore.

IN the face of what under other circumstances might seem considerable discouragement, the Chicago Friends of Music, that group assembled for the purpose of furthering the plans of Mr. Stock and the cause of music in this city, is deciding to carry on.

Possibly the discouragements and setbacks will have a good effect in the end. At any rate, they would seem to be acting as a present stimulus. It will be remembered that early in the winter a plan was set out to build a permanent Temple of Music on the exposition grounds by dollar subscriptions until $100,000 had been raised. This was an entirely possible undertaking, but an extremely difficult one to be done in a limited time, and time was limited, since exposition officials made it a condition that all building should be finished before the gates were opened.

Music Temple for Future.

The possible time limit expired with about $30,000 of the desired amount collected. The permanent building thereby became impossible for 1933. What to do next became the question. Apparently it has been answered by the decision to carry on for the cause of good music, to do what seems feasible at the moment, and to make the Temple of Music a goal for some time after the Century of Progress has had its day.

A considerable number of letters, sent both to this desk and to the Friends of Music, serve as an indication of the desires of "Parting is such sweet sorrow." Here are Diana Wynyard and Robert Young as they appear in "Men Must Fight." Chicago.

This laughing dispute over—we can't seem to see what—takes place in "Perfect Understanding," Gloria Swanson's latest starring vehicle, on tap over at the United Artists'. Before you in this scene from the photoplay are Miss Swanson and Lawrence Oliver.

These peering, popular physiognomies belong to none less than Helen Hayes and Clark Gable, who have the main roles in "The White Sister." It's coming to a Chicago screen right soon.

Feminine observers will be baffled by Miriam Jordan's expression. How COULD any girl gaze at Warner Baxter with such look of a love grown tired! "Dangerously Yours," on view this week at the Roosevelt theater, is the movie featuring these two.

Abbey Repertory Star Event of Stage Year

Visitors from Dublin Act Like Happy Family of Gifted and Versatile Artists in Many Changes of Bill; Impressions of Leading Personalities in Troupe.

By Charles Collins.

DISCUSSION of the brilliant repertory company that represents the national theater of the Irish Free State may continue, for their engagement, which has been extended for a third week, marks the most notable chapter of the stage season in Chicago. The visitors from Dublin have given us a rich program of their characteristic plays, which hold an important place in the history of modern dramatic literature, and they have interpreted these works with admirably sustained skill and steady, glowing charm. In their racial aspects they are unique; and as exemplars of the repertory system, which has become almost extinct in the American theater, they command international respect.

The Abbey tradition takes no account of stars, and the thirteen members of this group now touring America while its second line keeps the home fires burning in Dublin work together with an easy harmony that contradicts the old myth about the cantankerousness of the Celtic temperament. They seem to be a happy family of artists to whom all rôles are equally important, and the casting of the plays gives each of them, in turn, a chance to shine according to his or her special gifts. They might be called a company of "all-stars" if the ideals of the Abbey would not resent that shopworn bit of box office dialect.

Trio of Leaders.

There are, of course, commanding figures in the organization, since every democracy naturally breeds leaders. One cannot speak of the acting of this company without giving immediate attention to F. J. McCormick, Barry Fitzgerald, and Eileen Crowe, just as one cannot recall the Abbey tours of 1911, 1912, and 1913 without mentioning Arthur Sinclair, Sara Allgood, and Maire O'Neill. Nevertheless, one does not dwell upon this trio exclusively when the company also offers performances such as Arthur Shields' hero of "The Playboy of the Western World," Michael J. Dolan's passionate father in "Autumn Fire," Maureen Delaney's droll and picturesque widows, and any number of others. Each and every Irish player gets one or more shots at the goal in this rapidly rotated repertory, and each and every one of them scores.

Mellow McCormick.

McCormick is an actor of surprising range. He is adept in bizarre character studies; witness his tricky, wheedling poacher in "The New Gossoon"

YOUNG PEOPLE FLOCK TO SEE MISS BANKHEAD

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—(Special.)—There have been stories that whenever Tallulah Bankhead walked out in London the city's traffic problems were increased. There were crowds that insisted upon stopping and staring at Tallulah. Particularly, crowds of young girls.

The young lady has not had any difficulty getting about in New York since her return, so far as I know. She has been swarmed upon by interviewers and called upon by swarms of friends. But the great walking public has gone feverishly forward, as is its custom, without taking much count of her.

Crowds of Young People.

However, on the occasion of Miss Bankhead's opening night in a play called "Forsaking All Others," there was such a jam of young people buying standing room space that it was all the seatholders could do to get through to their places, even a quarter hour before the curtain rose.

And afterward at the stage door there were almost as many people waiting to see Tallulah emerge as there were to see Katharine Cornell the night of the "Alien Corn" opening. On that evening Miss Cornell was held for half an hour signing autograph albums. Next day she announced that thereafter she would charge 50 cents each for her signatures and give the money to the actors' fund.

Started in a Small Way.

The reason for the fascination

BECK-LINDELL BATTLE IN NINTH GROWS BITTER

Close Contests Likely in 2 Other Wards.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

In three south side wards, where no candidate was declared winner in the Feb. 28 aldermanic election, the two candidates in each ward who received the highest and the next highest number of votes are lining up their supporters for the April 4 runoff elections. These wards are the 6th, 9th, and 18th.

There are expectations of close contests in each of the wards, but in the 9th a bitter battle has got under way already. In that ward the record of a former Republican mayor has been raised in letters by the two candidates, Leslie V. Beck and Arthur G. Lindell, to the Municipal Voters' league.

Beck, the secretary of former Ald. Sheldon W. Govier, who now is clerk of the Appellate court, received 8,523 votes in the Feb. 28 election. Lindell, his opponent in the runoff, was given 5,039 votes, and the remaining four candidates polled 5,239 votes. In the February election the M. V. L. said: "Vote for Beck or Davis," and linked Lindell with the former Republican mayor.

Will Prove It, Says Govier.

"We will prove," wrote Clerk Govier to the M. V. L., "that he [Lindell] talked on the same platform as the former Republican mayor and his candidate, Len Small, and we will prove to you that Beck and Govier fought that mayor in the 9th ward and that Govier fought him in the city council for twelve years, and also that Lindell now has the support of former office holders who were linked with that mayor."

In his letter Lindell said to the M. V. L.: "There is no machine of the former Republican mayor in this ward and there has not been for more than two years." He claimed that Age Zylstra and other former supporters of the former mayor are supporting Beck, ending with the declaration, "I don't want to be linked now or at any time with the régime of a former Republican mayor."

Beck was secretary to Govier during the latter's twelve years' service in the city council and is familiar with the city hall and the duties of an alderman. Lindell is an electrical foreman and a past commander of the Third district of the American Legion.

Party Fight in 18th.

In the 18th ward there is an out and out party fight between Ald. Walter W. Morris, a Republican, and Harry E. Perry, an employé in County Treasurer McDonough's office. In the February election there were eight candidates. Morris polled 6,547 votes and Perry, 12,388.

Republican and Democratic support in the February election was split, and the lineup of the 7,000, more or less, votes for the other six candidates will be a factor in the runoff election.

The two candidates in the 6th ward are Ald. John F. Healy and Joseph J. McGeeney. Healy, who received 6,497 votes in the February election, was elected to the state legislature a number of years ago as a Democrat, was recognized in the council until recently as a Republican, and now is bidding for Democratic support. He was not called into the recent caucus of Republican aldermen.

McGeeney polled 5,520 votes in the February election. He has the support of a number of Republican groups in the ward, the major one of which is that composed of the followers of Patrick S. Smith, who was city clerk under the régime of a former Republican mayor. Smith also was the candidate last year of that former mayor for chairman of the Republican county central committee.

VOICE of the SOUTH SIDE

A USE FOR TRACTION FUND.

Chicago, March 6.—The taxpayers are in need of help in paying their taxes, and as there is a $65,000,000 traction fund in the hands of the city this should be used to help the real estate taxpayer to pay his 1932 taxes or the tax that is one year in arrears. This $65,000,000 is there for the purpose of building a subway in the city of Chicago.

We are not in a position to build a subway at present and subways are out of date. More modern thoroughfares are being built that take care of the traffic. Wacker drive is an illustration of what we need, not a subway. Subways are more expensive and not as good an improvement to the city.

We have waited for years for a subway. Why wait longer, when we have more modern and better ideas? Chicago is in need of money to pay employés and to have its credit restored. The taxpayers are not in a position to pay their taxes and should have this $65,000,000 to help pay their taxes.

Every citizen should be interested in the paying of the taxes, so that the city can pay her employés and restore her credit. If we are going to stand by and try to make the taxpayer pay a tax that is more than the income of the building and no money to pay it with, we are going to make matters worse. The taxpayer needs help and needs it at once, not after he has lost everything and the entire city is put into bankruptcy.

Put this $65,000,000 in circulation now. Help restore the city credit and pay employés their salaries. Help the taxpayer before it is too late.

RILEY A. BENDER,
President, West Lawn Improvement Ass'n.

LITTLE FLOWER PILGRIM LEADER IS APPOINTED

Party Going to Rome Sails July 1.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

THE REV. URBAN LAGER.
[Waters Photo.]

The Rev. Urban Lager, O. Carm., has been appointed by the Carmelite fathers at the National Shrine of the Little Flower, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue, to lead the eighth annual Little Flower pilgrimage to Lisieux, France, and to Rome this summer. Father Lager was a world war chaplain and has recently spent a year at the Carmelite monastery in Palestine.

Father Lager has announced that the pilgrimage will sail from New York on July 1. After visiting the home of St. Therese the band will continue on to Rome, where the pilgrims will be presented to Pope Pius by the Most Rev. Hilary J. Doswald, prior general of the order. They will also take part in the observance of the holy year recently proclaimed by the pope. Many of the pilgrims will tour other parts of Europe before returning to America. The mail ship Lafayette has been chartered for the pilgrimage.

PHILLIPS AT SUNDAY CLUB

The Rev. Dr. Harold C. Phillips, pastor of the First Baptist church of Cleveland, will be the principal speaker tonight at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall. The mission services during the week will include mission masses, followed by a sermon, at 6 and at 8:30 each morning, and evening mission devotions at 8 o'clock. The missionaries will also preach after the low mas at 12:10 noon, which is celebrated in the cathedral every week day during Lent.

The Very Rev. Joseph P. Morrison, rector of the Holy Name cathedral, will lecture on the mass at the March meeting of the Cathedral Converts' league Thursday night in the assembly hall, 11 East Chicago avenue. Father Morrison's lecture will be illustrated by slides. SO. SHORE OPENS DRIVE FOR SHARE OF FAIR VISITORS

Information Booths for Motorists Planned.

A movement to entice World's Fair visitors into the south shore district—an undertaking that may develop into a $5,000 promotional enterprise—was launched last week by the South Shore chamber of commerce.

Arthur C. Clemensen, who is cochairman with Edward J. Donnellan of the chamber's World's Fair committee, announced the personnel of eight committees whose business will be to sell the district on the advantages of housing visitors and, in turn, to sell visitors on the advantages of making their headquarters in south shore.

Meanwhile, the East 75th Street Business Men's association is mapping out plans for a separate welcome to the visitors. Formal presentation of these plans will be made Friday evening at a dance and cabaret party in Flanders restaurant, according to H. O. Brown, secretary of the organization. These plans are to include an information bureau, parking facilities, listing of vacant rooms and stores, and street decorations.

Aid for Motorists.

Information booths to aid incoming motorists in getting located are to play a large part in the chamber of commerce's scheme of things. Tentative locations for these are 79th street and South Shore drive, 79th street and Stony Island avenue, and 71st street and Yates avenue. A fourth booth may be set up on Jeffery avenue, Mr. Clemensen said.

"We intend to lay our cards on the table," said Mr. Clemensen. "And the cards are good ones—adequate hotels and apartments that cannot be beaten, fine restaurants, plenty of garage space, and transportation by the I. C. that takes you to the center of things in a hurry, whether you are going to the exposition grounds or the loop."

In raising the money to make visitors "south shore conscious" the chamber will address its appeal to the various businesses which will benefit. Principal among these will be the hotels. The Jackson Park Hotel association, Mr. Clemensen announced, already has pledged financial coöperation.

John E. Wolfe in Charge.

John E. Wolfe, chairman of the finance committee, will be assisted in raising necessary funds by Floyd M. Phillips and S. W. Streeter.

Plans call for a mammoth community parade just before the opening of the Fair on June 1 as well as special street decorations and store window trimming in keeping with the exposition. A rental clearing house is to be maintained during the Fair, while several "Welcome" signs are to be erected in the district.

Morgan L. Fitch heads the committee in charge of booths and street decorations. Working with him will be J. Leslie Rosenblum, L. E. Armijo, and F. E. Beilfuss. The parade committee is composed of Charles L. Gerds, chairman; P. J. Gouwens, and W. C. Larsen.

Ronksley Is Traffic Chairman.

The traffic committee chairman is Steve Ronksley. His aids are Earl L. Walsh and Arthur Gillies. John F. Browne, Robert Worden, and Rudolph Loher are in charge of publicity.

Elmer A. Johnson, chairman; Harry C. Franssen, and Morris Ehrlich make up the restaurant committee. Walter F. Schmidt, chairman of the housing committee, has E. H. Mackensen, head of the East 79th Street Business Men's association, and Andrew J. Reed Jr., executive secretary of the South Shore Y. M. C. A., as his assistants. J. C. Grogan is chairman of the garage committee.

Col. T. A. Siqueland, chief of American intelligence during the world war, will speak before Eaton-Priddy post, No. 111, of the American Legion Wednesday evening in the community room of the Chatfield bank building, 7936 Cottage Grove avenue.

Members of Square unit will give a musical play Friday evening at Hamilton park fieldhouse under the direction of Mrs. Florence Wahlen, music chairman. The Square post quartet will sing this evening at Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th and Paulina streets.

Commander Joseph M. Hughes has announced postponement of Medill Tribune post's "Buddie Nite," which was to have been held Saturday evening. All tickets now issued will be good for the party, which will be held as soon as the present money crisis has been passed.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

TOM FOX, 7420 Yates avenue, asks us to scotch the rumors that Mr. Comiskey has engaged Tom Reilly as his manager for 1934. Mr. Reilly, however, will take time off from letter carrying along the south shore to manage the south shore postoffice station team through another season. Victorious, of course, like the last one when the boys carried off the south division postoffice championship.

Betty Roby has been elected most popular girl down at Gulf Park college in Mississippi, and Father and Mother Roby of 10422 South Hoyne avenue are receiving congratulations. Betty started right by going through Empehi and then becoming president of her class and her sorority at Gulfport.

Mrs. F. W. Jarrett, 7230 Prairie avenue, grew an orange tree which won second prize in the horticultural show at Hotel Sherman a week ago. It'll be on exhibit before the Park Manor Woman's club Tuesday.

BANK holidays didn't deter Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Russell from leaving the home fires at 7815 Winchester avenue on Inauguration day for a motor trip to California. Mr. Russell's appendectomy prevented the trip last summer, and nothing short of another in the family could have stopped them this time. Now the stay-at-homes are wondering how they are making out.

Two other adventurous souls were Peggy Patt, 3517 South Western avenue, and Mary Marrien, 3435 South Western avenue, who left by auto for Miami Sunday, announcing blithely that they'll be back with the April showers.

The Amos Allens, 7211 Oglesby avenue, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary the other day by spreading a groaning board for 25 friends. Some of them knew Amos "back when" he was the star right end on the old Chicago Manual Training school football team.

ANOTHER festive occasion was Mrs. Louise Trocky's 81st birthday party at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Aaron Levy, 8114 Maryland avenue. Mrs. Trocky has been watching Chicago grow since before the great fire.

The feminine touch already is much in evidence at the Englewood "Y," where Mrs. F. T. Moody and Mrs. Warner Wilhelm have begun their pioneering as the first woman members of the boys' work committee. Mrs. Moody as beauty expert has had the boys' clubrooms painted. Mrs. Wilhelm will include the committee among the long list of groups for which she does publicity.

* *

Bank holidays to the contrary notwithstanding, there was a jubilee meeting of the Longwood Manor Civic association Monday night to hear President M. S. Schweihs report how he got the district's tax bills reduced from $5 to $30 per head. The bills came out with the Ridge park tax appended, and Longwood Manor is outside the park district. Mr. Schweihs detected the error, County Clerk Sweitzer saw the light, and about $10,000 was saved the taxpayers.

Wed Half Century

MR. and MRS. H. R. BALDWIN.

Mr. Baldwin was county superintendent of schools of McHenry county in the '80s.

In 1887 they moved to Chicago and Mr. Baldwin entered the law office of his brother, the late Judge Jesse A. Baldwin, in the Reaper block, where he has practiced law continuously ever since.

The couple has a son, Ralph William Baldwin; a granddaughter Annette Baldwin Linroth, and a great-grandson, William Baldwin Linroth.

GIRLS TO PLAY BOYS' PARTS IN MERCY COMEDY

"The Four Flusher," a three act comedy of ambitious American youth, will be presented by the Mercy Dramatic league at 8:15 o'clock tomorrow evening in the high school auditorium, 8100 Prairie avenue. Zest will be added by the appearance in male attire of part of the all feminine cast.

The story is one of a young shoe clerk who becomes a millionaire through his personality and cleverness, and plenty of faith in himself. Miss Marion Green has this rôle of Andy Whittaker. Miss Josephine Dunworth, as Ira Whittaker, erratic and wealthy uncle who refuses to die, has the featured comedy rôle.

The other girls who will play boys' parts tomorrow evening are Miss Mary Kenny, Miss Edith Jackson, Miss Mary McDermott, and Miss Betty Coakley. Only four of the 10 girls in the cast stay in feminine character—Miss Josephine McGrath, Miss Rita Lawler, Miss Helen Hodges, and Miss Madeline Leonard.

AIR DANCE ACES TO CONVERGE ON CITY FOR FAIR

Band at Every Corner Is Prospect.

Kate Smith, Columbia songstress who is heard over W-G-N regularly, will help Uncle Quin read the comics over W-G-N at 11:45 o'clock this morning. Kate is appearing at the Chicago theater this week.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

GUY LOMBARDO.

The music of the spheres is apparently converging on Chicago this summer. There'll be a dance orchestra on every corner and the airways will be filled with melody and rhythm if all the dreams of promoters for the fair season come true. Few band leaders have signed on the dotted line, but many are eager to. However, Wayne King will be at the Aragon and Hal Kemp at the Blackhawk with W-G-N their outlets. At the Trianon it will be Bernie Cummins or Jan Garber.

The Edgewater Beach has had some discussions with Paul Whiteman and George Olsen, but is reported undecided as to its Beachwalk plans. Mark Fisher may stay on. George Olsen is also reported slated for playing at the General Motors building on the fair grounds.

Ted Weems probably will be at the Lincoln Tavern and on W-G-N. Ambitious plans are afoot for the Dells. Guy Lombardo will be in the city for the summer, probably at the Dells and doubling at a fair spot. Ted Lewis' band and Don Carlos' orchestra, featuring tangos, may be added attractions at the Dells.

A dance band will be heard from the Palmer house in addition to the fine music of Ralph Ginsburg's ensemble. Ted Fio-Rito and King Cole are names mentioned. Don Irwin, a former Vincent Lopez player, will probably continue at the Congress, although Lopez may return. Both orchestras may even be heard there, with one in the Pompeian and the other in the Urban room.

Ben Bernie will return to the College Inn late in May and is reported scheduled to double at the Pabst café on the fair grounds. Art Kassell continues on at the Bismarck, Clyde McCoy at the Drake, Don Pedro at the Morrison, Ben Pollack at the Chez Paree, and Husk O'Hare, who has just opened at the Canton Tea garden, may stay on there.

Jack Denny may be in town for the summer. Charlie Agnew, with one of the finest vocal ensembles in the country, is apparently still available for the summer. Tweet Hogan is expected to carry on at the Beach View. Herbie Kay is reported looking for a local spot. Frankie Masters and Paul Ash may be in the picture, too. Ace Brigode, who is at the Merry Garden for a few days, and Al Kvale are others who may be here.

Several amusement centers planned for the fair are expecting to feature radio orchestras. A Hollywood development is said to have mentioned George Olsen and Wayne King as two that might be sought. "A Dance Palace" is planned which will feature outstanding orchestras. "Old Heidelberg," another fair project, can hardly be old Heidelberg without merry music.

Tom, Dick, and Harry, and Carl Hoefle, pianist and arranger for one of the neatest musical outfits on the air, are considering an offer to go to Radio City for a couple of months. Contracts and options may, however, keep them here. . . . Carl Hoefle is one of the way back whenners of radio, having got his start back in the crystal set days on WLIT, Philadelphia. Nine years ago he came to Chicago. He was "Cousin Carl" on old WEBH for a while. Then he accompanied Ruth Etting until she left Chicago to go to the "Follies." He's been with Gordon and Bud Vandover and Marlin Hurt, who comprise the above trio, for three years. All of them contribute much to the success of W-G-N's minstrel show on Monday nights.

Lee Sims and Ilomay Bailey, one of the finest teams on the air, may leave Chicago for a Radio City contract. . . . Goodman Ace, who is handing his wife over to "kidnapers" in "Easy Aces," is weighing an offer to broadcast with Jane on a west coast net for several months during the summer vacation. . . . If he doesn't do that he will go on a two month personal appearance tour at movie houses.

* * *

The Palmer house ensemble is now heard during luncheon hours over a network of more than forty CBS stations, as well as W-G-N. The music of the Ralph Ginsburg unit has replaced the Atlantic City Musical and the Madison String ensemble as sustaining features on certain days. The Palmer house ensemble is heard over W-G-N and CBS from 12:30 to 1 Mondays, Thursdays, and Fridays, and at 12 over periods weekly over W-G-N only.

Don Irwin, new batoneer at the Congress, got his musical start playing in a United States army band when he was 16 years old, but he goes for sweet, smooth, finished melodies rather than the music of marching men. Irwin has played drums for B. A. Rolfe and Vincent Lopez. With him are featured Eddie Scopes, a baritone from Northwestern university; Robert Royce, and Janet Milay. . . . Another new radio band leader with a collegiate background is Doug Peppard of the Allerton on WCFL. Peppard was drum major of Northwestern's 175 piece band for three years.

Clyde McCoy plans to put a few bars of music behind the bars of the Utah state prison. In response to a request from Prisoner Harry T. Edwards, who tunes in W-G-N regularly and who is organizing a prison band, Clyde plans to contribute some old instruments.

Waltz King "Goes to School"

Pursues Studies

Being a bandmaster is one thing; being the "waltz king" with a national reputation is another; being a student of music versed in harmony and counterpoint, competent to arrange and compose, is still a third. Achievement of the latter is the ambition of Wayne King, whose music is broadcast nightly over W-G-N. Wayne is studying to attain this end with Al Wathall, veteran arranger, composer, and assistant director of the W-G-N Concert orchestra.

Wayne King's enrollment as a postgraduate student of music was revealed recently. Like most men successful in their various businesses, Wayne believes that one can't know his particular job too well.

Always an admirer of Wathall's arrangements, the waltz king studies under the direction of the older man once a week, seeking a thorough groundwork of composition and orchestration. Mr. Wathall, a graduate of European and American conservatories, and whose study of music was made possible by the success of his own musical comedies, praises the progress of his pupil, saying that Wayne's talent and application are equally remarkable.

WADE BOOTH TO BE SOLOIST ON MELODY PARADE

Wade Booth, called a "baritone with a tenor range," is to be a guest artist on the Parade of Melodies with Hal Kemp's orchestra over W-G-N at 8:30 tonight. Booth is master of ceremonies for the Bismarck hotel's floor show. Booth is a native of Philadelphia, graduate of the University of Virginia, and studied under some of the best maestri in Milan and Paris.

WADE BOOTH.

He has been featured in several Broadway successes, including "Sally," "Student Prince," and George White's "Scandals." He will sing "Boots" and "Song of the Vagabonds."

DE PAUW CHOIR TO GIVE SPECIAL PROGRAM TODAY

The De Pauw university choir of Greencastle, Ind., one of the outstanding choral groups of the middle west, will give a special program over W-G-N at 11:30 this morning. The chorus, which is directed by R. G. McCutchan, is composed of 10 men and 11 women. The program scheduled for today follows: "Wash Me Thoroughly," by Rubinstein; "A Meditation," "When Thou Turn'st Away from Ill," "He That Dwelleth in the Secret Place," "We Do Adore Thee, O Christ," and "Lord, I Want to Be a Christian."

ELSON LEAVES TONIGHT TO JOIN CUBS AND SOX

Baseball News Will Be Given Daily on W-G-N.

With the major league baseball games occupying a major portion of the W-G-N daytime schedule during the summer months, Bob Elson, W-G-N's baseball critic and announcer, will depart for California tonight on his customary visit to the training camps of the two Chicago teams. The White Sox and the Cubs both are training in California this season and in addition Elson will have an opportunity to watch three other major league outfits, the New York Giants, the Detroit Tigers, and the Pittsburgh Pirates, in action on the west coast.

[Ermates Photo.]

Elson will arrive in Los Angeles on Wednesday in time to watch the Cubs and White Sox engage in a practice game at Wrigley Field, the home of the Los Angeles club of the Coast league.

Baseball News Daily.

As a special feature for the Chicago fans who follow baseball with W-G-N Elson each day will telegraph baseball news to the station, which will be broadcast some time during the day convenient for the listeners. All of the home games of the Sox and Cubs, as well as the more important games played by these two teams on the road during the regular season, will be broadcast by W-G-N.

W-G-N is one of the pioneers of baseball game broadcasting. The first baseball game presented on the air by W-G-N was a city series between the Cubs and Sox which Sen Kaney, then chief announcer of THE TRIBUNE station, detailed back in 1924.

Interviews Again This Year.

For several years Quin Ryan, W-G-N's veteran sports announcer, handled the baseball broadcasts and then the job was passed on to Bob Elson. Elson for the third successive year will handle the W-G-N presentations from the baseball parks this season.

One of the important features of Elson's broadcasts last season was his personal interviews with various players of the contending teams before each game. These interviews from the field before each contest will be continued this season.

BOOSTS BUYING

EVELYN BRENT.

Evelyn Brent, beautiful menace of motion picture romances, who is appearing on the Chicago stage this week, will be interviewed by Bob Elson at 7:45 tonight on W-G-N in a special program to boost the "Buy American" campaign. Elson will ask Miss Brent a lot of questions about Hollywood celebrities and the latest motion pictures. The musical part of the "Buy American" program will be presented by the W-G-N orchestra, under the direction of Delos Owen, and will feature compositions by American composers.

VIRGINIA LE RAE TO BE HEARD IN OPERA MINIATURE

Virginia Le Rae, youthful Chicago soprano, heard each Wednesday at 1 o'clock on W-G-N's "Opera Miniatures," will sing the famous "Polonaise" from "Mignon" when that opera is presented this week. This aria makes great technical demands upon the singer and will enable Miss Le Rae to display a great part of her four octave range. The opera is presented under the direction of Allan Grant and also features Helen Ornstein, contralto; Arthur Oberg, tenor, and Joseph Hassmer, baritone. Miss Le Rae is also heard in recital at 1:45 each Tuesday and on the "Variety" program at 3 every Wednesday. On the "Variety" program this week Miss Le Rae and Mr. Hassmer will sing gems from Friml's "Katinka."

CUMMINS BOYS TO PAY MOTHER IRISH TRIBUTE

Every year on St. Patrick's day Bernie Cummins plays and his brother, Walter, sings an Irish tune dedicated to their mother, who listens to their broadcasts at her home in Akron, O. Next Friday her sons will dedicate "My Wild Irish Rose" and play a special arrangement of the number on their St. Patrick's day broadcast over W-G-N from the Trianon ballroom at 10:50 p. m. A gala party will be held in conjunction with the regular dance by the Calumet council of the Knights of Columbus that night and for them Bernie and his band will play a rousing medley of Irish tunes.

RIP VAN WINKLE TO COME TO LIFE ON AIR THIS WEEK

Rip Van Winkle will come to life over the radio this week in the W-G-N children's sketches, "Davy Dreamer and Jean and Wishbone," Uncle Quin's scallawags, who enact their make believe adventures at 6 o'clock every evening will by back to the little Dutch village in the Catskill mountains to wander away with Rip and his dog, Wolf, and indulge in 20 years sleep after playing at nine-pins with the dwarfs. The theme of these sketches, played on a mouth organ by Wishbone, is an original tune written by Delos Owen, director of the W-G-N concert orchestra.

Charles Newcomb to Be Executives' Club Speaker

Charles Milton Newcomb, humorist and philosopher, heard frequently on W-G-N in his addresses before the Executives' club of Chicago, will speak before this group on W-G-N at 1 Friday, on the subject of "The Meaning of Life."

Prof. Baker Brownell of the school of Journalism of Northwestern university will be the speaker at 5:15 p. m. Tuesday and Friday on the "20th Century Bookshelf" program over W-G-N. The important books of 1907 will be discussed.

Jungle Bad Man Again Appears in "Devil Bird"

El Gaucharo, the jungle bad man, will make another appearance in "The Devil Bird" in the Monday to Friday episodes of Bob Becker's juvenile series, over W-G-N and a midwest Columbia network.

CURRAN HALL FIRE "HEADLINES" TO BE REVIVED ON W-G-N

Do you remember the headlines of the Curran Hall fire in THE TRIBUNE of Saturday, April 19, 1924? The story of this catastrophe, in which seven Chicago firemen were killed and 18 were injured, will be rebroadcast by Quin Ryan on the "Headlines of Other Days" program at 9:40 p. m. tonight over W-G-N.

SERBS DENOUNCE DICTATOR RULE; SPLIT ON REMEDY

Protest Arrest of Chiefs of Other Groups.

BY EMIL MAASS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Feb. 25.—[By mail.]—A fable popular in Jugo-Slavia relates that all the people of the world were invited by a good fairy to choose whatever they could wish. Before the south Slav tribes could get through fighting over what they really wanted, everybody else had snapped up everything worth having, and the poor Jugo-Slavians remained as poor as they had been.

Since the war, south Slav children may well point out to their fathers and mothers that Jugo-Slavia came off pretty well in the long run, but the grownups know better.

Good old Jugo-Slav customs remain as they were. Recently every one of the old political parties declared war to the death on the present dictatorship of King Alexander. Yet not one of the Serbian parties can agree entirely with the other Serbs on a plan for ending the dictatorship, to say nothing of getting anywhere near the Croations or Slovenes.

The only sign of improvement lately was a protest signed jointly by the Serbian Radicals, Democrats and Agrarians condemning the arrest and internment of Croatians, Slovene, Bosnian, and Voivodina leaders.

Murder Bares $150,000 Hoard.

Mrs. Draga Mitrichevitch, eccentric old Belgrade billionaire, was murdered recently in her home, a stone's throw from the royal palace at Belgrade. The police, so highly strung that they rush up to any woman who stops on the street to fix her garter and look over every person who saunters past on that street, didn't discover for a week the crime committed under their noses. Then they were stumped by not being able to find the body. A week after the discovery of the murder, some boy had the idea of looking in the cellar of the old woman's house. There they found the body.

The old eccentric had $150,000 cash in her safe deposit vault in a Belgrade bank. Just another proof of the statement of Jugo-Slavian bankers that about three-quarters of all Jugo-Slavian money is buried in backyards or hidden in farmers' socks.

Returning Visitors Hard Hit.

The various bank moratoriums worked hardship on many Jugo-Slavians returning from abroad, mainly from America, who changed their few thousand dollars into a few million dinars. Now they have to sit around and watch the dinar falling every week, unable to draw out their little fortunes and convert the dinars back into real money again. The owners of real estate, which is already fairly steady here, are taking advantage of the shaken confidence in the dinars and are selling properties against frozen bank accounts.

Naturally, they discount the locked-up dinars by 40 to 50 per cent. A department store in Maribor advertised recently that it, too, would sell all its wares against bank books and was swamped by poor devils glad to be able to buy necessities at any price.

Punish Wives with Nudeness.

Belgrade is suffering from an "epidemic of nude women." The husband of a sevdalinka—café songstress—got sore because she didn't bring home enough money and chased her out of the house after tearing all her clothes off. She had the good luck to snatch a lace curtain as she was shoved out into the cold, caught a taxi and drove to the next police station. The idea made a big hit and was adopted by husbands of unfaithful wives, wives who burn up the supper or otherwise have given cause for wrath. Now the police have to rescue and clothe a new Lady Godiva every few days, while the husbands are sent to jail.

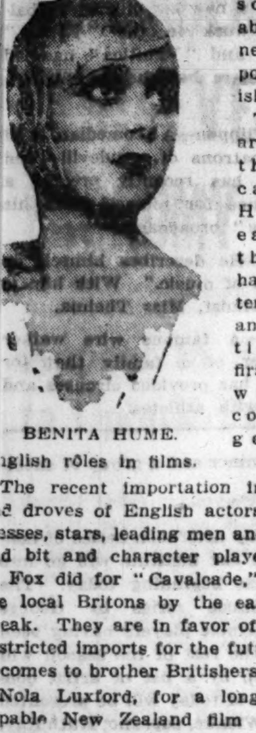
Early British Birds Want the Studio Worms

ook Disapprovingly on Recent Importations of Actors, Actresses.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—In the wake of the recent drive to expel from Hollywood all alien actors who were not legally titled to residence there comes a nny situation. The Hollywood British are screaming about the newly imported British! Those who arrived in the gold camps of Hollywood early feel that they have squatters' rights and are entitled to first choice when it comes to getting nglish rôles in films.



BENITA HUME.

The recent importation in squads d droves of English actors and acesses, stars, leading men and women, d bit and character players, such Fox did for "Cavalcade," has got e local Britons by the ears, so to eak. They are in favor of strongly stricted imports for the future when comes to brother Britishers.

Nola Luxford, for a long time a pable New Zealand film star and cal stage success, has been among ose accustomed to getting rôles callg for English actresses. What was r recent dismay to have two fat icy parts whisked right out from der her nose by the newly imported glish actress, Benita Hume. Benita under contract at Metro-Goldwynayer, so Benita gets the breaks.

ypical of Many Cases.

Nola is hoping confidently that she ill get past all the new imports when comes to "Berkeley Square," and at in the film version she will get e chance to play the same rôle she d on the stage here. Nola's case is ypical of many Britishers here who e getting their noses a bit out of int by the new procedure.

There's George K. Arthur, long time lm actor who is getting pushed into he back round by eople like rank Atinson, another English import, comedian sed in Cavalade," and onny Ray, ustralian, lso a omic, and sed in Oliver wist." It is amazng to go ver even a artial list of film stars who hail from e United Kingdom. There always as been a certain percentage of Engsh stars in films, going back as far s the days when Charlie Chaplin first roke into films and Beerbohm Tree nd Sir Henry Irving tried the tricky ickers, and when the Canadian born lary Pickford began collecting heavy for that innocent look and long londe curls.

GEORGE K. ARTHUR.

Then followed the era of H. B. Warer, Alec Francis, Percy Marmont, nd Ernest and David Torrence, all ritish by birth and training; of Ronld Colman, Lupino Lane, and Clive rooke; of Victor McLaglen, Dorothy lackaill, Lillian Rich, and Ralph orbes.

But with the talkies there has been perfect burst of Albion, some of it erfidious, too, on the screen.

ther Importations.

Recent hits and importations include rian Ahearne, Irish player brought rom New York as the lead in "The ong of Songs" for Marlene Dietrich; erbert Marshall, also used opposite ietrich in "Blonde Venus," and his nglish wife, Edna Best; Boris Karloff, of English birth, who has succeeded to the horror crown left vacant by the death of Lon Chaney; Stan Laurel, of Laurel & Hardy of English music hall fame; Leslie Howard, whose recent success with Norma Shearer in "Smilin' Through" puts him near the top of the list; Franchot Tone, Irish player being used opposite Joan Crawford in her latest film, and others.

Elissa Landi, British subject, at the Fox studios, was starred in "Sign of the Cross." In "Cavalcade," practically the entire cast is British from Clive Brooke of the Hollywood English to Diana Wynyard, recently imported and first used in "Rasputin," with the Barrymores; and Una O'Connor, Dublin Irish woman; Frank Atkinson, comic; Herbert Mundin, character actor of great ability, and many others.

Fox, as a result, has five English women under contract at this time. Their new hit, Lilian Harvey, although of German successes, is English. Heather Angel, another recent Fox import, is English. Merle Tottenham, Temple Pigott, and Beryl Mercer are all English character women.

Elizabeth Allen, still another new British import from stage and film work in London, is playing the rôle of the daughter in "Service," Lionel Barrymore's new film at M-G-M.

Competition for Americans.

Diane Sinclair, another recent import, hails from British Guinea. Roland Young has been a favorite for the last two years. Sir Guy Standing, veteran actor, has been put under long term contract at Paramount. Cary Grant, who is making all sorts of progress at Paramount, is an English youth. So it goes. While the native Americans do the best they can between Hollywood British and the newly imported ones, with German, French, Hungarian, and Russian stars and all the rest of the polyglot crowd of artists that make up Hollywood.

DIANE SINCLAIR.

One naive reason given by a producer for the favor shown Englishmen on the screen is that an Englishman can wear a top hat and tails and not look uncomfortable in them. At best this can only be ranked as a dubious virtue, but it is true that there is a certain finish in manner about the English trained actor that has had great value for producers of the society and sophisticated dramas that have enjoyed such extended recent screen popularity.

Talkies, of course, explain the desire to get English voices on the screen. Due to a diet of suet puddings, treacle, or London fog, they have the smooth, sweet, and soft voice that is "quite an improvement for parlor use over the New York voice, which may smack of the subway clatter, or the middle westerner whose mellifluous tones may have been damaged by a few generations of hog calling."

From Different Angles.

Then, too, the difference in attitude towards the stage as a career up to a generation ago has been quite different in England and in the U. S. In England the actor has always been the social equal of any one, and as a result young men and women of fine families were attracted to the stage as a career.

In the United States, where Puritan traditions die hard, existing to this day in many circles and communities, an actor is little lower than a traveling salesman and a little higher than a confidence man.

While this does not hold true in the big centers, it is true to an extent that the Hollywood producers in the last few years deliberately have gone to the colleges of the United States in search of new talent of the better sort with the cultural background that they feel is so necessary on the screen today.

Large Lady

KATE SMITH.

The vaudeville portion of the program at the Chicago theater this week is enhanced and augmented by the expansive presence of the well known Miss Smith, the large lady of the radio entertainments. The stage of the Chicago is spacious, but the abundant Kate is equal to her environment.

Chicago Debut

VERA SCHWARZ, the German soprano who came to America at the invitation of S. A. [Roxy] Rothafel to appear on the inaugural bill at the Radio City Music hall in New York, is making a brief vaudeville tour before returning to Europe. The tour brought her to Chicago for a first appearance last Friday, March 3. She is a feature of the current vaudeville bill at the Palace theater.

Miss Schwarz is best identified as leading soprano of the state opera companies in Berlin and Vienna. However, she has appeared as guest artist with the opera companies of Amsterdam, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Hamburg, Munich, Dresden, Graz, Stuttgart, Wiesbaden and Paris. She has enjoyed her greatest success in "Tosca" and "Carmen." Her repertory also includes thirty-five rôles in different German, French, and Italian operas.

Miss Schwarz was engaged for the Metropolitan opera by Gatti-Casazza just before the outbreak of the European war. This crisis prevented her coming to America.

her husband she wants to make him a good wife. Then she DOES, for her sister's sake, persuade Lord Bleane to break his engagement with Bessie in order that the latter will fly to safe refuge in the yearning arms of young Mr. Harvey. Otherwise she is quite, quite reprehensible, even for a moment's whim, permitting the duchess' [supposedly her best friend] boy a rendezvous with her in her own teahouse.

The teahouse episode—which infers everything without showing anything—is by all odds the most smartly constructed sequence in a smart play.

An Excellent Cast.

Constance Bennett handles her difficult, because entirely unsympathetic, rôle in superior fashion. Violet Kemble-Cooper is simply superb as the spoiled, wheedling, sexy, shallow duchess. Gilbert Roland is entirely in character as the moronic gigolo. Grant Mitchell qualifies well as the man-about-town. Minor Watson is good as the fatuous, bill paying American who insists on calling his mistress "girlie" despite her careless protests, and a male dancing teacher with lips rouged à la Crawford adds the last note of decadence. Other rôles are uniformerly well played; while direction, staging, and the women's gowns are all the most critical might desire.

In closing, as the preacher says, it seems well to remind the reader that, while all is not gold that glitters, there ARE "as good hearts to serve men in palaces as in cottages" and that the bulwarks of no nation consist of its worm eaten timber.

Bits aBOUTem.

RUTH CHATTERTON wears tights in "Lilly Turner." Well, THAT'S a departure. . . . It is the proud boast of First National that JOAN BLONDELL can weep at will. No onion or glycerine tears for her! . . . MAURINE WATKINS, formerly with THE TRIBUNE and famous as the playwright of "Chicago," has sold a new play called "Careless," purporting to be a satire on New York, to R-K-O. She has gone to California to put finishing touches on her mss. and will remain to see the play made into a picture. . . . JOHN BARRYMORE and JEAN HARLOW have drawn leading rôles in "The Christian," for which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is preparing production. . . . Excerpt from article in Variety: ". . . While it would seem that depression, at first glance, is responsible for audience shrinkage running into millions, which represent roughly about 40 per cent of the industry's general American audiences of as recent as three years ago, attendance analysts claim the faults are as much within the industry itself. "Sophisticated pictures are held partially responsible for the drop in child and adult male classes. The average man dislikes the average run of standardized sophistication on the screen as much as the child, spokesmen for the industry assert. . . ."

From an article by LILYAN TASHMAN in Picture Play: ". . . It is true that clothes have always interested me. However, any reputation I may have achieved as an arbiter of fashion has been in the nature of honors thrust upon me. I have always been frank in admitting that Edmund Lowe, my husband, is and always has been the motivating power in my existence. Making a success of our marriage has always taken a precedence over any other interest in my life.

"Second in importance has been my career. And can any one name an instance in which my characterization has suffered because I was smartly and correctly garbed?

"I have always had an instinct for correct dressing. I think I owe it to myself and my husband—as does every woman—always to look the best possible.

"The real reason for concentrating on clothes, as I admit I have done to some extent, has not been to achieve an effect or reputation. It has been to bring picture audiences my small share of service. Merchandising records and statistics prove the biggest sellers in department stores during the last year were dresses copied from models worn on the screen. Therefore it becomes increasingly apparent that pictures influence trends of fashion all over the world more than do any other factors. . . ."

Historiette

WARREN WILLIAM.
[Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

WARREN WILLIAM [Warren William Krech] was born in Atkin, Minn., in 1896. He is of English and German parentage. He was educated in the public schools and by private tutors. His earliest ambition was to be a sea captain and he owns a small schooner on which he hopes some day to sail to the South Seas. After severally deciding to be an architect, an engineer, and a builder of bridges, he settled on the career of acting and enrolled in a New York school of dramatic art.

His first rôle was that of a pickle salesman in "Mrs. Jimmie Thompson," but he soon after became a popular leading man. His screen debut was in a serial, playing opposite Pearl White. Mr. William has been happily married for a number of years. Tennis and yachting are his hobbies. He has never seen a baseball game.

This player is 6 feet tall, weighs 165 pounds, has blue eyes and brown hair. His important pictures have been "The Mouthpiece," "The Dark Horse," "The Match King."

A near sighted person might easily mistake Mr. William for John Barrymore.

London Stage

PAUL ROBESON will start a two weeks' engagement in London in O'Neill's "All God's Chillun Got Wings" on March 13. After that he will return to this country to make a film of "Emperor Jones." The Negro singing actor has completed a play dealing with the Russian poet Pushkin, and he is continuing to study the Russian language.

Fay Compton is to act in London the part of Ninette in Knoblock's "Royal Flush." . . . Rachel Crothers has started rehearsals for "When Ladies Meet" in London, with Marie Tempest and Mary Newcomb in the cast. . . . The name of Gertrude Lawrence's next play—one by Roland Pertwee and John Hastings Turner—is "The Inconsistency."

Cedric Hardwicke, regarded as England's finest character actor, is to appear over there under his own management. Two plays are under consideration at the moment, a new one by R. C. Sheriff, in which he would have the rôle of an elderly sweepstake winner, and "The Late Christopher Bean."

The Voice of the Movie Fan

A Bit of Conscientious Advice.

Dear Mae: The years pass and with them many changes occur. But you, Mae, remain ever the same, and although I rarely agree with your comments, I cannot help but admit that I admire the courage of your convictions.

It is often amusing to compare past and present, and interesting to note the various changes. I recall an item of mine which appeared in your column of June 17, 1923, in which I objected to the conglomeration of entertainment offered at our large picture theaters, often inducing patrons to become "tired and exhausted from witnessing a mixture of attempts at opera, jazz, interpretative dancing, and vaudeville," before the feature picture appeared.

Well, Mae, it took a long time for the "powers that be" to act upon my comment, but today this type of entertainment has all but disappeared . . . or has it been the depression that induced them to alter their policies?

Now, let them eliminate the exploitation of mediocre actors of little or no ability at the public's expense and proportionately reduce admission fees. The subsequent result will, I am sure, considerably counteract many other abuses inflicted upon a gullible public, whose natural instinct to be entertained will forget and forgive if given a "break."

Will it take another ten years for the "magnates" to heed this bit of conscientious advice?

Yes, Mae, I had a good time writing this letter, as well as that other one so many years ago, as per your "Editor's note."

Sincerely, MARTIN K. ASH.

Editor's note: Greetings, good wishes, and all that!

Abbey Dramas Star Event of Theater Year

Dublin Company Acts Like Happy Family of Versatile and Gifted Artists.

By Charles Collins.

and his fantastic guttersnipe, Joxer, in "Juno and the Paycock." But he is equally good in rôles that call for serious and normal deportment, such as his police sergeant in "The Rising of the Moon" and his elder brother in "The Whiteheaded Boy." He is a sound realist as well as an ingenious caricaturist, and his touch is always quietly authoritative.

Fantastic Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald is the company's most adept portrayer of ultra-comic characters—the wild, quaint creatures of the farm lands and the tenements that form the food upon which the Irish drama has grown fat. Ireland never had a Cruikshank, but Fitzgerald's visualizations of his rôles—the greatest being babbling, incoherent Captain Boyle in "Juno and the Paycock"—are in the style of Cruikshank's draftsmanship.

He is masterly as the dram shopkeeper in "The Playboy" and the merry rogue of a father in "The Whiteheaded Boy," and his versatility and infectious humor find memorable expression in minor rôles like the small town sportsman in "The Far Off Hills." In that comedy he has a little scene in which, with chuckling glee, he shows a comic postcard to three other characters with such persuasive glee that the audience, although not in the secret of the joke, laughs as if it had heard a priceless anecdote.

Eileen Crowe.

Miss Crowe's province covers nearly all the leading feminine rôles, from attractive and romantic girls to the worn but high-spirited old women in which Irish drama is so strong. She plays a country flapper in "The New Gossoon"; a prim, nagging young woman with inclinations toward the life of a cloistered nun in "The Far Off Hills"; the gray, long suffering mother in "Juno and the Paycock"; a gentle old home body in "The Whiteheaded Boy"; a gallant peasant girl in "Autumn Fire"; and the ancient crone symbolizing the spirit of Ireland in "Kathleen ni Houlihan"—a character that might be called the Abbey's trade-mark. Miss Crowe is an accomplished and graceful actress and an admirable representative of the company's traditions.

Clever Ingenues.

The only full length play in the repertory that has escaped my recording pen thus far is "The Far Off Hills," written by Lennox Robinson, who became an Abbey dramatist as far back as 1908 with "The Clancy Name," and who is now the theater's managing director. It is an excellent companion piece to "The Whiteheaded Boy"—a humorous, intimate picture of a middle class family, telling a simple story of Irish domestic life with unforced realism and highly entertaining results. Robinson specializes in the bourgeois comedy of his people, and his touch is exceedingly happy.

"The Far Off Hills" is, among other things, a romp for the two ingénues of the company, Kate Curling and Ria Mooney—especially the former, who has a winning way of representing the influence of the flapper epidemic upon Irish girlhood. Miss Curling is the prettiest girl that the Abbey theater has discovered, and a captivating comedienne in the bargain. This play contains a bedroom act that should come as a refreshing novelty to jaded observers of the American stage. Miss Curling and Miss Mooney, in nightgowns of the soberest puritan style, represent a pair of bouncing, chattering maidens in their early 'teens, and as they discuss the affairs of their elders, in and out of bed, they bring the Abbey repertory to its highest point of gayety.

Next Week's Repertory.

The repertory for the Abbey's current week—the third and probably the last in Chicago—will include only one new item—Synge's one act play, "The Shadow of the Glen." An extra matinée will be given next Friday in honor of the birthday of St. Patrick. The plays and their places on the schedule will be as follows:

"The New Gossoon," comedy by George Shiels, tonight, Wednesday night, and Saturday matinée.

"The Whiteheaded Boy," comedy by Lennox Robinson, preceded by Synge's "Riders to the Sea," Monday night.

"The Far Off Hills," comedy by Lennox Robinson, Tuesday night and Friday matinée.

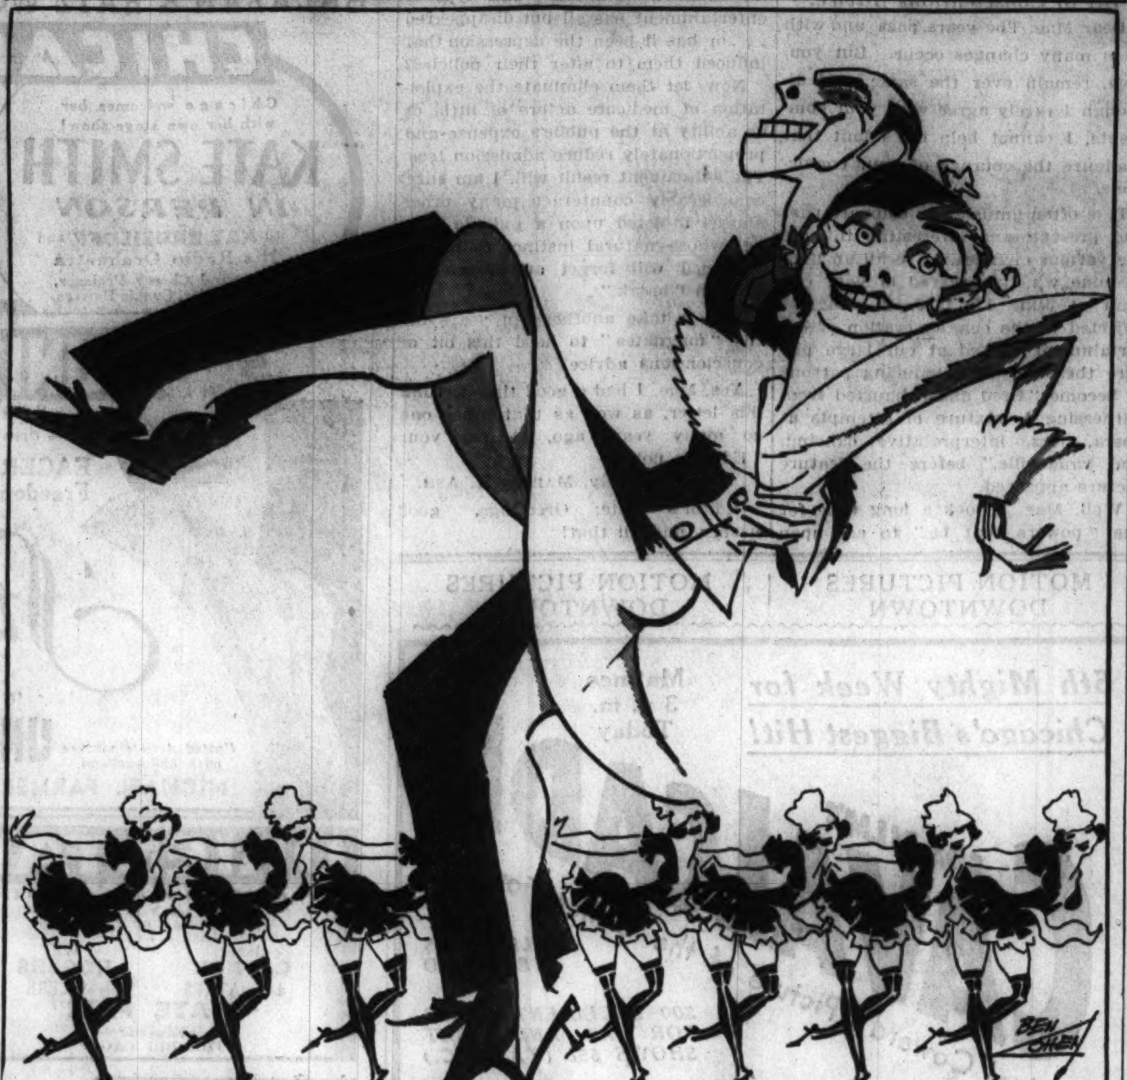
"Juno and the Paycock," drama by Sean O'Casey, Wednesday matinée and Friday night.

"The Playboy of the Western World," comedy by J. M. Synge, preceded by his "The Shadow of the Glen," Thursday night; "The Playboy" again, preceded by Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon," Saturday night.

Infant Phenom.

LENORE FELDEN, 17 year old Chicago dancer, is the premiere danseuse in the musical comedy, "The Red Robin," now at the Grand Opera house. Last year she appeared as première danseuse with the Paris Grand Opera company, the youngest girl ever to have that honor. She has also danced with the Chicago Civic opera and with the Los Angeles opera. She is at present a student at Northwestern university.

High Steppers of "The Red Robin"



MARTHA LORBER AND NICK LONG JR.
[Sketch by Ben Cohen.]

The new musical show at the Grand Opera house, which marks J. J. Shubert's adoption of Chicago as a theatrical producing center, has the lovely Martha Lorber as heroine and the lively Nick Long Jr. as dancing comedian. Here is an impression in pen and ink of their high stepping to spirited Viennese tunes in ye old Red Robin tavern. Below, the Merriel Abbott dancing girls.

Abbey Veteran Tells Story of Early Associates

By U. Wright.

[The oldest member of the Abbey Theater company of Dublin in point of service here tells about the early leaders of the group and brings their histories up to date. Mr. Wright has been with the Irish Players since 1903, with the exception of the war period, when he served with the Royal Engineers and in the aviation corps.]

WHEN one is asked to cast his mind back for thirty years to give a short history of the more prominent and better known of the first and second generation of Abbey Players with whom the American people are acquainted it is quite a task to accomplish this without, perhaps, some slight inaccuracies.

The first three people to break away from the then Irish Literary Theater society without its consent [they thought the players were too inexperienced and the time was not ripe for the proposed Irish Theater at the St. Louis exhibition], were Mary Quinn, Dudley Digges, and P. J. Kelly. Unfortunately they soon found their mistake and had to start playing small parts wherever they could get them. After some years Mr. Digges became a prominent actor and finally forsook the American stage for Hollywood, where he still continues. Mr. Kelly played in the best known Shakespearean companies and is now on tour with Walter Hampden. Miss Quinn married Mr. Digges and finished her stage career.

The next serious loss that the theater sustained was that of the brothers, William and Frank Fay. The latter, being manager, had some slight difference with the directors and resigned, taking his brother with him. They went to England, where Frank played for many years with Shakespearean companies, finally to return to Dublin where he continued teaching dramatic art in the principal colleges. He died about two years ago. His friends started a memorial fund for the education of his daughter in his memory. William Fay found that he was better adapted to stage direction, which work he is still carrying on, principally with the Scottish Players.

We now finish with what we may call the first generation. The first member of the second generation to be tempted to leave the Abbey was Sara Allgood, who started on an extensive tour in England and Australia in "Peg o' My Heart," after which she came back to the Abbey for odd periods. For the last few years she has been playing in England. Her last acting was "The Things That Are Cæsar," in London.

After the second American tour [1912-1913] we lost Marie Nic Shiubhlaigh and Una O'Connor. The former retired into private life; the latter sought more experience on the English stage, finally to go to Hollywood, where she has become well known.

During 1916 greater number of the players resigned from the theater through disagreement with St. John Ervine, who was then manager. They were Arthur Sinclair, Sidney J. Morgan, J. A. O'Rourke, Harry Hutchinson, Miss Drago and Miss Desmond. For a considerable time these players kept together under the management of Mr. Sinclair, playing in England and Ireland. During the latter part of the world war B. J. Fagan engaged them for a long tour of the "Whiteheaded Boy," in England, America, and Australia. On their return they then started with "Juno" in London and America. After this, Mr. Sinclair came to America to play by himself and his company got scattered, but its members still continued to find parts in London.

About a year ago Mr. Morgan died in London after a short illness. The last we heard of these players they were touring England and Ireland with George Shiels' "Mountain Dew."

The next player to leave was J. M. Kerrigan, who came to America to play with Laurette Taylor, finally to get to Hollywood where he now directs plays.

We have omitted to mention Marie O'Neil, who left the theater on her marriage during the summer of 1911. After some years the lure of the stage was too much, and she came back to play with Mr. Sinclair in the "Whiteheaded Boy," and is still continuing to play with that group.

During the war period Eileen O'Doherty and Ethena Magee retired from the stage, the former to marry an officer in the Free State army and the latter to marry an officer in the British army. During the last two years Miss Magee's name has been again seen on the programs of some London productions.

We now come to Fred O'Donovan who managed the theater for some years during the war and finally decided to imitate Mr. Sinclair and started touring with his own company. After some short time he found this was not very satisfactory and started on a tour of South Africa under a London manager. The last we see of him is with Mr. Sinclair and company in "Mountain Dew." I might here add that all these people met and played together in the London production of "The Things That Are Cæsar."

These two groups of players which we have mentioned helped to lay the foundation and build up what is now known throughout the world as the Abbey Theater Company of Dublin. The brothers Fay should come in for special mention in the work, William through his stage craft in building the acting tradition we now hold, and Frank in his great work of voice production.

New Firm of Play Producers; Gotham Stage

NEW YORK, March 11.—[Special.]—A new firm for the production of musical and dramatic plays has been formed by Chester Erskin and Milton Shubert. The firm will operate under the name of Haymarket, Ltd., and the plans call for the production of not less than two plays each season. Mr. Erskin is perhaps best known for his direction of "The Last Mile" and "Subway Express."

Mr. Shubert, who is a nephew of Lee Shubert and J. J. Shubert, has had considerable experience in staging and served during the summer of 1931 as director of the Municipal Opera company in St. Louis. No definite productions have been announced by the firm as yet.

New York producing managers have kept right on staging new shows in spite of the banking moratorium. The Saturday that brought the national bank holiday found Messrs. Brown and Henderson lifting the curtain on a costly new revue called "Strike Me Pink."

Last Monday saw the première of the Theater Guild's latest production, Maxwell Anderson's drama on the United States congress and its behavior, called "Both Your Houses"—a title that has reference to a curse uttered by the dying Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet." On the same night Eva Le Gallienne brought out a fine revival of Chekov's "The Cherry Orchard," and on Tuesday night a play called "The Lady Refuses," written by Saxon Kling, went through its birth pangs.

"Run, Little Chillun," a musical play by Hall Johnson, Negro composer and director of "The Green Pastures" choir, had an opening just before the moratorium was declared. The critics greeted it with cheers.

"A Trip to Pressburg" began a two weeks' engagement at the Chestnut Street Opera house in Philadelphia last Monday night. The play will probably be brought to Broadway soon.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, March 11.—[Special.]—"Business as usual" is the slogan among Broadway's producing managers. There will be six premières next week. Two of the plays are revivals. The catalogue of first nights follows:

"Masks and Facts"—Opens Monday night at the Liberty. The author is A. J. Minor; the company includes Enid Romany, Gordon Richards and Donald Foster.

"Riddle Me This"—Opens Tuesday night at the Hudson theater. Revival of a mystery play by Daniel N. Rubin.

"Far Away Horses" — Opens Wednesday night at the Martin Beck theater. This is a comedy of Irish life in America by Michael Birmingham and Gilbert Emery. Leona Hogarth, Bruce MacFarlane and Marion Barney are among the participants.

"Cinderella's Brothers" — Opens Wednesday night at the Mansfield theater. A comedy about the youth of today by Arthur Ebenhack.

"The Best People"—Opens Wednesday night at the Waldorf. Revival of a play dating back to 1924. In the cast are Maida Reade, Thomas A. Braidon and John T. Dwyer.

"Three-Cornered Moon"—Opens Thursday night at the Cort. A new author, Gertrude Tonkonogy, is the author. Ruth Gordon will appear in the main rôle and others in the cast are Cecilia Loftus, Brian Donlevy, Eunice Stoddard and Richard Whorf.

Young People Flock to See Miss Bankhead

Her Fascination May Be Elusive to Critics, But It's Real to Girls.

By Burns Mantle.

that Miss Bankhead inspires is fairly elusive to this old reporter, but there it is. Nine years ago, when she decided to take up acting instead of politics [all the Bankheads are politicians; a grandfather senator, an uncle who just beat out Heflin, and a father who is Congressman Bankhead], she came no'th from Alabama and played with inconspicuous success in several failures and one or two successes. She was in "39 East" with Constance Binney and in "Nice People" with this same Katharine Cornell who is now the country's most glamorous star. Both girls were "bit" players then, representing the menacing generation at cocktail parties and offstage dances.

Now Tallulah comes back serenely poised as to manner, cerise and ivory tinted as to coloring, sophisticated and smart. There is nothing of the great actress about her. She makes no pretensions of being anything more than Tallulah Bankhead, in character or out. Which is in her favor. They tell me she screens well, but still is not popular in pictures. That, I assume, is largely because she is not known in America, despite the advertising her name has received.

Jilted at the Altar.

In "Forsaking All Others" Miss Bankhead plays Mary Clay, a young woman who is jilted at the altar for no good reason. No good reason, at least, save that the playwrights had to have the situation to write their play around.

Dillon Todd, the boy Mary was going to marry, meets Constance Barnes the night before he is due at the church. He had done the continent with Constance the year before, and there are purple memories. Overcome by something or other, Dillon marries Constance next morning and wires Mary he will be unable to meet her at the altar.

Next day Dillon is remorseful and comes sneaking back to have his engagement renewed. If Mary will only forgive him and let him have time to get a Mexican divorce he will marry her sure this time. And Mary, the idiot, agrees.

Turns the Tables.

Before the second wedding, however, Mary has time to think. Also, time to notice another boy, a smart young broker's clerk, Jeff Tingle. Jeff, being one of the patient kind, has never told his love. Now he speaks, and that's the end of the play. It is Dillon who is left waiting.

Miss Bankhead slips through "Forsaking All Others" gracefully, giving point to its smartest lines, a certain interesting beauty to its more striking pictures. She manages the lightly emotional scenes very well and is blessed with a definite sense of comedy. She never seems to care very much, and probably doesn't.

In the company is Fred Keating You may recall him as a magician who specialized in the disappearing canary trick. He made his living as a man of magic for some years. Now, experimentally, he has turned actor and does so well with this first part I expect him to go right on. Incidentally, he is a nephew of the Vincent Serrano your mother probably remembers.

He plays the timid Jeff who finally gets Tallulah. Cora Witherspoon, Donald MacDonald, Millicent Hanley are others. Edward Roberts and Frank Cavett are the authors.

Peggy Wood Is Back.

Come we now to another London favorite who was born a Brooklyn American and still is proud of it. She is Peggy Wood, and for the last three years she has been singing herself into the hearts of English playgoers, first in "Bitter Sweet," more recently in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

Peggy has come home to play a nice little domestic drama Owen Davis probably sketched out on the back of a golf score one day while waiting for the waiter to fetch the coffee. "A Saturday Night" it is called. [We certainly have gone in for dates this season: "A Saturday Night," "One Sunday Afternoon," "Dinner at Eight," "Four o'Clock," to mention only those current.]

In "A Saturday Night" Miss Wood pretends to be a matron of 38 or 39 which she does not look to be. It is her birthday and she is of a mind to celebrate. She will take her slightly dumb husband and go to the "Scandals." After the "Scandals" they will find a speakeasy and maybe have a highball and something awfully good and indigestible to eat.

Birthday Surprises.

Then things begin to happen to Peggy's birthday. Her young son, running away to play basketball, is returned home with a bloody head and a sprained ankle. Her 17 year old daughter definitely goes out to a speakeasy with a slick young man who means her no good and returns home reeling and slightly ill.

In the midst of which the dumb husband loses a chance for a new job he had been counting on and calls the party off, and a faithful friend of years' standing takes advantage of the occasion to suggest that, inasmuch as he always has loved Peggy, why shouldn't she get a divorce and marry him.

"A Saturday Night" does not add up very well as to logic. I, at least, do not believe that even a dumb husband would select this night to desert his wife, even temporarily.

However, I am a good deal of a crank about my stage stories.

Friends of Music Decide to Carry On

Temple of Music Some Time After Century of Progress Is Their Goal.

By Edward Moore.

the subscribers. The most explicit and most detailed comes from Miss Rutheda L. Pretzel of Glencoe, lecturer and music critic. She write:

Subscriber's Suggestion.

"Dear Mr. Moore: As a subscriber in the recently conducted drive of the Friends of Music for funds to build a Temple of Music, may I voice my opinion and that of my friends regarding the use of the funds raised, now that the Temple of Music plan has been discarded?

"Since we subscribed to the Temple of Music fund principally in loyalty to Dr. Stock, does it not seem entirely logical that the money subscribed be used now for the maintenance of our Chicago Symphony orchestra, which has an even closer bond with our eminent conductor than any Temple of Music?

"Such a gift, though still small, surely cannot wound Mr. Hamill, whose regrettable sense of delicacy has kept him from 'passing the hat' for lo, these many years. An organization such as the Friends of Music certainly should have as its primary aim the obstinate insistence that our great orchestra must not languish nor perish."

Keep Money for Good Cause.

Similar word has come to the Friends of Music. Lorado Taft, the sculptor, writes: "In no wise do I wish my membership fee returned. Please use this money for any purpose to which Mr. Stock will lend his name." This trend of thought is by no means confined to Chicago. Will Earhart, director of music of the Pittsburgh public schools, expresses himself thus: "One dollar from each is very little to contribute to so good a cause. Maybe some day you and I and other average human beings will learn what glories may be truly theirs and not wait for wealthy patrons. I like the idea."

Thaddeus P. Giddings, occupying a similar position in Minneapolis, sent a check for himself and his entire office staff. Walter H. Butterfield, president of the music supervisors' national conference, says that he will not only let his dollar remain but will advertise the continuance of the drive for members.

Similar indorsements have been received from the College of Arts and Sciences of Cornell university; from William Breach, supervisor of music in Buffalo, N. Y.; C. C. Birchard, Boston music publisher; Peter W. Dykema, formerly of the University of Wisconsin, now professor of music education of Teachers' college, Columbia university; Ada Bicking, state director of music education; Osbourne McConathy, formerly of Northwestern university, and many others.

Music Notes.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, the most famous pianist of our times, is visiting the Auditorium this afternoon. Notable musician, notable citizen of the world, he is now 72 years old, and it is forty-two years ago since he first started making trips to this country. During that time he has made eighteen tours, and those who have heard him are to be numbered literally by the hundreds of thousands.

This afternoon's recital will be an all-Chopin program, a great Polish composer's music interpreted by a great Polish pianist. The sonata will be that of the Funeral march, and the other more extended numbers will be the Fantasia, the C sharp minor Scherzo, the B flat minor Polonaise and the Grande Valse Brillante, opus 18. To these will be added various nocturnes, preludes, études, and mazurkas.

Goeta Ljungberg, the soprano singer of Wagnerian rôles of the Metropolitan Opera company, will appear at Orchestra hall this afternoon under the auspices of the American Daughters of Sweden, who will devote the proceeds of the concert to the charitable enterprises in which they are interested. A note from the organization adds that her name is pronounced Yoeta Yoongbairg, and that she will sing Elsa's Dream from "Lohengrin," also a group of songs in Swedish, and another in other languages. She will be assisted by Mischa Mischakoff, concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, who will play Sinding's Suite in A minor and a group of shorter numbers.

The Sunday afternoon series of concerts at the Art institute will go into a new phase beginning today. The chamber music series by George Dasch's ensemble players having been concluded, the rest of the season will be taken up by a list of artist concerts. That of today will be presented by Evelyn Wienke, soprano; Ruth Ray, violinist, and Walter Spry, pianist, appearing under the auspices of Mu Phi Epsilon. As is customary, there will be two presentations, at 3:15 and 4:30 o'clock, with identical programs.

The choir of Redeemer Evangelical Lutheran church, 6430 South Harvard avenue, will present the cantata "The Seven Last Words of Christ" next Sunday afternoon. W. Carl Meyer will conduct, the Lutheran Symphony orchestra will play, and Wilhelm Middelschulte will be at the organ. This performance is said to be the first time that the cantata will have been given in its complete form in Chicago. It will be repeated on the Tuesday evening following at Concordia Teachers' college, River Forest.

Vaudeville Bills

THE Chicago theater's stage program for the week consists of Kate Smith, the nationally famous radio singer and recent recruit to screen fame, with songs; Nat Brusiloff and orchestra, a radio band which accompanies Kate Smith on her radio programs; Cookie Bowers, comedian and impersonator recently featured at the Roxy theater, New York; Cherry and June Pirisser, acrobatic dancers; and Jack Miller, singer of popular ballads.

The new bill of vaudeville at the Palace theater includes:

Evelyn Brent—A screen star in a special sketch with Harry Fox and Joe De Bard. The music was provided by Nacio Herb Brown and Rodgers and Hart.

Harriet Hoctor — A well known dancer with a new set of modern ballets. Her work in the "Follies," "Scandals," and "Vanities" has led many to declare her the best American dancer.

Jay C. Flippen—A comedian well known to patrons of vaudeville and revue who has recently created a radio audience for himself with his "Flippancies" broadcasts.

Al Verdi—He describes himself as the "vandal of music." With him is a pretty violinist, Miss Thelma.

Colleano — A famous wire walker and member of a family that for generations has provided circuses and vaudeville with athletes.
